SUPREME COURT, DIVIDING ON PARTY LINES, KNOCKS OUT SENATE DISTRICTS

Judge Graves, in Lashly Case, Holds That Initiative and Referendum, by Implication, Deprived State Officials of Power to Redistrict State.

OLD LINES TO HOLD UNTIL NEXT CENSUS

Case Cannot Be Appealed to Supreme Court of U. S., and Legislature Cannot Be Called to Act on Matter—Elections Next Year.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 3.—The Supreme Court in banc today, in an opinion by Judge W. W. Graves, Democrat, held that adoption of the initiate and referendum amendment to the State Constitution in 1908 deprived the Governor, Attorney-General and Secretary of State of power to realign the senatorial districts of the State, thus overturning the senatorial redistricting promulgated by Gov. Hyde April 16 last, which had been accomplished by himself, Attorney-General Barrett and Secretary of State Becker, all Republicans. By that redistricting the Republican State officials had so aligner the counties that 20 of the 34 districts were regarded by them as safely Republican.

The court divided on this decision on straight political lines, Chief Justice J. T. Blair and Judges Woodson and Walker, all Democrats, concurring in the Graves opinion, while Judge Higbee, Republican, dissented and will file a dissenting opinion later, and Judge Elder, Republican, filed a separate opinion, which, while not listed as a dissenting opinion, holds a contrary view to that of Judge Graves. Judge David E. Blair, Republican, was absent, but probably will vote on the case later. His vote cannot overturn the result, however, as the Graves' opinion has four votes, a majority of the court.

Given in the Lashly Case.

This decision was given in a mandamus suit brought against Secretary of State Becker by Arthur V. Lashly, Democrat, former Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, and nominated by Democrats of the old Twenty-fifth State Senatorial district, comprising St. Louis, Franklin and Gasconade counties, for Democratic candidate for district delegate to the constitutional convention. Becker refused to accept and filed Lashly's certificate of nomination from the Twenty-fifth District, which, under the attempted redistricting, included five extreme Southeast Missouri counties. Lashly then brought suit in the Supreme Court to compel Becker to accept and file his certificate. In this effort he was supported by the Democratic State Committee, which had taken this means of testing the attempted redistricting, and Fred Williams of St. Louis and John I. Williams of Kansas City, former Supreme Judges, former Attorney-General John T. Barker and former Mayor Henry L. Jost of Kansas City, A. T. Dunn of Jefferson City and former State Senator Thomas R. R. Ely of Kennett and Wayne Ely of St. Louis, Democratic attorneys.

Old Districts to Prevail.

This court decision means that all district delegates to the constitutional convention and that all State Senators, until after the next decennial census, in the absence of adoption of a senatorial redistricting submitted by initiative, will be elected from the old senatorial districts, which were shaped in 1901 by Gov. Dockery, Secretary of State Cook and Attorney-General Crow, Democrats.

The fight in this case centered on whether section 57 of article 4 of the State Constitution (the initiative and referendum amendment) repealed by implication that part of section 7 of article 4 which conferred upon the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney-General power to redistrict the State for Senators in the event the Legislature failed

BROTHERS, IN SEPARATED PARTS OF CITY, HELD UP AND ROBBED

Each Delivering Clothing. One is Beaten and Relieved of $150 While Other Loses $30.

Brothers were victims of holdup men at widely separated points of the city last night. They were Gabriel Klearman of 3052 Sheridan avenue and Joseph Klearman of 2914 Gamble street. Gabriel, who owns a tailor shop, delivered a garment at 2315A Sullivan avenue at 6 p. m. He was walking through the hallway at the side of the house when three men knocked him down, beat and kicked him and robbed him of $150.

Forty minutes later Joseph Klearman reported that when he was delivering garments for his brother he was held up by two negroes at Pendleton avenue and North Market street and robbed of $30 and a box containing gingham frocks valued at $11.

LENA CLARKE COMMITTED TO INSANE ASYLUM IN FLORIDA

Former West Palm Beach Postmistress Was Acquitted of Murder Charge on Ground of Insanity.

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 3.—Judge Andrews today committed Lena Clarke, former postmistress at West Palm Beach, who yesterday was found not guilty, on grounds of insanity, of the charge of killing of Fred A. Miltimore here last August, to the State insane asylum.

It was the province of the Court either to commit her to an asylum or give her into the custody of friends. The commitment recites that the Court believes Miss Clarke to be capable of judging between right and wrong, and the asylum authorities are charged that should it develop the woman is not insane, she shall be held for Federal authorities. The Court, according to the order, has been officially informed that a charge involving the disappearance of postoffice funds has been filed against her.

JUDGE REFUSES TO DISMISS JURY IN ARBUCKLE TRIAL

Court Denies Request of Counsel for Both Sides and Will Wait Until 10 O'Clock This Morning.

17 BALLOTS SAID TO BE 11 TO 1 TO ACQUIT

One Woman Holding Out, Chief of Comedian's Counsel Says He Has Heard.

By the Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—The jury in the Arbuckle case was taken to its hotel at 10:37 p. m., after Miss Louise E. Winterburn was reported to have suffered a slight attack of illness. The jury will return to court at 10 a. m. tomorrow. The nature of Miss Winterburn's illness was not revealed.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—The jury in the Roscoe Arbuckle manslaughter case must reach a decision or continue its deliberations at least until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Judge Harold Louderback, the trial Judge, denied a request of counsel for both sides late today that the jury be discharged.

The Judge said he would consider tomorrow morning, if no verdict had been returned by that time, whether he would hold the jury longer. The request for its discharge was made on the ground that the jurors were "tired out and that it would be coersion to keep them balloting further." It was made at approximately 6 p. m., after the jurors had been out of the courtroom more than 25 hours and had spent nine hours in balloting or discussion.

The jury was given a recess of two hours for dinner at 6:30 p. m. Corridor gossip said 17 ballots had been taken, all 11 to 1 in favor of acquittal. The case was given into the hands of the panel at 4:15 Friday afternoon.

When the jury returned from the dinner recess it was taken into a new juryroom on the opposite side of the building from the one in which they deliberated formerly. This was "to get the jury away from the crowds," it was explained.

Reports on the Ballots.

Reports current today, that the jury stood 11 for acquittal and 1 for conviction, were so generally believed that the long-drawn-out session came as a surprise to the many spectators.

Arbuckle refused to say what he intended to do in case the verdict was in his favor, other than that he expected to leave San Francisco as quickly as possible.

"I'll get this thing settled before I make up my mind," he said.

Shows Some Nervousness.

He showed some periods of nervousness during the day, getting up and striding across the inclosed space by the Judge's seat, but this was not remarkable as even the court bailiffs and spectators found the monotony irksome. The Arbuckle party went out for dinner at the same telme as the jury.

After going into session Friday evening, the jury spent four and one-quarter hours in deliberation. While deliberating the bailiffs were summoned to the jury room twice, once to receive a request that the jurors be taken to dinner and the other time the jury asked that the doors of the room in the Hotel St. Francis, where Arbuckle is alleged to have injured Virginia Rappe, be brought to them for examination. They changed their minds, however, before the request could be met.

At 11 o'clock Friday night the panel was taken to its hotel and was returned to the jury room at 10 o'clock this morning.

The members were given a two-hour lunch recess at 12 o'clock, after having failed to reach a verdict in six and one-quarter hours of actual deliberations.

Following the lunch recess the jury returned to its deliberations, and for the first hour it gave no intimations of what it was doing.

Milton U'Ren, Assistant District Attorney, announced at 4 p. m. that he would send for Judge Harold Louderback, the trial Judge, and ask that the jury be dismissed "because it has been out for 24 hours without reaching a verdict."

"I think the jury has been out long enough to have reached some

"DISCOVER ITALY" GEN. DIAZ SAYS IN DINNER SPEECH

SOLDIER RECEIVED IN A SNOWSTORM

Roses Dropped in His Path as He Passes Under Arch—Italians Will Honor Visitor Today.

Gen. Armando Diaz, hero of the Piave where he rolled back the Austrian invasion of Italy in the late days of the war, came to St. Louis yesterday at 3:45 p. m. to remain until tonight at 9:30 o'clock as the guest of the city and particularly the Italian colony which has prepared to turn today into a festa in his honor. The program provides for a morning parade, an afternoon mass meeting and an evening dinner.

The General stepped from a special car which had brought him from New Orleans to Union and Lindell boulevards into a heavy snowstorm that swirled about him like the white gusts of his native Alps. It fell in melting wetness upon the bright banners of the assembled Italian societies, but the vigor of the "viva's" was matched only by the roar of the 19 guns, a General's salute, fired by Battery A.

Later, in speaking at a dinner in his honor at the St. Louis Club, with the members of the Italian and Citizens' Committees as his hosts, the Genreal referred to the snow, saying: "I was asked for my impression of the snowstorm through which I passed on my arrival. I wish to remind you that some of our troops fought the whole war 12,000 feet above sea level, in some valleys in which the wind had piled the snow 120 feet deep."

Makes 45-Minute Speech.

His speech at the club consumed 45 minutes, the longest according to Col. M. C. Buckey of the United States army, who is accompanying him, that the General has made in his flying trip which has carried him from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the Canadian border to the gulf. It was devoted to an expression of appreciation at his welcome here, "men, women and children greeting me in the snow," a recounting of Italy's contribution to the cause of the allies, tales of individual valor of Italian soldiers and Italian women, and expression of his hope for world peace through the disarmament congress. In this connection, he reminded that America and Italy, with 150,000,000 people, "have it in their power to win peace as they won war."

At the conclusion of his speech, which was in Italian, regiven to his audience by an interpreter, sentence by sentence, the General said in excellent English:

"Now, gentlemen——"

He was interrupted by a burst of applause and cheers. When the demonstration subsided, he continued, "I don't speak English, but I try in your language to thank you very much."

"Italy, like America," he said, "wishes a firm peace, no more war. I have a faith that the conference in Washington will reach far towards a solution. We must remember well that before disarming armies we first must disarm hearts and spirits. When all shall be convinced that there is something better than arming for the destruction of one another, then our arms will fall from our hands. We shall then proceed to a better future and a better humanity. I have faith in this and above all, because American with 105,000,000 people, and Italy with 40,000,000, fast-growing, shall be heard and, if not, shall impose their belief. We must win peace like we won war. My faith is sincere for other reasons. I see underneath the practical spirit of you Americans a deep sentiment, idealism and poetry. Under the exterior of Italians, sentiment, idealism and poetry there lies a deep practical sense for action well thought out. I would call you the Latins among the Anglo-Saxons. I would call the Italians the Anglo-Saxons among the Latins."

The General recited with fervor stories to illustrate the individual devotion of Italian men and women

CONFERENCE TAKES RECESS OF THREE DAYS

Word From Tokio Is Awaited on Naval Limitation Plan, but Expectation Is That Settlement Will Be Reached on 5-5-3 Ratio.

By CHARLES MICHELSON
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—In the arms conference committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions today, Great Britain, France and Japan promised to give up their less important leaseholds in China, the American delegation announced that important progress had been made toward settlement of the Far Eastern problem, and the Chinese delegation expressed its pleasure over the "generous offer" of the Powers, which have vied with each other in the grab at her expense.

Everybody seemed to be happy despite the fact that the major part of the statements of Mr. Hanihara, spokesman for Japan, and Mr. Balfour, who made Great Britain's offer, is devoted to an explanation of why neither Power can give up the really important leaseholds of South Manchuria and Kowloon. The happiness of all concerned apparently is based on the previous knowledge that England and Japan proposed to sit tight in Hong Kong and Port Arthur.

Unless China and Japan reach an agreement on Shantung, England will not even withdraw from Wei Hai Wei, as exclusively announced in the Post-Dispatch in the opening days of the conference.

Recess Until Wednesday.

This was the outstanding development of the conference today, and was followed by an adjournment until Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Meanwhile, negotiations were at a standstill regarding the real nub of the arms conference—the proposed capital ship ratio of 5-5-3—awainting further word from Tokio following the conference last night among Secretary Hughes, Mr. Balfour and Baron Kato.

The feeling of optimism that a satisfactory settlement of the naval question will be reached was obvious today in conference circles generally. Spokesmen for the American delegation were quite optimistic, but declined to throw any additional light upon last night's conference.

While Japan cannot be said to have actually accepted the capital ship ratio proposed in the American program, it was made clear that, after all, the Japanese are primarily interested in the national security of their country; that they have no purpose of aggression whatsoever, and that, if adequate compensations are forthcoming from other directions, such, for example, as effective guarantees from Great Britain and the United States, the 5-5-3 ratio will meet with the approval of the Nipponese delegation.

In this connection, the question of Pacific island fortifications continued to be the subject of discussion today, but nobody with authority to speak for any of the delegations was prepared to make a

HARDING'S ASSOCIATION IDEA GIVEN TO JOHNSON

Senator Absorbs Two Hours of Conversation for Use in Speeches in California.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The proposed association of nations, with the obligations such an organization might impose on the United States, was discussed at a conference between President Harding and Senator Johnson of California today. For two hours this and other collateral matters were considered.

Senator Johnson departed tonight for his home state. He will be a candidate for re-election next year. It appears he anticipated being called on to make speeches during his visit and desired to be letter perfect on the nebulous suggestion before attempting to enlighten his constituents or outlining his own attitude. For that reason Senator Johnson went to the White House, took luncheon with the President and absorbed whatever information could be obtained regarding the association of nations.

While Senator Johnson would say nothing relative to his conference with the President or the first-hand impressions received of the new segregation of powers, it is known he has not modified, in any manner, the position he has assumed toward the League of Nations covenant.

In Administration circles it is said tonight, the President made it clear to Senator Johnson, as he has done to other recent visitors, that the association of nations is wholly a problem for future solution. It has assumed neither form nor fabric and no time is set for its development or initiation.

OFFICIAL TEXT OF POWERS DISCUSSION ON RETURN OF LEASED CHINESE TERRITORY

China's Demands and Attitude of France, Japan and Britain Toward Solution Explained.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. — The communique issued after today's meeting of the armament conference's Far Eastern Committee follows:

"The committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions met this morning, Dec. 3, at 11 o'clock, in the Pan-American building. All the delegates were present except Ambassador Shidehara and Baron Kato.

"The committee discussed the question of leased areas in China.

"Mr. Koo stated that the existence of the leased territories in China was due, in the original instance, to the aggressions of Germany, whose forcible occupation of part of Shantung province constrained the Chinese Government to grant a lease for 99 years of the Bay of Kiaochow, in the Shantung province, on March 6, 1898. This was closely followed by a demand on the part of Russia for the lease of the Liaotung peninsula, in which are found the ports of Port Arthur and Dalny, along with the demand for the right of building a railway to be guarded by Russian soldiers traversing the Manchurian province from Port Arthur and Dalny to join the trans-Siberian railway and Vladivostok.

Cause of Russo-Japanese War.

"This later was the cause of the Russo-Japanese war, which resulted in 1905 in the transfer of those territories to Japan, with the consent of China. Following the lease of Kiaochow Bay to Germany and that of Port Arthur and Dalny to Russia, France obtained from China on April 22, 1898, the lease of Kwang Chowan, on the coast of Kwangtung province, for 99 years, and Great Britain the lease, also for 99 years, of an extension of Kowloon and the adjoining territory and waters close to Hong Kong, on June 9, 1898, and the lease 'for so long a period as Port Arthur should remain in the occupation of Russia,' of the port of Wei Hai Wei of the coast of Shantung on July 1, 1898. Both Great Britain and France based their claims for the leases on the ground of the necessity of preserving the balance of power in the Far East.

"If he might be permitted to go into the history of the question, he might add that, while the measures and extent of control by the lessee powers over the leased territories vary in different cases, the leases themselves are all limited to a fixed period of years, expressly or impliedly; they are not transferable to a third power without the consent of China. Though the exercise of administrative rights over the territories leased is relinquished by China to the lessee power during the period of the lease, the sovereignty of China over them is reserved in all cases. As is stated in the beginning, these lease-holds were granted by China with the sole purpose of maintaining the balance of power in the Far East, not so much between China and the other Powers, but between other Powers themselves concerning China. These are all creatures of compact different from cessions both in fact and in law.

"Twenty years had elapsed since

JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES WRITES OF THE DIFFICULT REPARATIONS PROBLEM

BRIEF MORATORIUM HELD TO BE NECESSARY TO GIVE THE ALLIES TIME TO THINK Expert Suggests Payment of Half of Sum Due by Germany on Jan. 15 and Other Half March 15 While Negotiations Proceed.

BY JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES.

At one time Chief of the British Financial Commission to the Paris peace conference and author of the famous book in which the impossibility of the Versailles reparations demands was first proved.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Cockspur st., London, S. W.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A rumor has occupied the press this week to the effect that the British Government has been considering a proposal to allow Germany a two-year moratorium for reparation payments after which interval the present demands will revive. The plan was fathered by Sir John Bradbury, principal British representative on the Reparation Commission. But as he has repudiated its parentage very grimly, it is of unknown origin.

I agree with Sir John Bradbury in thinking it a bad plan. France would receive nothing whatever during a period in which she most needs help, whilst the uncertainty about what would happen at the end of two years would render it difficult for Germany to put her finances in order meanwhile.

The time has arrived when we must drop make-believe. Germany's finances will not recover, and the allies will not be paid until their demands have been fixed at a sum within her capacity to pay and which make it worth her while to work and scheme to pay. The two-year moratorium sounds like the proposal of some one who is more anxious to save his face than to get out of Germany a sum, moderate, but well worth having, which she can in fact pay.

"Moratorium for Thinking."

We must not postpone a final settlement for two years more, however great the temptation to all concerned to put it off until some one else is in office. But some measure of delay we do, indeed, require. The payments of January, February and April are now at hand. They find us procrastinating to the last gasp without a plan. Meanwhile, as the appointed days approach, it grows clear that to go on means one kind of a crisis with Germany and to step back another kind of a crisis with France. Therefore, a brief moratorium we must have, not so much to give Germany time to pay as to give ourselves time to think.

The present policy of His Majesty's Government is, as Winston Churchill expressed it last week: "nonsensical froth" and no one knows it better than themselves. But they need time. What ought they to do?

They ought to tell Germany that on January 15 she must pay half the present demand—that is, 250 million gold marks, and the balance, mainly, a further 250 million gold marks on March 15; and that the payments due on February 15 and April 15 will be held in suspense pending yet one more conference.

If this could be arranged as a pendant to the Washington conference and with America's representation, so much the better. But if America does not care to participate we must do our best without her.

About Germany's capacity to pay, I hold now the same views that I published in the New York World and the Post-Dispatch last August. I believe, if we chose to clear her out completely, she can pay one January installment from her reserves of foreign currency accumulated for the purpose of future trade; and perhaps the February instalment, too; but that, failing of a foreign loan, she cannot pay these sums without a crisis, and that if she pays them she cannot pay also the installment of April.

Two Accomplishments at Stroke.

How are we to persuade France and Belgium to accept this limited moratorium? It is all very well for Great Britain to be generous about the January installment; for no appreciable part of it is coming her way in any case, Belgium being entitled to the lion's share. Recognizing this, Great Britain will be acting in her own, as well as in the world's interests, if she admits that it is worth some sacrifice to avoid at one stroke a crisis in Germany and a quarrel with France.

At this moment there is held in suspense, out of what Germany paid in August last, a sum of 450,000,000 gold marks due to Great Britain under a financial agreement which France has refused so far to ratify. The view of the British treasury that they are fully entitled to this sum, and that France is behaving badly in trying to withhold it, is right beyond dispute, as I could show if I had space for the details. Moreover, the Chancellor of the Exchequer needs this money for his budget. Nevertheless, I believe we should act wisely by conceding something, not to French rights, but to French difficulties.

I suggest, therefore, that half of the sum due from Germany on Jan. 15, of which I advise the postponement of payment, should be made good to France and to Belgium by Great Britain returning for division between them an equivalent amount out of the sums held in suspense, as explained above; and, further, that Great Britain should undertake that, in the event of the installments of Feb. 15 and April 15 being remitted, such remission should be at the expense of the British claims against Germany, and not at the expense of the other allies.

And further, if thereby we could secure from France an unaggrieved compliance with our proposal, Great Britain ought to be prepared to ratify the Wiesbaden agreement even without the qualifications Sir John Bradbury has very probably recommended as necessary to preserve the rights of the allies other than France.

France's Recent Agreements.

France has got into bad habits lately about her agreements with us and others. In her action about the financial agreement of Aug. last, about the Wiesbaden agreement, about the Angora agreement and about others also she has a bad case, if we insist on our rights. Nor has she a lawful defense of her successive invasions of Germany's territory towards which we have been sometimes protestant and sometimes compliant.

These incidents cause vast irritation against France in Whitehall circles and beyond. But they flow not unnaturally from the temper of the Versailles treaty itself. And we who committed for our own supposed advantage the crime of claiming pensions, contrary to our pledged word, are not entitled to take a high line.

Moreover, we have systematically deceived France for some time past about our real attitude toward her present demands. Let us, therefore, now make up our minds that we are not going to get much for ourselves out of this business; and that it is our duty to ease for France, in every legitimate way, the critical disillusionment still in front of her from the responsibility of which we are not free.

Such suggestions may be optimistic. Perhaps they are more than we can offer and less than France can accept. But they are not like some others, inherently impracticable. I do not see a better way out, considering the hole we have got into.

'MYSTERY' WIRELESS STATIONS IN CHINA

Presence of 'Listening In' Plants on Moscow Propaganda Revealed by Chinese Protests.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG.

A London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—China's protest against the action of America, Great Britain and Japan in erecting certain wireless stations on her territory without her consent, has revealed the fact that at least two of these are "mystery stations" and were established to "listen in" on the propaganda sent out by the Bolsheviki station in Moscow.

One of these mystery stations is said to be British-owned. It is several hundred miles from the Afghanistan border, and is understood to have been placed there at the orders of either the Indian or British Government to be able to tap messages wirelessed from Moscow to the Soviet Government's agents in India and the middle east. For many months the question of Bolsheviki propaganda in India and the middle east militated against an Anglo-Russian trade agreement, and Britain has only recently notified the Moscow Government that it was not keeping its word in respect to calling off its propaganda agents.

If this and one other station which the Post-Dispatch was informed had been used to "listen in" on the Moscow wireless are abolished, there will be considerable difficulty in keeping track of Moscow wireless propaganda in Turkestan, India and the middle eastern corridor.

By maintaining these stations as receiving and not sending stations, it is said Moscow was kept completely in the dark about their location. The subject of all these protested stations has engaged the attention of experts in the British delegation for the last two or three days.

China only protested against two British stations. But she protested against five American and 11 Japanese. The British contend that at least three of the stations in China are covered by treaty with China.

CONSIDERATIONS BEHIND JAPANESE STAND EXPLAINED

Their Question Is, Are We to Be Isolated Politically or Be One of 5 Big Powers in Spirit as in Name?

WANT AGREEMENT ON FAR EAST POLICY

Desire Fortification Understanding With U. S. With Respect to Navy Ratio, to Relieve Home Anxiety.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Considerations which occupy the minds of official Japanese, through representatives at the Washington conference, and which form the background of practical questions involved in percentage of ships under an armament limitation agreement, were said tonight to be summarized in the following proposition:

"Is Japan to be isolated politically or is she to be linked up compactly with other nations, with a full recognition of her desire to be known actually as one of the five great Powers in spirit as well as name?"

Developments in the discussions of naval ratio, it was said, show that Japan is looking at this question from a broader standpoint than a mere issue as between 60 or 70 per cent in tonnage.

The Japanese also are apparently prepared to admit that there are no sound objections on the part of other nations to continuance of the Anglo-Japanese alliance which for so many years has connected them with the Western world, but, if it is to go, would like to see as a permanent substitute a definite agreement between Great Britain, the United States and Japan on questions of policy in the Far East.

Modern Japan's Tendency.

The whole tendency of modern Japan is described as being a very earnest desire to co-operate with the United States and banish any atmosphere of suppression which during recent years may have existed between the two countries.

Japanese recognize the delicacy of any effort on their part to suggest that the United States no longer place fortifications in colonial possessions in Far Eastern waters, but the opinion is expressed that, if a tripartite agreement, substantial in nature, could cope with an American willingness not to fortify further in the Far East, the Japanese people would have a sense of security which, if it did not compensate for a Japanese yielding on warship tonnage, would at least relieve the anxieties of the Japanese people.

The view was put forward today in a responsible circle that the expected visit of Lloyd George to Washington might have a bearing upon some effort to build up a triplex accord between the three great naval Powers as a substitute for the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The impression was given that such an understanding might well include the main features of agreements already concluded concerning the Far East.

The immediate question of warship tonnage is believed to be not without a relation to the home political situation in Japan. Advices from Tokio show that the Seiyuka, or Government party, has lost very heavily in recent elections in the large cities.

Party System Developing.

The party system is rapidly developing in Japan and the Seiyukai, it is believed, will want to go before the people with a record of results obtained at the Washington conference.

A yielding by Japan on the matter of ratio without advantages in the way of security in other directions would, it is believed, have an unfavorable influence upon the future of the Government party.

The assassination of Premier Hara is often referred to these days by Japanese as having been genuinely a loss to the nation, because he had succeeded in harmonizing the liberal views of the civic elements of the empire with the more militaristic conception of influential circles grouped around the army and navy.

The removal of the Prime Minister throws a great responsibility on the shoulders of Baron Kato, who is today trying to solve the great problem of meeting the desires of a modern and ambitious Japanese without going so far as to endanger the success of the Washington conference.

Potential War Power.

Making what was considered a direct allusion to the naval ratio question, Sennosuke Yokata, president of the Legislative Bureau of the Japanese Cabinet, in an address here today declared the true and impartial spirit of disarmament should take into consideration not only the existing strengths of navies, but also the potential powers of each country.

Yokata expressed the opinion that, if the present conference neglected the importance of potential power, by which he meant general industrial capacity in supplying war material in time of emergency, it might meet with the disapproval, if not the derision, of posterity.

The comparative inferiority of Japan in ability to replace her warships in time of emergency was touched upon last week by Vice Admiral Kanji Kato, chief naval adviser to the Japanese delegation, when in an interview he outlined the Japanese reasons for desiring a 70 per cent ratio of capital ships as against the 60 per cent set down in the American proposals.

Hara's Right-Hand Man.

Yokata, who was regarded as the right-hand man of Premier Hara, who was recently assassinated, is returning soon to Japan and his address today was made at a farewell luncheon which he gave in honor of about 60 Americans and Japanese. He is one of the leaders of the Seiyukai or Government party and it is reported in Washington that he may become a member of the new Takahashi Cabinet on his return to Tokio. It is believed also that, on his return, he will proceed to clarify governmental and public opinion concerning the status and aspirations of the Washington conference.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.

IF we are to get to any fundamental improvement in the present relations of nations, if we are to achieve that change of heart which is needed as the fundamental thing for the establishment of a world peace, then we must look the facts of international friction squarely in the face. It is no good pretending there is no jar when there is a jar. This business of the world peace effort, of which the Washington conference is now the center, is not to smooth over international difficulties; it is to expose, examine, diagnose and cure them.

Now, here is this Franco-British clash, a plain quarrel and one very disturbing to the American audience. The Americans generally do not like this quarrel. They are torn between a very strong traditional affection for the French and a kind of liking for at least one or two congenial things about the British. They would like to hear no more of it, therefore. They just simply want peace. But there the quarrel is. Was it an avoidable quarrel? Or was it inevitable? Perhaps it is something very fundamental to the European situation. Perhaps if we analyze it and probe right down to the final causes of it, we may learn something worth while for the aims and ends of the Washington conference.

Now let us get a firm hold upon one very important fact, indeed. This clash is a clash between the present French Government and present British Government, but it is not a clash between all the French and all the British. It is not an outbreak of national antipathy or any horrible, irreconcilable thing of that sort. There are elements in France strongly opposed to the French Government upon the issues raised in this dispute. There is a section of the English press fantastically on the "French" side and bitterly opposed even to the public criticism of the public speeches of the French Premier in England. The party politics of both France and Britain and what is worse, these bitter animosities that center upon political personalities, have got into this dispute.

"Disputes Turns on Germany."

It may help to clear the issue if we disregard the attitude of the two Governments in naming the sides to the dispute and if, instead of speaking of the "French" or the "British" sides, we speak of the "keep Germany down" and the "give Germany a chance" sides or better, if we call them the "insisters," who insist upon the uttermost farthing of repayment and penitence from Germany, and the "relievers," who do not. For it is upon Germany that the whole dispute turns.

There is a very powerful "insister" party in Great Britain; there is a growing "reliever" party in France. And while France has been steadily "insister" since the armistice, Britain and the British Government have changed round from "insister" to "reliever" in the last year or so. This change has produced extraordinary strains and recriminations between French and British political groups and individuals, as such changes of front must always do. Such disputes often make far more noise than deep and vital national misunderstandings and it is well that the intelligent observer, and particularly the American observer should distinguish the note of the disconcerted party man in a rage, from the note of genuine patriotic anger.

The beginnings of the present trouble are to be found in the Versailles conference. There the only "relievers" seem to have been the American representatives. Those were the days of the British khaki election, when "hang the Kaiser" and "make the Germans pay" were the slogans that carried Mr. Lloyd George to power. For about four months the dispute went on between moderation and overwhelming demands. America stood alone for moderation. The British insisted upon the uttermost farthing at least as strenuously as the French, and it was Gen. Smuts, of all people, who added the last straw to the intolerable burden of indebtedness that was then piled upon vanquished and ruined Germany. And both America and Braitain were parties to the arrangements that give France the power, the Shylock right, of carrying into Germany and disintegrating her more and more, if Germany failed to keep up with the impossible payments that were then fixed upon her.

"France's Position Legal."

The position of the French Government in this business is, therefore, a perfectly legal and logical one. France can adhere, as M. Briand says she will, to the treaty of Versailles, she can flout and disregard any disposition of the Washington conference to qualify or revise that treaty, and the British Government, in a hopelessly embarrassing and illogical position, can appeal only to the hard logic of reality. Britain is much more dependent upon her overseas trade than France, and so the British have earlier realized the enormous injury that the social and economic breakdown of Russia has done and the still more enormous injury that the breaking down of Central European civilization will do. "You are quite within your rights," these newly converted "relievers" say to the obdurate "insisters," "but you will wreck all Europe." That idea of the possible destruction of civilization has not yet entertained so many minds in France as it has in Britain. Germany is nearer to France than to Britain and the fear of a renascent and vindictive Germany is greater in France than in Britain. In the French mind the possibility of a German invasion for revenge 20 years hence still overshadows the possibility of an economic breakdown in a year or two years' time. The British are nearer the breakdown and further from the Germans. That is the reality of this French-British clash.

Upon that reality bad temper, party feeling, personal spites, irrational prejudices are building up a great mass of nasty, quarrelsome matter. And the French Government and the French nationalist majority are pressing on the naval and military preparations that distinctly threaten Britain. It is no good pretending that they do not do so when they do. The French submarines are aimed at Britain.

"Alliance Only Hope."

Empty civilities between France and Britain are of no value in a case of this sort. Both countries are being worried by their infernal politicians and both are in a state of financial distress and raw nerves. It is not a time when deliberations and clear reasoning are easy. But when we get down to the fundamentals of the case, we find that the antagonism comes out to these two propositions that are not necessarily irreconcilable: (1) That Germany, for the good of the whole world, must not be destroyed further, but, instead, assisted to keep upon her feet (relievers), and (2) that Germany must never more become a danger to France (insisters).

And these two propositions are completely reconcilable and this particular clash can be entirely cured and ended by one thing and by one thing only, a binding alliance, watched and sustained by a standing commission, of France, Germany, Britain, America and possibly Italy and Spain, to guarantee France and Germany from further invasions and internal interference, if France follows the dictates of her better nature and the advice of her wiser citizens, foregoes her impossible claims and lets up on Germany from now on. And from no country can the initiative of such an alliance come more effectively than from the United States of America, the universal creditor, who can bring home to France, as no other Power can, the beauty and desirability of financial mercifulness.

I submit that these are the broad lines, the elements, the A B C of the present situation, and that there is nothing whatever between France and Britain that is not entirely secondary and subordinate to this issue between insistence and relief.

9-POWER AGREEMENT IN FAR EAST FORECAST

French Conception of Settlement Which Would Unite Nations for Peace Without Treaty.

By LINCOLN EYRE,

Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Peace in the Far East will be guaranteed, not by a triple or quadruple alliance sealed by formal treaty, but by agreement among all the nine Powers having interests in the Pacific to formulate by individual executive declaration their common resolve to prevent war through all the means at the disposal of the respective governments.

That at least is the French conception of a settlement rendering unnecessary the Anglo-Japanese pact, as defined by a high authority this afternoon. France would oppose any arrangement to which she was not a party, and so presumably would Italy. Therefore there would have to be at least a quintuple alliance and this would be unsatisfactory to Holland, Belgium, Portugal and China herself, none of which want to be left out in the cold.

Moreover, any treaty binding the nations concerned to preserve peace in Asia might be rejected by the American Senate and possibly even by European legislatures, whereas an expression of governmental policy need not be submitted to these bodies.

In French circles dissatisfaction at the slowness of the conference progress is voiced freely. Japanese and British procrastination are held responsible for much delay. The adjournment of committee meetings until Wednesday owing to Balfour's absence in New York is deprecated and the British tendency to retard important decisions until the advent of Premier Lloyd George arouses considerable criticism among the French.

Lloyd George's coming, it is felt, will prolong the conference well into January.

OFFICIAL TEXT OF POWERS' ANNOUNCEMENT ON CHINESE AFFAIRS

then and conditions had entirely altered. With the elimination of German menace in particular, an important disturbing fact to the peace of the Far East had been removed. Russia had equally disappeared from the scene and it could be hoped with confidence that she would eventually return, not as the former aggressive Power, but as a great democratic nation.

"The misrule of the Manchu dynasty which had aggravated the situation had also disappeared. The very fact that this conference was being held at Washington for the purpose of arriving at a mutual understanding on the part of the Powers, indicates an added reason for dispensing with the necessity of maintaining the balance of power in the Far East, which was the principal ground of the original claims of the different Powers. In the absence of that necessity the Chinese delegation believed the time had come for the interested Powers to relinquish their control over the territories leased to them.

"The existence of such leased territories had greatly prejudiced China's territorial and administrative integrity because they were all situated upon the strategical points along the Chinese territory. These foreign leaseholds had besides hampered her work of national defense by constituting in China a virtual imperium in imperio, that is, an empire within the same empire.

"There was another reason which the Chinese delegation desired to point out. The shifting conflict of interests of the different lesser Powers had involved more than once in complications of their own. It would be sufficient to refer here to the Russo-Japanese war, which was caused by the Russian occupation of Port Arthur and Dalny. The Kiaochow leaseholds brought upon the Far East the hostilities of the European war.

Equal Opportunity Principle.

"Furthermore, none of this territory was utilized with a view of economic domination over the vast adjoining regions as points d'appuio for developing spheres of interest to the detriment of the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in China. In the interest of not only China, but that of all nations, especially for the peace of the Far East, the Chinese delegation asked for the annulment and an early termination of these leases. But, pending their termination, this would be demilitarized, that is, their fortifications dismantled and the lessee nations to undertake that they will not make use of their several leased areas for military purposes, either as naval bases or military operations of any kind whatsoever.

"The Chinese delegation were, however, fully conscious of the obligation which would fall upon them after the termination of the leaseholds. The Chinese Government would be prepared to respect and safeguard the legitimately vested interests in the different Powers in those territories.

France's Position Set Out.

"M. Viviani spoke for France as follows:

"'After havink taken note of the request made by the Chinese delegation, Dec. 1, 1921, the French delegation states that the Government of the republic is ready to join in the collective restitution of territories leased to various Powers in China, it being understood that this principle once admitted, and all private rights being safeguarded, the conditions and time limits of the restitution shall be determined by agreement between the Chinese Government, and each of the Governments concerned.'

Position of Japanese.

"Hanihara stated the position of Japan as follows:

"'The leased territories held by Japan at present are Kiaochau and Kwantung province, namely, Port Arthur and Dairen. It is characteristic of Japan's leased territory that she obtained them, not directly from China, but as successor to other Powers at considerable sacrifice in men and treasure. She succeeded Russia in the leasehold of Kwantung province with the express consent of China and she succeeded Germany in the leasehold of Kiaochow under the treaty of Versailles.

"'As to Kiao-chow, the Japanese Government have already declared on several occasions that they would restore leased territory to China. We are prepared to come to an agreement with China on this basis. In fact, there are now going on conversations between representatives of Japan and China regarding this question initiated through the good offices of Mr. Hughes and Mr. Balfour, the result of which it is hoped will be a happy solution of the problem. Therefore, the question of the leased territory of Kiao-chow is one which properly calls for separate treatment.'

Kwantung Province.

"'The only leased territory, therefore, which remains to be discussed at the conference so far as Japan is concerned, is Kwantung province, namely, Port Arthur and Dairen. As to that territory, the Japanese delegates desire to make it clear that Japan has no intention at present to relinquish her important rights she has lawfully acquired and at no small sacrifice. The territory in question forms a part of Manchuria, a region where, by reason of its close proximity to Japan's territory, more than anything else, she has vital interest in that which relates to her economic life and national safety.'

"'This fact was recognized and assurance was given by the American, British and French Governments at the time of the formation of the international consortium that these vital interests of Japan in the region in question shall be safeguarded.

"'In the leased territory of Kwantung province there reside no less than 65,000 Japanese, and the commercial and industrial interests they have established there are of such importance and magnitude to Japan that they are regarded as an essential part of her economic life.

"'It is believed that this attitude of the Japanese delegation toward the leased territory of Kwantung is not against the principles of the resolution adopted on Sept. 21."

Balfour States British View.

"Mr. Balfour pointed out that leased territories, though nominally all described under the same title, were held under very different circumstances. The Japanese delegation had already indicated that Shantung and Manchuria, respectively, were held on entirely different bases and must be considered from different points of view. Great Britain had two different kinds of leases, as he thought the Chinese delegation itself would admit must be held to stand on a different footing one from the other. Mr. Balfour referred first to the leased territory of Kowloon extension. Why, he asked, was it considered necessary that the leased territory of Kowloon should come under the same administration as Hongkong? The reason was that, without the leased territory, Hongkong as perfectly indefensible and would be at the mercy of any enemy possessing modern artillery.

"He hoped that he would carry the conference with him when he asserted that the safeguarding of the position of Hongkong was not merely a British interest, but one in which the whole world was concerned. He was informed that Hongkong was easily first among the ports of the world, exceeding in this respect Hamburg before the war, Antwerp and New York.

British Colony of Hongkong.

"Mr. Balfour then read the following extract from 'The United States Government Commercial Handbook of China':

"'The position of the British colony of Hong Kong in the world's trade is unique and without parallel. It is a free port except for a duty on wine and spirits; it has relatively few important industries; it is one of the greatest shipping centers in the world; it is the distributing point for all the enormous trade of South China and about 20 per cent of the entire foreign commerce of China. The conditions of Hong Kong in its relation to commerce are in every way excellent, and the Government centers all its efforts on fostering trade, while the future is being anticipated by increased dock facilities, the dredging of the fairways and other improvements. The merchants, both native and foreign, give special attention to the assembling and transhipping of merchandise to and from all the ports of the world, and with the world-wide steamship connections at Hong Kong, the necessity of re-transhipment at other ports is reduced to a minimum. Hong Kong is the financial center of the East.'

Hong Kong Administration.

"Mr. Balfour said he could not add anything to this perfectly impartial testimony to the conditions of absolute equality of nations under which the affairs of Hong Kong are administered, and the motives on which they are conducted. The lease of the Kowloon extension had been obtained for no other reason except to give security to the Port of Hong Kong and it would be a great misfortune if anything should occur which was calculated to shake the confidence of the nations using this great open port with security. He said he hoped to no more than explain that Kowloon extension was in a different category and must be dealt with in a different spirit from those leased territories which had been acquired for totally different motives.

Question of Wei Hai Wei.

"Mr. Balfour then passed to the question of Wei Hai Wei. The acquisition by Great Britain of this lease had been part of the general movement for obtaining leased territories in 1898 in which Russia, Germany and France, as well as Great Britain, had been concerned. The motive which had animated the Germans in acquiring Kiao-chow had been largely to secure economic domination. The motive of the British Government, on the other hand, in acquiring the lease of Wei Hai Wei had been connected with resistance to the economic domination of China by other Powers; in fact, it had been based on a desire for the maintenance of the balance of power in the Far East, with a view to the maintenance of the policy of the open door, and had been intended as a check to the predatory action of Germany and Russia.

"Mr. Balfour laid emphasis on the fact that the covenant of July 1, 1898, conferring the lease, gave no economic rights or advantages to Great Britain. There had been no question of its being a privileged port of entry for British commerce, nor for the establishment of British commercial rights to the exclusion or diminution of the rights of any other Power. In fact on April 20, 1898, Great Britain had announced that 'England will not construct any railroad communication from Wei Hai Wei and the district leased therewith into the interior of the province of Shantung.'

Attitude of the British.

"As regards the attitude of the British Government to the request of the Chinese delegation for an abrogation of these leases, Mr. Balfour stated he had very little to add to, and he did not wish to qualify, the conditions contained in the statement just made by M. Viviani, which represented very much the spirit in which the British Government approached the question. The British Government would be perfectly ready to return Wei Hai Wei to China as part of a general arrangement intended to confirm the sovereignty of China and to give effect to the principle of the 'open door.' This surrender, however, could only be undertaken as part of some such general arrangement, and he spoke with his Government behind him when he said that on these conditions he was prepared to give up the rights which we had acquired. The British Government's policy was to make use of the surrender of Wei Hai Wei to assist in securing a settlement of the question of Shantung. If agreement could be reached on this question, the British Government would not hesitate to do their best to promote a general settlement by restoring Wei Hai Wei to the Central Government of China.

"After he had heard the sentiments expressed by M. Viviani, Mr. Balfour and Mr. Harihari, Mr. Koo expressed on behalf of the Chinese delegation his sincere thanks to them for the spirit which had guided them and he hoped that this question would be discussed at another opportunity.

"Further discussion of this matter was reserved. The committee adjourned to meet on Wednesday, next, the seventh of December, at 11 o'clock a. m."

French Offer Explained.

M. Viviani commenting tonight upon the question of lease territories in China and the action of France today in the Far Eastern committee, said:

"The French Government, in accepting the invitation of the United States to join in a conference to assist China in adapting her institutions to more modern forms, was determined to act generously. Consequently, it was a pleasure for me to say today that France was quite prepared to give up the territory of Kwang Chow, leased to her by China in 1898 at the time Great Britain received Kowloon and Wei Hai Wei, Germany, Shantung, and Russia Port Arthur and Dalny.

"Our offer is contingent on three things:

"First, that other Powers do the same; second, that we arrange the terms of surrender with China; third, that the territories restored to China shall not be given to any other Power. As neither of the other Powers were prepared to give back all the territories held by them leased at the same time as ours, our offer may be said to be in suspense. The discussions are to be continued next week."

JAPAN'S QUESTIONS AND U. S. ANSWERS ON NAVAL FIGURES

Some of the Official Totals Involved in Exchanges Between Experts on Ratio Are Given.

HOW AMERICANS ARRIVED AT 5-5-3

Tables Set Out Naval 'Relatives' of Two Powers and Give Other Estimates Made on Problem.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The Associated Press is able today to present some of the official figures involved in the exchanges between the American and Japanese experts over the "5-5-3" ratio proposal and the Japanese counter claim for a "10-10-7" status.

In submitting their original questionnaire to the American experts asking for explanation of the Hughes proposal on seven specific points, the Japanese officers included this question:

"Explain the relation between the replacement ratio of '50-50-30' and the existing ratio of '60-50-30' respectively of Great Britain, the United States and Japan."

This was supplemented by the inquiry:

"Explain means by which the existing strength of the British navy has been calculated at 600,000 tons."

America's Answer.

In answer the American experts said:

"Although Great Britain has not laid the keels of her four new Hoods, and the Japanese have not laid the keels of the Takao and the Atago, they have spent money on all. In order to be entirely fair, therefore, these ships were included in the lists of their respective nations with the consequent increase in their relative strengths. When this was done, the tonnage measure of naval strength between the United States and Japan was as follows:

"United States, 1,118,650; Japan, 588,800. Ratio, United States, 100 per cent; Japan, 53 per cent."

As to the "60-50-30" existing strength ratio calculation the American answer explained:

"The war conditions caused Great Britain to suspend her building program. In consequence her ships are relatively older in type than those of the United States and Japan. This fact was considered in alloting her 604,000 tons for the present, but the standard allotted her on replacements was 500,000 tons."

In explaining, as asked by the Japanese, the method of calculation of existing strength, the American experts said that the bases taken were keels actually laid down as of Nov. 11, the date of the opening of the conference.

Money Spent Considered.

The further explanations given above, however, show that this was not held rigidly against Great Britain and Japan in the American plan, but only against the United States. Money spent by Great Britain and Japan on ships not yet laid down was figured into the existing strength of those navies, but not into American existing strength.

The Japanese experts also required a specific list of the ships of the United States and Japan on which the calculation of existing strength was based, the degree of completion allowed for each ship building and asked whether differences in methods of figuring tonnage used by the three nations were allowed for in the calculations. This information was supplied in the American reply with the assurance that the tonnage figures of each foreign ship had been recalculated on the American basis to arrive at a fair comparison.

Tables Showing "Relatives."

On the basis of these figures and also using Japanese estimates of Japanese and American strength as furnished by the Japanese experts in memoranda, the American experts then set out the naval "relatives" of the two Powers in tables as follows of American strength and American estimate of Japanese strength:

	United States.	Japan.
Ships building	346,374	109,392
Ships built	500,650	299,700
Totals	847,024	409,092
Ratio	....100 pct.	49 pct.

Second: American estimate of American strength and Japanese estimate of Japanese strength:

	United States.	Japan.
Ships building	346,374	83,330
Ships built	500,650	334,700
Totals	... .847,024	418,030
Ratio	....100 pct.	49 pct.

Third: Japanese estimate of American and Japanese strength:

	United States.	Japan.
Ships building	184,735	83,330
Ships built	500,650	334,700
Totals	685,385	418,030
Ratio	....100 pct.	60 pct.

Note With Tables.

The following note was attached to these tables:

"In the tables as given under two and three, the Mutsu is included as of the Japanese tables as being completed and the Japanese tonnage of incompleted capital ships as given in their memorandum is raised to conform to the American standards of measurements in tonnage."

In connection with the different methods of calculating tonnage, the American answer said:

"The different methods of estimating tonnage values were carefully considered by our bureau of construction and repair. Each ship was carefully gone over and made to reconcile with the American list so that ships of all three navies, United States, Great Britain and Japan, were on the same basis for estimating capital ship tonnage."

The Japanese experts asked for the source of American figures on Japanese tonnage in the original Hughes proposal. They were told these figures were taken from "British lists" and raised to conform to American standards.

to the cause of the allies. Though stories of the heroism of American boys and those of many of our other allies have been recounted by the score to St. Louis audiences, few stories of Italian accomplishment have been told, though it happened that the first recited by Gen. Diaz was one told here in 1918 by Gen. Guglielmotti, commander of the famous Bersaglieri.

"One day," Gen. Diaz said, "as I was going toward a hill that had been bathed 1000 times in Italian blood—in those days when barbed wire often was torn down with the bare hands and a special mission meant almost certain death—I met an old gray-haired man with one leg who had insisted upon enlistment with the Bersaglieri. When he could not follow his comrades he urged them on with a voice. There came a time when he was surrounded by the enemy and had fired his last shot from his rifle.

"He seized his crutch, hurled it at the enemy and cried, as he died: 'Viva Italia.'

"In 1918 we were forced to call the class of 1899 to the colors—mere boys. One day on the Piave a group of these boys in the trenches were being offered all sorts of inducements by the Austrians to desert. Those boys threw aside their arms and sprang upon their trenches in full view of the enemy: 'Do you hear,' they cried, 'you shall never pass. Viva Italia.' Many of them fell wounded."

The General referred to the fact that frequently Americans read in their newspaper of disorders and revolutions in Italy. He said that there were little troubles common to all countries and likely were distorted in their travel across the ocean. "Sometimes the Italian people seem going toward a precipice," he said, "but a few steps away they stop, go back a few steps, sit down and smile."

"Come and Discover, Italy."

"I would remind you," he continued, "that in 1492 Columbus discovered America. I say to you now, come and discover Italy."

Gen. Diaz, clad in the gray uniform of the Italian army with a fur-collared uniform coat, reached St. Louis nearly 20 minutes before he was expected, due to what the Illinois Central declared was the fastest run in its history from Carbondale, Ill.

He was greeted by Mayor Kiel and James E. Smith of the Citizens' Reception Committee, which recently entertained Marshal Foch, and was driven in a closed automobile, followed by 14 others, east on Lindell boulevard.

The Italian societies had erected an arch, decorated brilliantly, with flags and banners and bearing his picture in the center, spanning the boulevard opposite the St. Louis Club. Young Italian women stationed on top of the arch dropped roses into the path of his car and an Italian band played the Italian national air. Arriving at Hotel Statler, the General passed through the presented arms of a company of the Sixth Infantry, stationed at Jefferson Barracks, to his room where he rested until taken to the St. Louis Club for dinner.

Today's celebration, which has been planned for three weeks by the 24 Italian societies, will begin with a parade at 9:15 a. m. from Columbus Square, Tenth and Carr streets, to St. Borromeo's Church, Twenty-ninth and Locust streets, an Italian Catholic church.

To Attend Cathedral Mass.

The General expressed a desire upon his arrival to attend mass at the New Cathedral instead. It was arranged that the mas at St. Borromeo's Church should consume from 10:30 a. m. to 11 a. m. only and that the General should go to the Cathedral for another mass there at which Archbishop Glennon is expected to speak.

The route of the parade will be east on Carr street from Columbus Square to Ninth, south to Washington avenue, where the General's party will join; thence west to Twelfth street, south to Locust and west to St. Borromeo's.

After mass at the Cathedral, the General will be driven over the residence section, if he desires, and will be returned to Hotel Statler for lunch and will attend a mass meeting for the Italian colony in Moolah Temple at 3 p. m.

A dinner will be given for him at 6:30 p. m. at Hotel Statler at which it is expected that 100,000 lire (approximately $5000) will be given to him to be carried to the war orphans in Italy. The fund was raised at a mass meeting of the Italian colony Thursday night

The members of the General's party are Gen. Marcello Kennedy de Lucca, acting chief of staff of the Italian armies; Maj. Giovanni Coconi, Capt. Carlo Huntington and Lieut. Carlo Rulpoli.

The party will depart at 9:30 p. m. for Cleveland.

"Already Shot!" Says Gen. Diaz When Photograph Is Taken.

Gen. Diaz was in a jovial mood, after an hour's sleep, when a Post-Dispatch reporter requested a word of greeting from him to the people of St. Louis, before he left Hotel Statler for the dinner at the St. Louis Club.

The General slipped into a uniform great coat, with a thick fur collar, and then expressed this appreciation of the welcome here:

"I want to extend a particularly warm greeting to the city," he said, "particularly so because I saw so many people out to welcome us in this quite bad weather. I am glad to be here."

The General stood in front of a piece of tapestry on the wall of his reception room to pose for a Post-Dispatch photographer. The flashlight exploded with the usual burst of smoke and light. "Already shot!" he exclaimed.

The weather spoiled somewhat the plans for the demonstration at the archway erected across Lindell boulevard, in front of the St. Louis Club. A group of young women, representing the Italian War Relief Association, hovered on the windswept deck, above the street, and threw handfuls of American Beauty roses on the General's limousine as it paused for a moment at the arch. A band played and the men of a company from the Sixth Regiment, Jefferson Barracks, stood at "present arms." There were few spectators, but many policemen. The young women with the flowers were Misses Florence Bertini, Catherine Boggiano, Charlotte Monti, Olympia Monti, Marie Isola, Alline Rossi and Nellie Maguolo.

Gen. Diaz arrived at Hotel Statler about 4:30 p. m. and went immediately to his room on the twelfth floor, after passing through a cheering crowd of guests in the lobby. He slept for an hour or more and remained in seclusion with an orderly on guard at an inner door and city detectives in the hall. Mayor Kiel, James E. Smith, chairman of the Reception Committee, and others of the committee, called at 6:15 p. m., and were introduced to him. The lobby was filled again when the party left, many Italians being present. A brass band played.

The General wore a gray service uniform and gray cape when he arrived, surmounted by a service cap, or kepi, of the same shade, ornamented with brown cord. He wore brown leather boots. On his breast was the Star of the Order of the Holy Annunciation, the highest decoration bestowed by the Italian Government, which has been given to only 12 persons. He also wore the American Distinguished Service Medal and a cross given by New York State to those who have performed conspicuous service.

ART LEAGUE PRIZE IS WON BY VICTOR HOLM

Frank Nuderscher Takes Chamber of Commerce Award at Artists' Guild Exhibit.

Awards in the ninth annual competitive exhibition of the St. Louis Artists' Guild were announced last night. The works of painting and sculpture entered in the competition have been on exhibition in the Guild's gallery on Union boulevard for two weeks past, and will remain there for several weeks. The competition was open to artists of St. Louis and vicinity.

First prize, $300, offered by the St. Louis Art League, for excellence in an art work, was won by Victor Holm, with a work of sculpture entitled "Job," and representing the scriptural figure of that name.

The Chamber of Commerce purchase price, $350, for the best industrial painting, was won by Frank Nuderscher with a canvas entitled "Pouring," which represents the melting process in the interior of a St. Louis steel mill. This painting will become the property of the Chamber of Commerce.

Three Landscape Prizes.

The first landscape prize, the John Liggett Scott memorial award of $100, given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins, was won by Mrs. W. W. Cherry with a canvas called "Dump Heap," representing a scene near the Free Bridge. The second landscape prize, $50, known as the Frederick Oakes Sylvester prize, given by William K. Bixby, was won by William Bauer with "Winter Morning." The third landscape award, the Thomas W. Fry prize of $50, was won by Manley Nash, with a view of "Piedmont, Cal."

O. E. Berninghaus, with a Taos painting of Indians in a pueblo, entitled "Siesta," won the Carl Wimar figure prize of $100. The decorative prize of $100 was won by Mrs. Mildred Bailey Carpenter with a painting, "Springtime."

The Halsey C. Ives sculpture prize of $100, given by W. K. Bixby, was won by Caroline Risque, with a juvenile fountain figure.

Mathes and Frazer Win.

Two $50 prizes were offered by Edward Mallinckrodt. That for water color was won by Harry Mathes, with "Sewing Circle." That for portraits was won by Harlan Frazer, with a portrait of himself.

Two honorable mentions were made in paintings. They were "Reverie," by Miss M. A. McColl, and "Gypsy Camp," by Fred Rushing Roe.

The judges were John F. Carlson and Everett Warner, painters, and Chester Beach, sculptor, all of New York.

NEGRO JAZZLAND'S PRINCE BOUNTIFUL HELD AS BURGLAR

Youth Who Made Forays Into West End Homes Gave Presents to His Dancing Partners.

$800 FUR COAT TO ONE, DIAMONDS TO OTHERS

'Life of Party' in Jail, Recalls 200 Robberies; Presents He Distributed Returned to Owners.

A heavy gloom that for two days has hung over certain members of "the younger set" that visit "Jazzland," a negro cafe at 2218 Market street, and the simultaneous disappearance of much finery that had previously been in evidence there was explained by disclosures made last night by the police in connection with the arrest of Elvoid Shields, an 18-year-old negro.

The reasons for the depression are twofold, though closely related. The "life of the party" is in jail, and the presents which he had distributed with a lavish hand among a dozen girls, have been recovered and returned to their original owners. Hence the gloom; hence the return to normalcy in the way of clothing and jewelry.

Admissions made by Shields show that he has been a busy little burglar since the middle of September. His own recollections is that he committed more than 200 robberies in that time, and he has been definitely identified in connection with 75.

On the proceeds of these forays into West End homes he established and maintained a reputation as a "Prince Bountiful" among numerous feminine acquaintances, and so became much sought in some quarters, and thoroughly envied in others. One of his gifts consisted of an $800 fur coat. Several diamond rings figured in his munificence. Virtually all were received by dancing partners whom the lavish burglar met at "Jazzland."

Wore Out Shoes Climbing.

Shields' busy career of social climbing and porch climbing lasted about eight weeks, dating from his release from the Boonville reformatory. In that time, the police estimate, he has stolen property of a total value of about $8000, much of which has been recovered, mostly from young women and girls whom Shields knew.

He was exclusively a prowler, never having held up anybody, he says. His hands were heavily calloused, and the tennis shoes which he had on were worn out on the sides, both circumstances being a result of climbing porch pillars, he said. He had been seen by several persons, who reported that he had on tennis shoes or was barefooted.

Following his arrest Thursday at his home, 4367 Cote Brilliante avenue, he continued for several hours to insist that he was not guilty. Detective Sergeant Oscar Collard, who made the arrest and questioned him, changed the line of the inquisition, and plied Shields with flattery about his cleverness. Under this unctuous treatment the prisoner's reserve melted, and he began a recital of the astonishing list of robberies.

Assists in Recovery.

He consented, at length, to assist the detectives to recover some of the stolen articles, and accompanied them to the homes of the girls to whom he had given them.

The fur coat was the property of Mrs. Irving Chapin, 4246 Westminster place. The young woman from whom it was taken also surrendered Mrs. Chapin's wedding dress, which was another secondhand gift from Shields. The coat was unharmed, but the recipient of the dress, finding it too long, had cut four inches off the hem, she admitted to Collard.

Jewelry, appraised at $700, taken from the home of Mrs. Annie McDonald, 4228 Delmar boulevard, was recovered from an ashpit in the rear of the house next door, to which Shields steered the officers. He explained that, after getting away with it, he buried it in the pit intending to rob another house in the neighborhood. There he was nearly caught, and fled without stopping to recover the jewelry.

Dropped Bag and Ran.

All his thefts, he said—which police reports confirm—were in the district bounded by Vandeventer avenue, King's highway, Forest Park boulevard and Delmar boulevard. He never carried a pistol nor forced open a window, he said. A few weeks ago, while carrying a satchel full of property which he had stolen from the Blue Grass Hotel, he met a policeman on Olive street. He dropped the bag and ran, and the policeman fired five shots at him.

Shields was arrested three years ago by Elias Hoagland, the present Chief of Detectives, for stealing, and was sentenced to the reformatory until he should be 21 years old. After descriptions of several robberies had come in recently, Chief Hoagland told detectives that he would say that they were the work of Shields if the latter were not in the reformatory. Investigation disclosed that he was free and his arrest followed. He told the police he had been paroled, a fact of which they had not been informed.

COURT REFUSES TO DISMISS JURY IN ARBUCKLE TRIAL sort of an agreement," U'Ren said.

McNab Opposes Dismissal.

Gavin McNab, chief counsel for the defense, said he would oppose any request for dismissal of the jury at this time.

"I want them to deliberate until they reach a verdict," he said.

Shortly after 4 p. m. the jury sent for the bailiff and asked him for some more writing paper.

District Attorney Matthew Brady did not appear in the courtroom during the day. A portion of the day, however, he spent in his offices on the floor above.

Arbuckle's mood changed throughout the day, but it could be seen plainly that the strain was telling on him. He spent most of his time chatting with his counsel and other friends.

Late in the day, Stephen E. Hopkins, the 13th, or alternate juror, who was excused when the jury retired to deliberate yesterday, appeared in the courtroom and was greeted with handclapping after a bailiff jokingly announced his presence in a loud voice. Hopkins and Arbuckle shook hands and chatted a few minutes.

Defense counsel remained in the courtroom throughout the day and Attorney McNab expressed his impatience on more than one occasion. He said he had been informed reliably that the jury stood 11 for acquittal and one for conviction and that the juror who was "holding out" was a woman. He expressed the opinion that the jury would not return its findings until Monday.

Foch's Visit Lessens Crowd.

The report that the jury stood 11 to 1 for acquittal persisted throughout the day, although there was another report that the balloting had reached 9 to 3 for acquittal. The jury caused a flurry at the noon recess when it announced that it was ready for lunch and then paused to take another ballot. This ballot was as ineffective as the 16 which were said in corridor gossip to have preceded it. The size of the crowds today was diminished because of the public greeting extended to Marshal Foch

The Judge announced that in the event there was no decision in the course of the evening he would come to court at 10 a. m. tomorrow to decide at that time whether the balloting should be continued tomorrow or Monday.

At 6:30 p. m. the order was given to have the jury taken to dinner and it returned at 8:30 for further deliberations.

"Fatty's" Attitude Changes.

The demeanor of Arbuckle changed greatly during the strain to which he was subjected in the hours of waiting. Friday night, so confident were he and his party that the verdict would be acquittal on the first ballot that his wife had prepared to depart for Los Angeles with him the same evening. The big comedian maintained an attitude of forced cheerfulness as the time passed, but it was a manifest effort, and his wife wore a strained look. When 11 o'clock came and it was announced that the jury would retire for the night, Arbuckle rose wearily and reached for his hat without a word. His wife, however, commenced to cry and she and the defendant's sisters made a cheerless picture as they left the courtroom.

Today the strain seemed to tell less upon him. He sat in the courtroom composedly enough, chatting with his lawyers or silently watching the spectators.

Alternate Juror Hopkins said that the jury had been watched closer than any other in San Francisco for 25 years. "They censored our mail, both incoming and outgoing," he said. "We each had a separate room at the hotel where we stayed and were watched like hawks by the four Deputy Sheriffs who guarded us. They certainly did their duty well. The newspapers were carefully kept from us. I have no idea of what happened in the world for two weeks."

THREE POWERS OFFER CONDITIONALLY TO GIVE UP THREE CHINESE LEASES

statement as to just what Japan desires in this connection or just how far the United States is prepared to go in order to furnish such assurances as will satisfy the Japanese.

Hawaii Not Likely to Be Affected.

Americans are confident that no agreement will be entered into by the United States to limit the fortifications in Hawaii, which is regarded as the American outpost and too far removed from Japan to constitute a menace to the Japanese under any circumstances. While both army and navy experts have recommended greatly strengthening the fortifications on the island of Guam, no project looking to that end ever has been adopted, and none is at all likely to go through in view of the real effort to solve the Pacific problem.

The proposed peace pact covering the Pacific and Far East, which took on new life following last night's conference of the "Big Three," remained in a nebulous state today. Speculation was rife among the delegates from all countries, few of whom seemed to have definite information concerning what is actually in the wind in this regard.

In American quarters it was emphatically stated that there would be no "entangling alliances," so far as the United States is concerned. On the other hand, it was made quite clear that neither Great Britain nor Japan is willing to give up the Anglo-Japanese alliance unless the proposed new agreement or understanding is sufficiently definite and specific to insure the adequate protection of their interests.

Would Insist on Guarantee.

The new pact, or agreement, or understanding, may be ever so loosely constructed to meet the objections of the United State Senate, but it must have sufficient substance to amount to at least a reasonable guarantee if Britain and Japan are actually to junk the 20-year-old alliance.

One suggestion advanced today was that the proposed arrangement in the Pacific will consist of a genuine understanding of the nine Powers represented at the conference, possibly to be made effective as to each by some form of executive declaration obligating the nation making it to adopt all possible measures to preserve the peace in the Pacific and Far East. Any such arrangement, of course, must at some future time involve the use of military force, in which event it must come before Congress, and the Senate would have its say.

WORD FROM TOKIO AWAITED ON NAVAL AND PACIFIC PLANS

Conference Takes Recess Until Wednesday—Many Details Still to Be Settled.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. — The naval ratio negotiations, apparently at their most favorable stage since the arms conference began, waited on Tokio today while the representatives of Great Britain, Japan and France were coming together in a conditional agreement for withdrawal from portions of their leased territory in China.

At a conference of the nine Powers the proffers of Japan, Great Britain and France for relinquishment of large and important areas of their leased territory in China were conditional and limited, not including all their leased areas, but were declared officially to be one of the most important developments of the Far Eastern conference.

Definite undertakings were deferred for further discussion at the next meeting of the Far Eastern committee next Wednesday, the three days' adjournment being taken so that the discussions between China and Japan on Shantung and the studies of subcommittees on other Chinese questions could proceed. The conference delegates also desired to attend the opening ceremonies of Congress next week.

Offers Made by Powers.

When the question on the conference agenda, of removal of special spheres of influence in China was brought up today, France offered to relinquish her leased territory of Kwang Chow providing similar cessions would be made by other Powers having such special spheres of influence. Japan followed with reiteration of an offer to relinquish her leased territory in Shantung and Great Britain joined with a proposal to relinquish the British leased territory of Wei Hai Wei.

All the offers, except that of Japan concerning Kiao-Chow, were conditional upon cessations of leased territory by the other Powers and also upon performance by China of certain conditions, which, delegates declared tonight, probably would be met. Japan, Mr. Hanihara said, stood on her former offers to give up Kiao-Chow on the basis of her position outlined in her notes to Pekin.

Objections were presented by Japan to relinquishment of her leased territory in South Manchuria and by Great Britain to release of Kowloon, opposite the open treaty port of Hong Kong. British representatives contended that Kowloon was an important factor in protection of the port of Hong Kong and in insuring its retention as an open port.

Japan to Hold Port Arthur.

The only leased territory which remained for discussion as far as Japan was concerned, Mr. Hanihara told the committee, was the Kwan Tung province, or Port Arthur and Dairen, which, he declared, Japan has no intention at present of relinquishinig.

The United States, according to reports, expressed a sympathetic attitude toward Chinese aspirations for return of the leased areas, but America, having no leased territory, was said not to be concerned directly in this phase of the discussions.

Confidence was expressed in American quarters tonight, however, that through other meetings an agreement would develop for relinquishment of several of the leased areas and understandings in the future administration of the rest.

Outward developments contributed nothing to the status of the naval discussions, but the impression grew in usually well-informed circles that the American, British and Japanese Governments were considering, in provisional form, an agreement that not only would include acceptance of the American 5-5-3 ratio, but would have to do as well with Pacific fortifications and some of the political problems of the Far East.

Definite action, however, will have to wait for several days while the Japanese delegates feel out the attitude of their home Government toward the newest phase of the negotiations as it shapes up from last night's conference between the heads of the American, British and Japanese delegations.

Meantime what actually occurred at the meeting of the "Big Three" is a closely guarded secret, all authoritative spokesmen refusing to take notice of the resulting crop of guesses, conjectures and surmises as to what "alliances," "understandings" or "compromises" might be in contemplation.

Gompers Says Conference Must Strike at Causes of War.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, discussing the armament conference in a statement tonight, declared an agreement on limitation of naval armament would be "a magnificent achievement" but if the conference stops there it cannot be said to have succeeded."

"If the great Powers agree to the American program for limitation and reduction of naval armament it will be a magnificent achievement of tremendous importance and significance," said Gompers, "but if the conference stops with the naval program it cannot be said to have suceeded. That would be but a beginning of success."

The labor federation leader, who is a member of the advisory committee to the American delegation and organizer and honorary chairman of the unofficial general committee on limitation of armament, went on to say that "every person who sincerely looks for an end of wars must hope with the deepest fervor that the conference will go beyond naval limitation and strike hard and true at the causes of war."

"To destroy sixty-six ships and to fail on the Far Eastern and Pacific problems," he asserted, "would be a transient victory in the shadow of disaster. The conference must go on to the deeper questions upon which the issue of continued peace really hangs."

'HAWK' SHOT BY FARMER PROVES TO BE AN AMERICAN EAGLE

St. Louis County Man Brings Down Bird Measuring 7 Feet Across Wings.

Hugo Werner, living on Spring avenue, north of Olive Street road, St. Louis County, went gunning this morning for a "hawk" that had been eating his chickens. When it came for its breakfast he shot it and broke its wing. When it fluttered to the ground he captured an American eagle, measuring seven feet, three inches from tip to tip.

He took it to the Clayton Courthouse to find out what to do with it, but nobody there could tell him, so he took it back home with him.

All wild birds in Missouri are protected, except certain pestiferous ones that are named, and game birds during open seasons, but there is an inconsistency in the law, in that in another clause it provides a bounty for eagles. Deputy Game Warden Barmeier of St. Louis holds, however, that the eagle is protected. The fact that it is caught raiding a farmer's yard does not remove its exemption, he says.

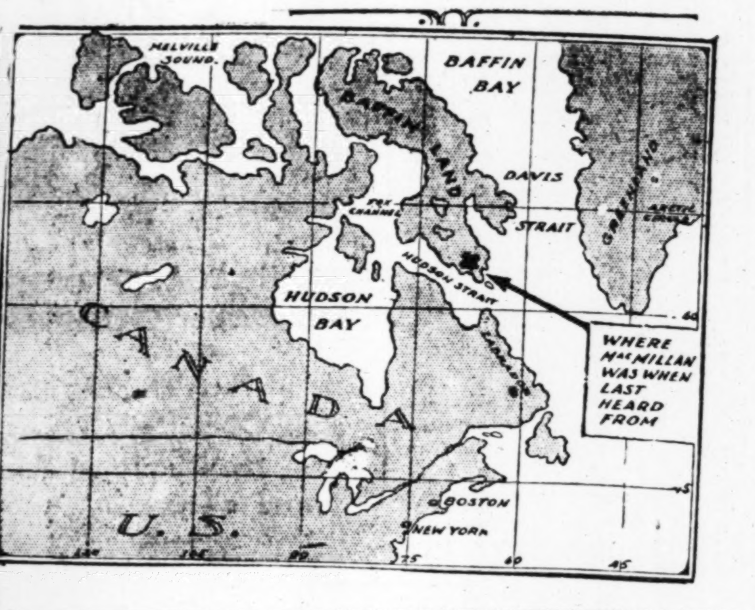
MacMillan, at Baffins Land in Frozen North, Writes That the Wireless Keeps Him Near Home

Explorer Reaches Strange Land for Adventure in the Mysterious Interior, Where Legend Places Race of People Yet Unknown to the Outside World.

ALL IN PARTY ARE HAPPY AND HOPEFUL

His Story of Arrival, Three Months on Way, Tells of Listening in on World's News, and of Missionaries Saving Labrador Eskimos in Influenza Epidemic.

DONALD B. MacMILLAN.



(Copyright, 1921.)

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Dec. 3.—Donald Macmillan has been heard from!

The intrepid son of the Pine Tree State, veteran of Peary's dash to the North Pole, has reached the mysterious west coast of Baffins Land, where the foot of white men has never trod, and where, according to Eskimo accounts, lie towering mountains of fantastic ice caps, and vast lakes bordered with strange flowers of rare beauty and a whole new world of animal life.

In the interior of this strange place, for the exploration of which Macmillan went into the North, legends place a race of people hitherto unknown to the outside world.

Macmillan's party is by this time probably ashore in winter quarters. First word from him is contained in the accompanying long dispatch sent exclusively to the Boston Globe. He wrote it aboard his little schooner Bowdoin, tucked into a snug harbor on the coast of Baffins Land, 1220 miles north of Boston.

More than three months ago he hammered out his story on a little typewriter, started it toward Boston in the hands of an Eskimo trader, who in turn gave it to a mail carrier at one of the Hudson Bay Company posts. Finally the letter reached St. Johns, Newfoundland, last week, and from there it was sent to the Boston Globe.

*Far away in the frozen North, where such a storm as New England experienced last week would be only a summer shower, Macmillan's band set up its little wireless outfit and was delighted to discover that they could listen in on messages from 12 wireless stations in the civilized world * * the first Arctic expedition to keep in touch with home by this rapidly perfecting modern invention.

*But what Macmillan saw in revisiting his favorite Northern haunts he describes as a terrible picture of suffering. "There would not be one Eskimo alive in Labrador today, were it not for a noble little band of Morovian missionaries." * * **

But no one can tell the story so well as the explorer does in his own vivid words:

By DONALD B. MACMILLAN,

ON BOARD THE ARCTIC
SCHOONER BOWDOIN.
Longitude 67°-35'-10".
Latitude 62°-22'.

Aug. 15, 1921.

WE reached Baffins Land today at 2 o'clock, every one tired and wet, following a dirty night in Hudson Straits, and glad to get into port.

Our latitude and longitude agree with that of Jackman Sound, but differ so from the chart that it is impossible of identification. But since it was named by Frobisher 345 years ago, we shall not spend much time looking for it. In fact our charts from now on, presenting as they do but the barest outlines of headlands, bays and inlets, are of but little value. In general the water is clear and deep and shoals easily detected from the masthead.

Among these islands that old English navigator Baffin anchored 305 years ago, and named them the Savage Islands because of the natives encountered in this vicinity. When Parry passed along here 100 years ago, 100 Eskimos visited his two ships, the Fury and Hecla. We are expecting them to appear at any minute, but as yet have seen no kayaks or women's boats.

Like Music From Home.

Thus far our trip has been one of successive days of bad weather and fog, heavy wind, and rough sea going into Halifax, N. S.; thick fog all down the Cape Breton Coast, a gale off Bonne Bay, N. F., and thick fog going into Battle Harbor. Fog going into Domine, rain and thick fog all the way to Gready, rain and fog across Hamilton Inlet and into Indian Harbor. Fog into Hopedale, and now the finish in a heavy northeaster under jumbo and foresail.

Arctic work has not many attractions just now, but we have faith in the old stying, "This, too, will pass away," and tomorrow be "brite and fair" with fair winds and Arctic sunlight.

Upon our arrival today 1224 geographical miles north of Boston, we tested our wireless and were delighted to hear at least a dozen stations. The Annapolis station we hear every day at noon, and at 10 p. m., when time signals are sent broadcast. I think we are the first Arctic expedition to ever keep in touch with home, bringing to our minds possibly the fact that while we are apparently in a world unfinished or now long dead, far to the south of us there is another world, progressive and throbbing with activity. The musical little note that reaches our ears nearly every minute of the day is a constant reminder that we are a part of that world and not forgotten.

Our six days' enforced delay at Battle Harbor, because of storm, can hardly be regretted, for there the l ys met the Grenfell Hospital staff, all of whom were from the States, mostly from Baltimore and Minneapolis. Dinners, suppers, teas and dances were very acceptably added to our itinerary, the memory of which will serve to lighten many a cold hour of the winter to come.

Finds Noble Little Band.

A very pleasant evening was also spent at the Indian Harbor Hospital, which is in charge of Dr. Paddon, well known now in the States through his lectures last Fall in aid of the endowment needed by the Grenfell Association for its magnificent work in Newfoundland and Labrador.

At the Hopedale Moravian Mission Station we learned first hand of the terrible loss of life among the Eskimos, due to the ravages of influenza in 1918, the hardest blow the mission has ever received since the building of its station at Nain in 1771, 150 years ago.

Were it not for that noble band of Moravians, not one Eskimo would be alive in Labrador today. They have "carried on" quietly and patiently through the years, sacrificing everything, homes, friends and the comforts of civilization, even their children at the age of 7, when they are sent to the Old World to be educated, knowing that the summum bonum of life consists of the knowledge of each day's work well done, and that work for the good of humanity.

Through smallpox and influenza one-third of all the Eskimos are dead. One hundred and twenty-one were buried in one hole, 32 feet square and six feet deep. Dozens of bodies were taken to the edge of the ice by dog teams and dropped into the sea.

Dozens of bodies also were dragged out through the windows of their homes by dogs and eaten about the ground.

Work of Missionaries.

The missionaries, in despair, grouped the dead together in piles and, having saturated them with oil, set fire to the mass.

The homes in Okak are dark, not a light, nor the sound of a voice, nor laughter of children about the shore, nor a note of music, which the Eskimo love so well. It is a dead, silent town, in striking contrast to the cheery little place I visited in 1911 and 1912.

"All Well and Happy."

Hebron, 40 miles to the north, suffered the same fate, not one survivor being left. The Eskimos who happened to be at the outposts were not afflicted and are now returning to the town in groups, with the hope in their hearts that at some distant date Hebron will again be Hebron.

The Moravians and the Eskimos, survivors of the Northern Labrador, are deserving of and need the help of the American people, who are always so ready to give when help is really needed.

Eight Men in the Party.

My party now consists of eight men, a dog driver and interpreter among the Baffin Land Eskimos being added in Labrador, by name of Abram Bromfield.

The boys are all well and happy, and apparently not discouraged over the bad weather.

Tonight there are rings of salt about the eyes of nearly every man, caused by the whipping of spray over the weather rail.

The Bowdoin is behaving splendidly, and is a real little fighter. She plunges into a head sea, and tosses it high into the air, as if she really enjoyed it. As yet she has shown no ill effect of her rough usage in North Sydney, when she was rammed by the steamer Stella Maris and squeezed so badly that the putty started from her seams for a distance of 20 feet or more on both sides. Stanch and sturdy, she will take us to the unknown coast and back to her home port, Boston.

Wave Sent Five Days Later.

Lat. 64° 13'.
Long. 76° 37'.
Aug 20th, 1921.

We arrived yesterday at the southwest corner of Baffins Land, following a 200-mile run from Big Island via the southern shore of Meta Incognita.

We are at the beginning of Fox Channel, which leads to the Fury and Hecla Straits 360 miles northward, which is our objective point. As the coast from now on is unknown, we must have clear weather to determine by astronomical observations the latitude and longitude of the salient points.

Already we have noted several important changes in the coast line; so many, in fact, that we were practically lost in attempting to follow the islands from Big Island on through Gordon Bay.

Differs From the Maps.

Luke Fox, in 1631, is the only man who attempted from far off shore to name any of the prominent headlands. From the drawings of the Eskimos, Fox Land is very different from what we find on our latest maps. Cape Weston and Cape Dorchester are some 30 miles too far to the northward, and at least a degree out of longitude.

Thirty miles or so south of the Arctic Circle the coast line trends due eastward almost to the shores of Nettling Lake. There the country is low and rolling and abounding with herds of caribou. Upon these herds we shall depend for food and clothing, if we should fail to reach the Fury and Hecla Strait.

Our wireless, installed by Prof. Pierce of Harvard, it still with us. Yesterday we heard the time signal sent out by Annapolis. When in winter quarters we shall put up a larger antennae and undoubtedly keep in touch with home through the year.

As yet we have seen no polar bear or walrus, but seals, ducks, snow geese are very numerous all along this shore. To supplement our supply on the Bowdoin we hope to secure a goodly number of the latter before their departure for the South, about the middle of September.

If no word should be received from us by April or May, you may know that we are compelled to go into winter quarters on the western shores of Baffins Land.

SUPREME COURT KNOCKS OUT NEW SENATE DISTRICTS

so to do at the first session after each decennial census.

The initiative and referendum amendment in part provided that: "The legislative authority of the State shall be vested in a legislative assembly, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives, but the people reserve to themselves power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls, independent of the legislative assembly, and also reserve power, at their own option, to approve or reject at the polls any act of the legislative assembly." This was written into the Constitution in 1908.

Section 7 of article 4, a part of the Constitution as adopted in 1875, in part, provided that: "If at any time, or from any cause, the General Assembly shall fail or refuse to district the State, for Senators, as required in this section, it shall be the duty of the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney-General, within 30 days after the adjournment of the General Assembly on which said duty devolved, to perform said duty."

This ruling today is the first time in the United States that the question involved has been passed upon. The constitutions of many other states are similar to that of Missouri, having originally accorded to executive state officers power to redistrict as to Senators in the event their legislators failed to do so, then later having written into their organic laws the initiative and referendum provisions.

Intent of the Amendment.

Judge Graves in his opinion holds that the clear intent of the iniative and referendum amendment, adopted in Missouri in 1908, was to center all legislative authority in the general assembly; that if acts of that body did not meet with the approval of the people those acts could be referred, or a redistricting initiated, if the General Assembly failed to act.

"The cases and constitution," hold that the redistricting of the State is a legislative act, Judge Graves declares. "For 30 years and more, there was continuous complaint from the people and the press about the manner in which these executive State officers (the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney-General) performed this legislative function, of redistricting the State, in a position where they could review it by referendum."

Judge Graves points out that the authority vested in the State officers to redistrict, conditional upon failure of the Legislature so to do, was not a "limitation upon Legislative authority" of the General Assembly, as contended by Attorney-General Barrett and Merrell E. Otis, his chief assistant who defended the attempted redistricting before the Supreme Court, but rather was a "constitutional grant of legislative powers to three executive officers," which was revoked by the amendment of 1908.

Right to Initiate Laws.

Purpose and intent of that amendment, Judge Graves holds, "was to gather together and lodge in one legislative forum all legislative power or authority. If this was the intent and purpose of the amendment then it gathered to the one legislative forum the conditional grant of legislative power to these three executive officers. If the framers of the amendment had not thought they had gathered into one bunch all legislative authority or power and placed it in one channel, so that they could review the same if dissatisfied, they might have extended both the referendum and initiative. To say that this was not the intent of the framers of the amendment and of the purpose of adopting it would be to say that they had more confidence in the three executive officers than they had in the General Assembly or even in themselves.

"But this is not all. They reserve the right to initiate laws, and after the legislator failed to act or even before the people had the right to initiate a law, not a constitutional amendment, redistricting the State."

Barrett and Otis in defending the attempted redistricting urged that the districts as shaped under it were far closer to the constitutional requirements as to compactness and equality of population than was that of 1901, which still is in effect.

Judge Graves holds, however, that such an attack upon the districting of 1901 cannot be sustained, pointing out that four general elections have been held and seven Legislatures elected under it, and that to overturn it at this late date would involve endless turmoil and confusion, which is not to be considered. He points out also, that, even should it be overturned, the limits of the Twenty-fifth Senatorial District, the point at issue, would not be altered, as the districting of 1891 then would be in effect. And under that districting the twenty-fifth was the same as now.

Judge Graves held that the amendment of 1908 did not affect the veto power of the Governor, except that it withheld from him the right to pass upon measures referred to the people either by the Legislature or initiative.

Judge Elder's Opinion.

Judge Elder, in his separate opinion, declares that effect of the initiative and referendum amendment on the power of the executive officers to redistrict already had been disposed of by the court in previous redistricting cases several years ago. Judge Graves had met the point with a declaration that the question never had been before the court before and that isolated excerpts from opinions in those previous cases could be argued in support of this point only when considered apart from the remainder of those decisions as none of those cases involved the present issue.

The outcome of this case is unsatisfactory to Republican partisans, who had expected under the new districting to maintain control of the State Senate for many years. It would be impossible for Gov. Hyde to call the present Legislature, which is Republican in both houses, together in extra session now to redistrict, even were he so inclined, as the Constitution provides that the Legislature, if it redistricts, must do so at the first session after the taking of the decennial census, which was the regular session last winter.

In the present Senate, Republicans had 19 of the 34 members until the death of Senator Senedeker of Mount Vernon decreased that number by one. The other 15 are Democrats. This is the largest representation in the Senate Republicans ever have had under the 1901 districting, their largest previous representation under it having been 12. They had six from the outset.

Seventeen to Be Elected.

Seventeen Senators, one half of the members of the Senate, will be elected in November, 1922. Of those 17 districts, eight elected Democrats in 1918 and nine elected Republicans, Of the 17 "holdover" Senators, 10 are Republican and seven Democratic. Thus, to have a constitutional majority of 18 in the Senate at the next regular session of the Legislature, Republicans would have to elect 8, while Democrats would have to carry 11 districts.

Under the old districting St Louis has six Senators, two Democratic and four Republican. Three of the Republicans, Peter Anderson, of the thirty-fourth, William F. Depelheuer, of the Thirtieth and Henry W. Blodgett of the Thirty-second, will have to stand for re-election. The Democrats, Michael Kinney, of the Thirty-first, Joseph H. Brogan, of the Thirty-third and one Republican, Frank B. Warner of the Twenty-ninth, are "holdover."

Jackson County (Kansas City) has two Senators, Michael E. Casey, of the fifth and David M. Proctor, of the seventh, both of whom will hold over. The other 26 districts are in the interior of the State.

The attempted redistricting would have taken away from the rural counties of the State four districts, of which two would have gone to St. Louis and a like number to Jackson County, cutting the rural counties to 22 districts.

Six senatorial redistricting bills were introduced at the regular session of the Legislature last winter, but were allowed to die, when political advisers of the administration pointed out that acts of the Legislature could be referred, but that it was extremely doubtful whether a redistricting performed by the executive officers would be open to this attack.

Attorney-General Barrett said tonight it would be impossible to take this decision of the State Supreme Court to the Supreme Court of the United States for the reason that no Federal question was involved and that the United States Supreme Court had held repeatedly that a State Supreme Court was the final authority in construing the Constitution of its State. Barrett said, however, that he and Otis would file a motion for rehearing, probably Tuesday.

WOMAN KILLED BY TRUCK AT SEVENTH AND WASHINGTON

Mrs. Tillie Trentman Run Over by Machine of Express Company — Driver Says She Became Confused

Mrs. Tillie Trentman, 58 years old, of 5243 Blow street, died at the city hospital at 1:30 p. m. yesterday from internal injuries and fractured ribs suffered yesterday before noon when she was knocked down and run over by the front wheel of an automobile truck of the Popular Price Express Co., driven by Louis Appleman, 31, of 2238A Howard street, as she crossed Washington avenue, near Seventh street.

Appleman told the police Mrs. Trentman was proceeding from the north to the south sidewalk on Washington avenue 10 feet west of the regular crossing walk. He was driving west in Washington, he said, and when Mrs. Trentman saw the truck she became confused and stepped backward and was knocked down by the fender and run over by the front wheel.

Mrs. Trentman was carrying a basket filled with groceries and meats.

Two Men Hit by Auto on Clayton Road in County.

John Kielsinger, Cooper street and Southwest avenue, and Floyd Zabgel, 726 Hawk avenue, were injured at 9:15 last night when they were struck by an automobile driven west on Clayton road near North and South road by Clyde Holland of Kirkwood. Zabgel and Kielsinger were pushing a small motor truck. They were taken to Barnes Hospital.

Woman Knocked Down and Dragged 100 Feet by Auto.

Mrs. Maude Baker, 30 years old, of 2038 Geyer avenue, a saleswoman, was knocked down and dragged about 100 feet by a Ford touring car at Broadway and St. Charles street that did not stop, at 9 o'clock last night. Mrs. Baker was taken to the City hospital in a serious condition, suffering from fracture of the right elbow, lacerations of the scalp and body bruises.

She was crossing from the east to west side when hit by the automobile, which was going south at a high rate of speed. Patrolman Harry Schuessler, who was standing at Locust street, heard Mrs. Baker's screams and fired several shots in the air to warn the driver to stop. Schuessler commandeered an automobile and gave chase but was outdistanced, losing sight of the car at Walnut street.

Clothing Manufacturers Say Oriental Styles and Low Waist Lines Will Be Popular Next Spring.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 3.—Oriental styles and low waist lines with wide, graceful sleeves and the skirt slightly longer, but still short enough to retain a "youthful appearance," were recommended for the spring and summer of 1922, by the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association in convention here today. The combination of matelasses, plaids, satins or taffetas with plain cloths are suggested, with ornaments of cut steel nail heads, angora wool, braids, stitching, leather trimmings and buckles.

Soft, roomy sport coats will be popular, it is believed. Some are to be belted, while others fall in loose lines. Patch pockets and notched "throw" and soft-rolling collars are expected to be in demand.

Bloused coats with wide, voluminous sleeves and low waist lines also are designed. Three pieces are expected to be popular, the dress made on straight-hanging lines to be worn with jaunty little loose-type of coat or a "smart" little cape.

Almost moyenage is the waist line in the softly bloused suits with little peplums and clever belt arrangements. Many of the new slender tailored suits boast smart little vests with a rolling medici collar and open link fastenings at the neck line as well as at the waist line.

HOPE OF FURTHER DISCUSSION ON IRISH SITUATION

Sinn Fein Delegates Are Returning to London From Dublin With Dail Cabinet's Last Word.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—After two ferences in Dublin today, with mon de Valera, the Sinn Fein gates in the Irish conference are turning to London tonight. It been intended, according to statements at the Sinn Fein publicity partment here, that only Arthur Griffith, Sinn Fein Foreign Minister, would return tonight, and that the others would follow in a day or two.

It was expected the reply of the Dail Eireann Cabinet to the la British proposals would be fla "yes" or "no" and that in either event Prime Minister Lloyd George on Griffith's return, would decide the Government's future action. But the news that all the delegates were on their way here was taken to indicate there would be further discussion of details, giving rise to hope that a final breach in the negotiations might be avoided.

Lloyd George, although in the country, is within easy reach of London, and he could see the Sinn Fein delegates tomorrow if necessary, Government officials said tonight.

It was understood the Sinn Fein delegates were bringing the Dail Cabinet's last word, and if the Premier should be able to meet any additional points they might raise, he would submit the new plan to Premier Sir James Craig of Ulster by Tuesday.

In the event of rejection of the proposal by Sir James, it was indicated that the next move might be the resignation of the Cabinet members as a prelude to a general election.

NON-RECOGNITION OF MEXICO DUE TO LACK OF PLEDGES

Failure of President Obregon to Give Assurance of Protection for American Rights Is the Cause.

PROMISES EXTENDED NOT SATISFACTORY

Compensation for Property Seized May Be Valueless and Court Decision Seems Confiscatory.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Why does not the United States recognize the Obregon Government of Mexico?

The answer is not to be found, as some observers have been led to believe, in the steady drift of Mexico toward state socialism, but in the failure of Obregon thus far to give pledges which the American Government deems necessary for the protection of validly acquired property rights of American citizens in Mexico.

After investigation here the Post-Dispatch is able to give the following as the attitude of the Amercan State Department toward recognition:

The department has not departed from the fundamental principles set out in its public statement of June 7 last. It holds no brief for the big American oil companies that have gone into Mexico; they are on exactly the same footing as individual American citizens who have developed land, mines or other enterprises in that country. There are many such individuals who are entitled to protection of their property rights.

The department is concerned with all American citizens whose legally acquired holdings are in danger of confiscation without compensation and with American citizens only.

The American Government is not insisting that Mexico change the system under which the States have passed and are passing laws taking over private property for the benefit of the peons. What form of government Mexico shall have is her own offair; we may not like it, but we are not demanding that she alter it. But we do ask that no land law be given a retroactive effect that will deprive American citizens of property rights acquired under previous laws, without adequate compensation.

Compensation Is a Question.

Mexico replies that when land is taken she gives adequate compensation. But this compensation is in the form of State bonds that may have no commercial value. Even if the guarantee of the Federal Government should be put back of the bonds, still, in the chaotic state of things in Mexico, they would be of questionable value. Mexico, it is pointed out, is taking over some of the best irrigated holdings in the country—land which has been made profitable by hard labor and great expense—and is giving in return paper which is practically worthless. The interested American citizens insist that compensation shall be adequate and real and appeal to their Government for assistance and protection.

The Supreme Court of Mexico recently handed down a decision which, on its face, appeared to give the desired protection to American oil interests. The decision was immediately acclaimed by American proponents of recognition as a complete refutation of the argument that the Mexico system is confiscatory and that the Mexican Constitution is retroactive. According to the American official view, however, the decision stops far short of the guarantees that the Government must have as a prerequisite to recognition. The decision states that an oil well actually developed may be retained by the owner under valid title, but that undeveloped oil lands may revert to the State. An owner may have a valuable oil holding on which but one well has been brought in. He might be entitled under the decision to keep only the one well; the rest of the property, no matter how valuable it might be, or how much it had cost, might revert to the State. This policy appeared to the American Government to be confiscatory.

Before recognizing Obregon, the American Government only asks for an adequate pledge in the form of a treaty provision, on the part of the Mexican Government, that the rights of American citizens will be respected. It demands no change in the Mexican Constitution. The Constitution in fact, provides ample grounds for the protection of foreign rights, unless its force be destroyed in its interpretation, since it sets out that no laws shall have retroactive effect to the prejudice of any person whatsoever.

Complete Understanding Needed.

In the view of the American Government, if it should recognize Obregon without obtaining the desired pledge in advance, it would inherit a constant squabble with Mexico—a continuous lawsuit, so to speak. Our relations with Mexico would steadily grow worse. The only policy which this Government can take, if declared is to get a thorough understanding with Mexico as a preliminary to recognition. There is no prospect that the State Department will yield on this point.

The Government is asking nothing on behalf of American citizens who have gone into Mexico since the new laws became operative. They went in with their eyes open, at their own risk. In demanding protection, the Government has in mind only those Americans who have built up property values under the old laws.

The Government recalls that Carranza made promises similar to those unofficially and verbally made by Obregon, but, after he got the backing of the United States he used the added prestige and power thus acquired to injure citizens of the United States. There is no question in the mind of any State Department official but that recognition would greatly strengthen Obregon. He might be able to alter the present radical Constitution, which was passed by the radical party of Mexico and has never been referred to the people.

On the other hand, the radical party might at any time force the adoption of measures even more subversive of private property rights than those already on the statute books. The American Government, with the rights of its nationals at stake, cannot afford to take a chance; it wants a binding pledge not from Obregon personally, but from the Mexican government, in the form of a treaty—a pledge that will endure through any change of administration in Mexico.

The policy of the State Department has been to avoid public discussion of the motives back of its refusal to recognize Obregon. It realized that this reticence has caused a great deal of misunderstanding and adverse criticism. The policy, it is explained, is inspired by the desire to keep out of a public controversy with Mexico. It is feared the dispute, if openly indulged in, would be treated by the Mexican press as a mountainous issue threatening a rupture between the two nations. Such publicity would only further complicate a delicate situation.

Change Too Fast for Peon.

The American Government does not question the good faith of the Mexican radical party in its efforts to help the peons. But information which has been sent to Washington indicates that the effects of the socialization of land are not always beneficial. The peon, because of his long servitude, is usually incompetent to develop land on his own account. The change from the old capitalistic system of land tenure has been too fast for him; the consequence has been, in many cases, not a subsitution of peon for capitalistic agriculture, but a wiping out of values—a destruction of the large landholders without creating the small holder to replace him. Many irrigation projects have gone to ruin because the new owners did not know how to operate them.

Take for instance the State of Morelos. This is a small state, virtually all the area of which was formerly owned by a few Mexican and Spanish families. Under their management, the land was extensively irrigated and produced a great quantity of sugar. Since the state took over the land and divided it among the peons, cultivation has utterly ceased, and nothing has been done to restore the valuable irrigation works and mills which were wrecked during the revolution and which the original owners were prepared to reconstruct.

Opponents of the Mexican system point to the devastation in Morelos as an indication of what is likely to happen if the present governmental policies are continued. The peon, ignorant and without equipment, will derive no commensurate gain from the overthrow of the old system, it is argued, but on the contrary will sink to a lower level of poverty and helplessness.

Department Well Informed.

The American State Department, far from proceeding blindly or in ignorance of the exact situation in detail, is thoroughly informed on all its phases. Henry P. Fletcher, the Under Secretary of State, who is in direct charge of matters relating to Mexico, was recently ambassador in that country for more than two years. Matthew E. Hanna, the present chief of the Mexican division in the State Department, but recently left the embassy in Mexico City after a service there of more than four years, and George T. Summerlin, the present charge- d'affaires in Mexico, whose duty it is to keep the department in touch with the situation, has also had more than four years' service in that country.

State Department Stand on Guarding Rights in Mexico

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.

IN the statement of June 7, referred to in the accompanying authoritative article setting forth the attitude of the American Government toward the question of recognizing Obregon, the State Department declared that "the fundamental question which confronts the Government of the United States in considering its relations with Mexico is the safeguarding of property rights against confiscation."

"A confiscatory policy," the statement continued, "strikes not only at the interests of particular individuals, but at the foundations of international intercourse for it is only on the basis of the security of property validly possessed under the laws existing at the time of its acquisition, that commercial transactions between the peoples of the two countries and the conduct of activities in helpful co-operation are possible."

If the provisions of the Mexican Constitution, promulgated in 1917, were put into effect retroactively, the statement declares, property of American citizens would be confiscated on a great scale.

The statement disclosed that the American Government had proposed to Mexico a treaty of amity and commerce, containing an agreement by Mexico to safeguard the rights of property validly acquired before the promulgation of the 1917 Constitution.

"If Mexico does not contemplate a confiscatory policy," the statement proceeded, "the Government of the United States can conceive of no possible objection to the treaty."

A pledge that recognition would accompany acceptance of the treaty by Mexico was given in the following explicit language:

"The question of recognition is a subordinate one, but there will be no difficulty as to this, for if Gen. Obregon is ready to negotiate a proper treaty, it will be drawn so as to be negotiated with him, and the making of the treaty in proper form will accomplish the recognition of the Government that makes it. In short, when it appears that there is a Government in Mexico willing to bind itself to the discharge of primary international obligations, concurrently with that act its recognition will take place."

HALLIDAY-TURNER CASE TO COME UP WEDNESDAY

Federal Grand Jury to Hear Charge of Counterfeiting French Certificates.

United States District Attorney Carroll, who returned last night from a visit to Washington and New York, announced that the Federal grand jury would take up, Wednesday morning, the case of the counterfeiting of $1,500,000 of certificates for French Government bonds, in which George V. Halliday, bankrupt broker, and Harry Turner, editor of "Much Ado," are under $15,000 bond each.

As was told in a Washington dispatch to the Post-Dispatch, District Attorney Carroll took up, with officials of the Department of Justice, the question whether the evidence available in the Halliday-Turner case would constitute a case under the Federal statutes, which forbid counterfeiting the obligation of a foreign country.

Turner's lawyer has raised the contention that the things which were counterfeited were not obligations of the French Government, but interim receipts issued by J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York, to the subscribers for French Government bonds.

The Department of Justice, as was told in the dispatch, takes the view that the Federal statutes apply to the case. It will be necessary to show that contractural relations existed between the French Government and the Morgan firm, by which Morgan & Co., acted as agents for the French Government in the American bond market. With this shown, it is held that the certificates of Morgan & Co., to which an interest coupon was attached, its payment being dependent on payment of the interest by the French Government, will have the legal status of obligations of that Government.

Carroll went from Washington to New York to confer with the Morgan firm, and he said last night that the needed evidence would be forthcoming. He will not wait to bring witnesses from New York, but will himself certify, before the grand jury, to the evidence which will be available. The evidence to be furnished by Morgan & Co., will relate not only to the firm's contract with the French Government, but to the discovery of the counterfeits, $43,000 of which were sent to Morgan & Co. for examination by the Night and Day Bank of St. Louis.

"The Department of Justice is interested in this case," Carroll said last night, "and wishes it prosecuted vigorously and speedily."

TWO ARRESTED ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Patent Attorney and Company Secretary Named in Action Involving $1832 Stock Sales.

Onesine Le Compte, president of the Le Compte Automatic Drawbar and Connector Co., yesterday caused the arrest of Oscar Michel, a patent attorney in the International Life building, and George A. Walker, secretary of his company, on a charge of embezzling $1832.50.

Le Compte is said to be the inventor of a railroad car coupler in use by the Frisco Railroad. He alleged Michel and Walker were commissioned by him to sell 49 per cent of the stock of his company on a 50-50 basis and that the sum of the alleged embezzlement is money due him from stock sales since Oct. 1.

Michel and Walker declined to make a statement after their arrest.

10 PCT. FREIGHT RATE DECREASES APPROVED

Farm, Range and Orchard Products Outside New England Come Under Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Voluntary railroad proposals for putting into effect a 10 per cent decrease in freight rates on virtually all farm, range and orchard products in the United States, outside of New England, were accepted today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Orders were issued permitting the railroads to disregard all usual restrictions in making up the new rate schedules as well as such violations of the long and short-haul clause of the Interstate Commerce act, as might be brought about by percentage reductions. The orders also permit the rates to be put into effect on one day's notice "on as early a date and in as inexpensive a manner as possible for a six months' experimental period.

At the same time the commission left standing its order of Oct. 20, requiring an approximate 16½ per cent rate decrease on grain, grain products and hay throughout the entire transmississippi district, which the railroads later were instructed to put into effect by Dec. 27. The railroad executives in applying to the commission last week suggested that the general 10 per cent decrease on agricultural products which they contemplated should apply to the Western grains and hay as well as to the other commodities and become a substitute for the 16½ per cent.

No mention of this point in the railroad procedure was made by the commission today, except that grain, grain products and hay in Western territory were omitted from the permissory orders accepting the general decrease.

Reductions in New England territory where the financial status of the carriers is held not to justify a full 10 per cent decrease, were also contemplated in the voluntary application last week, and in the commission's order today the roads concerned received permission to make such decreases as they found possible, effective after a five-day notice period.

While the commission swept away all administrative barriers to the 10 per cent decrease, it was pointed out that further steps would have to be taken by the railroad managements before the lower rate basis actually comes into effect. The commission's failure to consider the 10 per cent decrease on grains and hay, as a substitute for the greater reduction it had ordered previously, it was said, might bring about proceedings and conference.

At the same time the commission's investigation into the reasonableness of the general level of transportation rates in the United States will begin next week, and if the railroads are disposed to withdraw their voluntary offer, the tariffs on the agricultural products may be left to adjudication in that proceeding.

MORSE CABLES THAT HE SAILS TOMORROW

Financier Sends Reply to Attorney-General's Order to Return Immediately.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Charles W. Morse, ship builder and financier, who sailed for France a few days before it became publicly known that his ship contracts were to be made subject to grand jury inquiry, notified Attorney-General Daugherty late today that he would return to the United States, sailing from Havre Monday night.

Morse sent this cablegram:

"Will sail Monday night.

"C. W. Morse."

This cablegram quickly followed the refusal of the Attorney-General, who is now in Columbus, O., to grant the request of the financier that he be permitted to remain in Europe until Jan. 5, to consult a Rome specialist. Daugherty said he had directed Morse to return by the steamer Paris, after receipt of a cable message from Morse asking that he be permitted to delay his return.

Daugherty also stated that he had advised the American embassy at Paris that steps be taken to bring about the return of Morse on the Paris.

Morse Surmises Government's Action Was Prompted by Civil Suit.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE, France, Dec. 3.—Charles W. Morse told the Associated Press correspondent this evening that the American Government's desire to see him was perhaps the result of a suit brought by the Virginia Ship Building Company against the Shipping Board. The Government's countersuit, in which Morse claims the Virginia Ship Building Company was made a joint defendant, was purely a matter for the civil courts." he said.

The French police officials, who have Morse under surveillance, are showing him much courtesy and consideration. After luncheon today, they asked the financier whether he would like to go for an automobile ride. He accepted the invitation, and in company with the police officials, motored to Etretat. Inspector Aigouy was in the party. They had tea in the afternoon at "La Belle Ernestine," the historic inn where Flaubert and de Maupassant wrote most of their works.

The French Ministry of the Interior today issued an order denying Morse the right to remain in France and requiring him to return to the United States on the first available steamer, which would be the Paris, sailing Monday from Havre. z

17,000 ARMENIAN ORPHANS ADOPTED BY TWO AMERICANS

They Are Acting on Behalf of the American Near East Relief Committee.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ALEXANDROPOL, Armenian Soviet Republic, Nov. 7.—Two Americans have become fathers by adoption of 17,000 homeless Armenian orphans in this far-off city. Milton D. Brown of Malden, Mass., and William Martin of New York have adopted the waifs on behalf of the American Near East Relief Committee. The young men, who have been carrying on relief work in Armenia for many months, plan to take some of the children to America and to have them educated in American schools.

In a report to his organization at Constantinople, Brown declares that Armenia faces the worst winter within its history. He says famine prevails everywhere and that there is a serious shortage of wood and fuel. He declares that up to now the Bolsheviki have taken good care of the Armenians, but that their resources are running low and the Armenians must turn to others for aid.

Brown says that peace and order prevail throughout Armenia, and that the soviet Government undoubtedly saved the country. It is protecting the Armenian population from the aggressions of their ancient masters, the Turks, and the people are allowed to pursue their chosen callings unmolested. Unharassed by war, the people appear to be more content than at any time in recent history. For more than a year now the population has been spared massacres at the hands of the Turks, and the country appears to have entered upon a new era of peace and quiet.

COMPROMISE IS CONSIDERED BY EGAN CLAIMANTS

Counsel for Sister and Boy Negotiating for Settlement of Estate Inventoried at $125,300.

ADDITIONAL $32,000 FOUND ON DEPOSIT

St. Patrick's Church Records Show James W. Egan Was Christened as Son of William T. Egan.

A compromise settlement of the complicated estate of William T. Egan, Democratic city committeeman and constable, who was mysteriously murdered by gangsters Oct. 31 in front of his saloon at 1400 Franklin avenue, is being considered by counsel representing contesting claimants, it was learned yesterday.

At the same time, it was announced that the estate, originally inventoried by the Public Administrator at $97,539.06, has been increased to approximately $125,300 by the discovery of $32,000 which Egan had deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., as a constable's account.

Following an exhaustive investigation of Egan's records, extending through the eight years that he was constable in Justice of the Peace Gazzolo's court at 620 Chestnut street, Deputy City Comptroller Gunn stated that only $4200 of the account was due the city for reimbursement of litigants who had funds deposited with Constable Egan at the time he was murdered.

The Public Administrator will take charge of the $32,000 tomorrow and after turning the $4200 over to the City Treasurer will apply the remaining $27,800 to the estate.

Quick Settlement Expected.

To what extent the negotiations for a settlement have progressed has not been made known, as counsel interested in the case would not discuss the subject, but it was learned from a reliable source that the opposing claimants, rather than participate in a long drawn out legal fight, are willing to make concessions, and the only matter under consideration concerns the terms under which the settlement is to be made.

As is known, two persons, thus far, have appeared who claim to be nearest of kin to Egan. They are James W. Egan, 16 years old, of 3605 Page boulevard, who asserts that he is the son and only heir of the former Democratic leader of the Fifth Ward, and the latter's sister, Mrs. Mamie Woelfel of 4551 Arlington avenue, who in applying for authority to administer the estate, alleges that Egan never was married and was not survived by a child.

Other persons, as has been told, have presented claims against the estate, claiming to have entrusted various sums of money to Egan, who, they say, acted as their private banker. It is known that Egan did have about $10,000 belonging to friends, and they have been informed after a permanent administrator has been appointed their claims will be investigated. A report that a number of fictitious claims against the estate had been presented was denied yesterday by persons who have had an intimate knowledge of Egan's financial affairs.

Boy's Christening Recorded.

The records of St. Patrick's Church, Sixth and Biddle streets, in which parish William T. Egan resided during his entire lifetime, show that James W. Egan was christened there Jan. 22, 1905, as the son of William T. Egan and Nonie Bruen. His spiritual sponsors were Nellie Noble, who later became the wife of William T. Egan's brother, Thomas Egan, who has since died, and Thomas Kane. The latter, who was known as "Red" Kane, died in 1910, a year after he had shot and killed "Yellow Kid" Mohrle in the corridor of the old Four Courts. The Rev. T. J. Aylward, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church, officiated at the baptism.

The boy was born in December, 1904, in a house near Second and Biddle streets, which then was the home of Mrs. Woelfel, who is applicant for letters of administration. A year after James Egan's birth, William T. Egan and Nonie Bruen separated. The boy continued to live with his mother and was supported by Egan up to the time of the latter's death. Recently, when the boy was summoned into the Juvenile Court as a neglected child, William T. Egan interceded for him and informed the court that he was the boy's father.

"POST CHRISTMAS MAIL EARLY," DEPARTMENT ASKS ST. LOUISANS

Special Instructions to Be Emphasized in Public Schools to Avoid Holiday Congestion.

A special communication appealing to boys and girls is being sent through the schools by Postmaster-General Hays requesting that Christmas parcels be mailed this week to avoid the great congestion and confusion in the postal service that otherwise will result.

Postmaster Selph has requested that the letter be read in the St. Louis schools tomorrow. It points out that 20,000,000 letters and 8,000,000 parcels go through the postoffices each day in normal times and that this number is increased many times in the holiday season. Of the 20,000,000 letters at least 2,000,000 are not properly addressed, which causes serious delay.

All are urged to write legibly in ink, or with a typewriter, using no abbreviations, spelling out the name of the State and placing a return address in the upper left-hand corner of the letter or parcel.

O'FALLON FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

Doubt Raised as to Legality of Appointment of Speaker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 3.—Gov. Hyde today announced he would tender to Samuel F. O'Fallon of Oregan, Holt County, Speaker of the House of Representatives, appointment as Circuit Judge in the Fifth Circuit, to succeed Judge Alonzo D. Burnes, who died Thursday.

Attorneys in Jefferson City today expressed doubt of the legality of the appointment of O'Fallon, calling attention to a provision of the Constitution that "No Senator or Representative shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any office under this State, or any municipality thereof." O'Fallon was elected to the Legislature for a term ending in January, 1923.

APPLE WEEK—
In Celebrating This Event—Buy from Remley

Another strayed carload. Grown and packed by Dr. A. M. Gaebler, a St. Louisan, who owns the grandest and most elaborate apple orchard in Pyette Valley at Emmett, Idaho. This district is the most celebrated in the world, and the apples raised in this vicinity are known for their delightful, luscious flavor, and their long-keeping qualities. St. Louis should be proud of the fact that we have such a progressive man as Dr. A. M. Gaebler in our city. These apples have a wonderful color and are the last word in scientific production, and are absolutely free of defects and blemishes. Are packed in bushel boxes, ranging from 80s to 200s, and are the same pack and grade from top to bottom. We suggest from now on until New Year's—"Eat Apples"—buy 'em by the box. "Anita Brand."

JAMES EADS HOW ADVOCATES PAY FOR MEN OUT OF WORK

St. Louis Man Addresses National Conference of the Unemployed at Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 3.—Deploring what they termed widespread unemployment throughout the country, speakers at a national conference of unemployed here today made a plea for governmental aid for all persons out of work and for a Government system of pensions for the aged.

James Eads How of St. Louis, a national trustee of the Brotherhood of Welfare Workers; Nicholas Klein, Cincinnati attorney, and Robert Irwin of St. Louis, were speakers at the opening session.

Decision was made to send a committee to Washington "to picket the Capitol and White House and to take any other steps deemed advisable to bring the unemployment situation to the attention of Congress and the American people."

How urged that the Government make weekly cash payments to men out of work.

"Even a small amount for each worker every week would eliminate much suffering," he said.

William Z. Foster is scheduled to address a mass meeting of unemployment here tomorrow afternoon, speaking on conditions in Russia.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Henry Lincoln Johnson, negro national committeeman from Georgia, called today on President Harding and on leaving the White House declared there was no discussion of the rejection by the Senate on an appointment which would have made him Recorder of Deeds in the District of Columbia. Politics only was discussed, Johnson asserted.

POLICE BELIEVE EGAN'S SLAYERS KILLED RULOFF

Theory Is That Friend Knew Too Much About Killing of Politician and Was Feared as a Witness.

INQUEST TO BE RESUMED TOMORROW

Man Slain in Restaurant Was One of Gang That Held Up Gamblers in Hot Springs Hotel in 1919.

The Coroner's inquest into the murder of George Ruloff, friend of the late William T. Egan, which occurred about noon Friday in a restaurant at 1318½ Franklin avenue, will be resumed tomorrow morning. The inquest was opened yesterday morning, but was adjourned to give the police further opportunity for investigation.

Detectives are working on the theory that Ruloff was killed because he knew too much, or had talked as if he knew too much, about the murder of Egan, Constable and Democratic committeeman, who was shot down in front of the saloon run in his name at 1400 Franklin avenue, Oct. 31.

Ruloff was one of four men who held up a party of New York gamblers in a hotel in Hot Springs, Ark., in March, 1919, and took $8000 from them. The robbery took place on the fourth floor of the hotel, just after the gamblers had come in from the racetrack with a large amount of money. The robbers fired several shots in the course of the holdup, and they made their way out of the hotel by threatening the elevator girl and persons in the lobby with their revolvers.

Ruloff and Berger Caught.

Ruloff and James Berger were caught, carrying a considerable part of the stolen money, while the two other robbers escaped. They pleaded in their defense that they were recovering money taken from them in a crooked dice game. A mistrial resulted, but on the second trial the two were sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary at Little Rock. After they had served about a month, they were pardoned by State Senator Ben McFerrin, who was acting as Governor while Gov. C. H. Brough was out of the State. The pardon caused vehement complaint in Hot Springs, and Circuit Judge Wood of that city issued a scathing denunciation of the acting Governor.

Work in behalf of the pardon of Ruloff was done by Egan, State Senator Kinney of St. Louis, and Ruloff's lawyer in Hot Springs.

After his return to St. Louis, Ruloff became a hanger-on at Egan's saloon and at the restaurant of Joseph Cavasino, who was an Egan adherent. Ruloff lived at the home of his sister, Emma, at 1403 Franklin avenue, across the street from the Egan saloon, and he frequently looked after the restaurant, at 1318½ Franklin, for Cavasino.

Ruloff attended the wake for Egan, and his funeral, and on the day of the funeral he was heard to threaten vengeance against the men who killed "Willie," as he termed his dead friend. Since then, he was heard to say that he was "getting close to" the men who killed Egan, or who paid to have him killed. He did not say that he had himself seen Egan's slayers, but others believed that, from his quarters across the street, he might have seen enough to be a dangerous witness against the slayers, if they should be caught.

No Attempt at Robbery.

These circumstances, and the fact that Ruloff was killed by five bullets, fired evidently at close range, with no attempt at robbery of his person or the restaurant, have caused the detectives' belief that he was killed by the slayers of Egan, or by someone interested in their safety, as a precautionary measure.

Cavasino left Ruloff in charge of his restaurant at 11 a. m. Friday, and went downtown. Returning about 12:30, he found Ruloff dying in the storeroom. A negro living across the alley had heard shots.

Eight men have been arrested on suspicion. One of these was Samuel Rutstein, 1027 North Eleventh street. Policeman Dolan, who arrested him, testified at the inquest yesterday that Rutstein told him he saw Ruloff go into the restaurant shortly before 1 o'clock and a few minutes later Rutstein crossed the street and tried the door and found it locked. Rutstein refused to testify on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

John ("Puggy") Dunn, who has been sought since the Egan murder, is said to have taken an oath to kill everybody connected with the murder in 1916 of his brother, Harry ("Cherries") Dunn. Egan was at the Typo Press Club when Harry Dunn was killed and Dunn's friends have said that Egan could have prevented the killing. Chief of Detectives Hoagland has information that Dunn has been hiding in Illinois within two hours' ride of St. Louis.

Two Held on Liquor Charge.

Thomas Swandrick, 70 years old, and Grady Johnson, 40, were arrested at their home in Marissa, Ill., yesterday when the town Marshal found 25 gallons of mash in the basement.

Are You The Man You Used To Be ?

RUGGED health need not be confined to the few years of youth. With proper nourishment, and a reasonable amount of exercise, there is no reason why any man should not retain vigorous, physical fitness for years.

If you feel run down and physically inferior to the man you used to be, it is an indication that your food is not being properly assimilated and converted into firm tissue and muscular and mental energy.

Scientists, experimenting with the recently discovered vitamines, have proved that they are the substances which turn food into tissue and physical strength. They have found that in cooking, canning, pasteurization and milling most of the vitamines in your food are neutralized or destroyed. With an insufficient supply of vitamines in your diet, bodily weakness is inevitable.

It is not necessary to put yourself on a diet to increase your vitamine supply. Pure, extracted and concentrated vitamines can now be obtained and added to your regular menu in the form of

Alexander Vitamines

(Guaranteed Pure Concentrates)

Your physician will tell you that vitamines are one of the most important discoveries of modern medicine. Physicians are prescribing Alexander Vitamines for all kinds of weaknesses and diseases.

Alexander Vitamines are guaranteed pure vitamines. In convenient capsules, they contain all of the three types—fat soluble A; water soluble B, and water soluble C—which are necessary to the sustenance of life and the conversion of food into useful energy.

Alexander Vitamines are not to be confused with certain products that are now upon the market which do not contain all of these three vitamine types and in which drugs are substituted. Needless to say, with these products you feel the effects, principally, of the drugs.

Consult your physician if you need drugs—let him only prescribe them.

Alexander Vitamines contain no drugs of any kind. Neither are they a medicine. They are simply concentrated vitamines of the three essential types, extracted from pure foods and put up for your use in 5-grain capsules. They are healthful and absolutely pure.

At All Druggists

ALEXANDER VITAMINES

ALEXANDER VITAMINES are sold by all good druggists, and may be safely used by any one, of any age, and in any condition. They include all of the vitamines known to science and not merely the so-called "yeast vitamines." Begin their use today and in a short time you will find the old-time "pep" returning.

PACKERS AND WORKMEN PLAN FINISH FIGHT

Employes Notified Strike Will Mean Loss of Jobs—Unions to Start Picketing Monday.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—A fight to the finish between the "big five" packers and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America was in prospect tonight as each side virtually finished its plans for the strike of union packing house employes ordered to begin Monday.

The packers today posted notices that employes who go out on strike will lose their jobs and also advertised for men to take the places of strikers. The union officials were equally firm and indicated they had no intention whatever of receding from their stand when they advised packing house workers in Kansas City, Kan., to disregard orders of the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations to appear before it and to put the strike into effect. The Court of Industrial Relations issued later, however, an order restraining either side from taking any action whatever.

Plant assemblies, the organization composed of packer and workmen representatives, by which the packers propose to settle all questions affecting their employes, held meetings today in several cities and issued statements advising the workmen to leave all questions of wages and working conditions to these organizations.

The packers expressed confidence that the walkout will not seriously affect production, asserting that few men will follow the union orders and that the union's strength is not sufficient to cripple the industry.

The union has contended that a majority of the packing house employes are unionized.

While union officials have asserted that peaceful picketing will be carried out beginning Monday morning at 6 o'clock, more than 200 policemen were today assigned to reserve duty in the stockyards district by Chief of Police Fitzmorris, who stated he believed this number of men will be able to deal with any disorders that may arise.

Kansas Court Orders Both Sides to Continue Present Status.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 3.—The Kansas Court of Industrial Relations late today issued a temporary restraining order to packers and union officials in Kansas City, Kan., to "continue the present status, terms and conditions of employment." The order, according to Richard J. Hopkins, Attorney-General of Kansas, constitutes a virtual injunction against the strike called for Monday, Dec. 5.

At the same time, Judge W. H. McCamish of the District Court of Wyandotte County, Kansas, acting at the instance of the Court of Industrial Relations and the State Attorney-General, issued an order to 16 packing house union officials who ignored subpenas issued by the Court of Industrial Relations, to appear before that body at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

WAMSGANZ EXECUTORS ASK BROKERS TO SURRENDER STOCK

Judge Holtcamp Issues Citation Involving 199,000 Shares of Oil Companies.

Ownership of 25,000 shares of Turman Oil Co. stock and 174,000 shares of the Okeh Oil Co., is involved in a petition in the Probate Court filed by executors of the estate of Gustav Wamsganz, president of the Union Candy Co., who died last June. In response to the petition, Judge Holtcamp has cited Robert G. and Lawrence D. Miller, brokers, with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, to show cause, if any, on Dec. 16, why they should not surrender the stock to the estate.

It is alleged that at the time of Wamsganz' death, he owned the Turman stock, which was in possession of the Millers. A similar allegation is made with respect to the Okeh stock.

The executors, Hugh D. McCorkle and Irwin J. Hesley, desire to list the stock with other assets of the estate, which have been inventoried at $103,779. The value of the stock in controversy is not mentioned. A suit was recently filed in Oklahoma by several dissatisfied stockholders objecting to some of the officers of the Turman company.

SEVERAL CIRCUIT JUDGES TO BE REASSIGNED TOMORROW

Judges Grimm, Killoren and Miller May Have to Draw Lots for Criminal Benches.

Reassignment of several of the Circuit Judges will be made tomorrow, effective Jan. 1. Judges Hall and Landwehr, who preside in two of the criminal court divisions, will be reassigned to civil divisions, and two Judges now in the civil branch will take their plaesc.

It was said that Judges Grimm, Killoren and Franklin Miller are on the slate to serve in the criminal branch, but as there are only two vacancies, it may be necessary for the three Judges to draw lots. A change also will be made in the Assignment Court, where Judge Hartmann presides, his term in that division expiring Jan. 1. He will be reassigned to a jury court. It is probable Judge Taylor will be made Assignment Judge.

Several Judges also are said to be desirous of serving in the Equity Court, where Judge Ferris presides. However, if he prefers to remain, a change may not be made, it was stated.

Under the rules the Judges take turns serving in the three criminal divisions, the length of service being from one year to 16 months. Judge Hogan will continue to serve in the criminal branch.

He was told that it was not easy to get by and was fined $25 for having gambling paraphernalia in his possession.

Neale's Left Halfback Makes 53-Yard Run for His Team's Final Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 3.—Uncovering speed and consistent driving power, Washington and Jefferson's football team defeated the University of Detroit today and kept its string of victories unbroken for the season. It was the first time this year that Detroit has been beaten.

The visitors showed a dash during the first two periods that carried them to victory.

Detroit rallied in the last half and held the visitors scoreless. Washington and Jefferson scored a touchdown in the first three minutes of play. Blocking a Detroit punt the visitors pushed the ball to the Detroit one-foot line, where Basista carried it over. In the second period Erickson dodged through a broken field for a 53-yard run and a touchdown. Stein kicked each goal after touchdown.

Detroit's safety was scored in the second period, when Brenkert recovered a fumbled forward pass behind his own goal line and was downed by Capt. Ellis.

The lineup and summary:

PIKERS TO ELECT 1922 FOOTBALL CAPTAIN AT ANNUAL DINNER THURSDAY

An announcement was sent out yesterday in reference to the annual "W" dinner of the Washington University Union when students, members of the faculty, alumni and friends of Washington University will do honor to the 1921 football team and the men who have been awarded the "W" on the other athletic teams during the past year. The dinner, which is the fifth annual event of the kind, will be held at the Missouri Athletic Association next Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

Coaches and letter men of the St. Louis High Schools and of the high schools in the county have been invited.

The Washington University orchestra, the band and glee club will help to enliven the occasion and mass singing of Washington songs will be a feature.

Coach George L. Rider will be one of the principal speakers. Election of a captain for the 1922 football team will be held during the dinner.

NAVY TEAM DROPPED FROM 1922 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE OF PRINCETON

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 3.—Princeton's 1922 football schedule calls for eight games. The first, Sept. 30, with Johns Hopkins, and the final Nov. 18 with Yale at Princeton. The Tigers played only seven contests this year and the extra game has been added to afford more preliminary work.

In general the schedule is much the same as that of this fall. The most important change being ommission of the Navy, whose place is to be taken by the University of Maryland. Johns Hopkins also is a newcomer.

While no announcement has been made, it was generally felt that the Middies would have to be dropped next year because of the arrangement with Chicago, which called for a trip to the West on Oct. 28, only two weeks before Harvard game.

Nebraska, Notre Dame and Centre Prospects on St. L. U. Schedule

Ames, Grinnell, Missouri and Washington Likely to Give Billikens Four Valley Games in 1922—Cornhuskers May Be Brought Here for November Feature.

One of the most impressive schedules since the days when Eddie Cochems had the St. Louis University football teams high in the national ranking is contemplated by the Billiken institution for 1922, according to information that has been given out in comment inspired by the recent action of Washington University in discontinuing the St. Louis U. game as their annual Thanksgiving day feature.

Although the schedule of course is merely in the making, there is strong hope at the Grand avenue school that Nebraska, Notre Dame, Michigan Aggies, Centre, Ames, Grinnell, Missouri and Washington may form the list of 1922 opponents of the Billiken machine.

Coach Steve O'Rourke negotiated at the Missouri Valley Conference meeting for games with Ames and Grinnell and tentative dates were set. Missouri and Washington will be on the list, unless the Billikens decide to scratch the Pikers off their list. That step, however, will not be taken if the older members of the Billiken athletic board prevail. There is some sentiment among the student body and younger alumni for this step, in the nature of reprisal, but it is felt that the natural rivalry between the two local schools calls for a measure of strength which the public wants and is entitled to see. And then, too, there is the financial side of the argument, which from both points of view makes it desirable that the game be played.

Nebraska May Replace Pikers.

Negotiations with Nebraska have been carried on with the hope that the Cornhuskers, who ranked with the best this season, and will have as good or better prospects next season, may be the Thanskigiving day guests in 1922.

However, Nebraska has a game scheduled with Notre Dame Nov. 30, which may block that prospective feature.

Such an impressive schedule in prospect indicates that St. Louis University intends to go after football with renewed enthusiasm and power, and it is pointed out that negotiations with Valley elevens indicates that the institution does not intend to drop the rules and regulations called for by the Missouri Valley organization.

Missouri Date Not Set.

The date for the Missouri game has not been decided. The Billikens are holding out for the last Saturday in October, while the Tigers prefer that the game come earlier in the season. However, the athletic directors are sure to get together.

Dissatisfaction has been expressed by many alumni of St. Louis U. at the school's failure to attain a higher perch in national football circles and there are strong factors at work to boost the school out of football mediocrity. There are many legitimate ways—not only with the law and letter of all conference rules, but highly praiseworthy—by which a school may build a strong football machine and the Billikens, it is said, are determined to make great advances. Washington's action may prove the very spark needed to start the Billiken dynamos.

Eggler Elected Billiken Captain

Quarterback, Who Starred in Game With Washington, Is Honored.

Clarence Eggler, who played quarterback on the 1921 St. Louis University football team, was elected captain of the 1922 eleven at a meeting of the players held last night at the Planters Hotel. Eggler proved one of the stars of the Billikens in the final game of the season with Washington.

Seventeen men were awarded the varsity letter and sweaters. Those so rewarded were Betz, Donovan, Drace, Eggler, Capt. Finnegan, Greenan, Gerraghty, Horton, Kalkman, Marion Webb, Todt, Roche, Quirk, McConachie, McCarthy, Malloy and Matheson.

Twenty-three freshmen were honored with the first year numerals. The successful yearlings were L. Halloran, J. Halloran, McCarthy, Luepke, Denvir, Fusz, Pfeifer, Schwartz, Pranger, Buechele, Poos, Buschell, Avis, Cremmins, Reuter, Duhmus, Reis, Harlow, Molloy, Wendle, Schaefering, Hough, Schmidt, Kelly.

A. G. Eberle, faculty member of the athletic council, in a talk stated that St. Louis University would have a big team next season, but that they would be secured in an unquestionable manner and that the Missouri Valley eligibility rules would be lived up to.

FORWARD PASSES AID LOUISIANA STATE IN BEATING MISSISSIPPI

By the Associated Press.

STARKVILLE, Miss., Dec. 3.—Louisiana State University Tigers, by long end runs and use of the forward pass, snatched a 17-to-14 victory from the Mississippi A. & M. College Maroons here today, in one of the hardest fought gridiron battles ever seen on the local grounds. The teams were evenly matched and had the contest lasted a few minutes longer the score might have been reversed, as in the last period Mississippi A. & M. made heavy gains. A final rally of the Louisianians enabled them to hold the Maroons close to the Mississippi goal line.

In the first period the Aggies were on the aggressive and took the ball through the line for long gains. Just before the end of the period L. S. U. regained the ball and Ives made a run of 40 yards around left end, but failed to score.

In the first play of the second period McFarland plunged through the Aggies' line for a big gain and a touchdown. McFarland kicked goal.

Following a forward pass, McGowan to Cameron, for a gain of 40 yards, McGowan went around right end for a touchdown for the Aggies and kicked goal.

Ives, for L. S. U., made a 40-yard run around end following a forward pass and after reaching the Aggies' 20-yard line, made a successful try for a field goal.

Little was then put in as a substitute for McGowan and made a 40-yard run around end after a pass, and then went through tackle for 15 yards and a touchdown. Wilson kicked goal.

Neither side scored in the last period.

LEADERS IN MID-WEST TOURNEY HOLD PLACES

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 3.—Bowlers from Omaha, Chicago, Indianapolis and several Iowa cities were unable to get within the first standdings in either the singles or doubles events of the Middle West Bowling Association's tournament here today.

The tournament, which has been under way since Nov. 18, will end Monday afternoon.

A number of star teams from the larger cities of the Middle West will be here to compete tomorrow.

Western League Opposes Draft

President Tearney Also Opposed to Farming of Optional Players—Attendance Increased.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Club owners of the Western League, meeting here today, decided to play a schedule of 168 games for the 1922 season and authorized President A. R. Tearney to decide the draft problem for the organization at the meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues in Buffalo, Dec. 6.

The action of the magnates empowering President Tearney to settle the draft question means that the Western League will vote in opposition to the restoration of the draft. President Tearney is strongly opposed to the draft and also is against the farming of optional players.

M. J. Finn of Omaha and Jack Holland of Oklahoma City were appointed a committee to draw up a schedule for the 1922 season and present it for adoption at a meeting in St. Joseph, Mo., on Feb. 20. The Western League played 168 games last year.

Attendance at the league games in 1921 exceeded the attendance in 1920 by 10,000. The total attendance was 647,101, with the Omaha club leading the league. Omaha, in its home games drew 120,802, and Oklahoma City was second with 115,538. The pennant winning Wichita club drew 112,095, and Tulsa was fourth with 103,752. Des Moines drew 72,818, St. Joseph 65,541, Joplin 60,334 and Sioux City 58,321.

The sale of the Sioux City club to Walter "Chick" Mattick and L. P. McKenna of St. Paul was ratified.

The club owners in attendance today were William Friel, Tulsa; Frank Isbell, Wichita; Jack Holland, Oklahoma City; Chick Mattick, Sioux City; Barney Birch of Omaha, Thomas Hayden of Joplin, Lee Keyser of Des Moines and George Belding of St. Joseph. They will remain here over Sunday and will depart with other baseball leaders for Buffalo on Monday to attend the national minor league meeting.

Roberts' Team Wins.

Coach Roberts' team of former high school football stars defeated Coach Savage's eleven at High School Field yesterday afternoon in a benefit game. The proceeds, which will total about $100, will go to the Red Cross. Weather held the attendance down to about 750 persons.

Mercer Signs Strupper.

Everett Strupper, former Georgia Tech star, who was an all-Southern selection for three successive years, has signed a contract to come to Mercer University next September as assistant coach.

Two Big 10 Teams To Play Against Eastern Elevens

Iowa Will Meet Yale Oct. 14, While Chicago Opposes Princeton Oct. 28.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Coach Howard Jones' Iowa champions, the 1000 per cent eleven of the 1921 Western Conference, stepped into the front row of football competition today when they took on Ohio State, runner-up for the title, and Yale, one of the strongest teams of the East, for games in next year's schedule. It will be the first time Iowa has played either team.

The game with Yale will open the Hawkeyes' season Oct. 14, at New Haven, Conn., and the Ohio game will be played at Columbus, Nov. 18. Coach Jack Wilce, of the Buckeyes, said today at the conference of Big Ten coaches, where the 1922 schedules were drawn up, that he was glad to schedule an Iowa game as he believed it a good policy to take on new opponents. Chicago will have Princeton as her guest Oct. 28 for the only other Big Ten intersectional game now in sight.

Notre Dame broke into conference schedules for two games next fall, one with Indiana and another with Wisconsin, although the latter is tentative. Coach Knute Rockne, who was here today, also has games with the Army at West Point, Nov. 17, and with Nebraska at Lincoln, Nov. 30.

Iowa Has Four Big Ten Tilts.

The champion Hawkeyes will return from the Yale game to meet Illinois at Urbana for Illinois' first conference game, the following week. Minnesota, Purdue and Northwestern complete the Hawkeyes' schedule.

Wisconsin will meet three strong conferences team in Chicago, Michigan and Illonois, while Indiana and Minnesota fill out the Badger schedule. A tentative game with Notre Dame for Oct. 14 was scheduled.

Ohio State will play her usual trio of games with Michigan, Chicago and Illinois, the latter game finishing the season on Illinois Field. Chicago, departing from her usual custom, will go to Columbus. Ohio State will make one long trip—to Minneapolis for the Minnesota game—on Oct. 28. The Michigan game at Columbus will dedicate Ohio State's new stadium, a $1,500,000 project which will seat 63,000 people. Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, with the usual game against the Michigan Aggies, complete the Michigan schedule.

Princeton to Come West.

Coach Zuppke's Illini have three games away from home—all with strong teams, Michigan, Wisconsin and Chicago, each of which defeated Illinois this year. The Iowa game opens the season and the Ohio game completes the schedule, both on Illinois Field, with Northwestern, whom the Illini have not played for several years, holding a tentative date at Urbana for Nov. 4.

Princeton, humbled by Chicago in the East this year, will venture out to the frontier Oct. 28. After the Maroons have played Northwestern and Purdue on the two Saturdays preceding, which should put them in good shape for the Princeton combat. Chicago then plays Ohio State and Columbus in her only away-from-home game on Nov. 11 and meets Illinois and Wisconsin on Stagg Field the two weeks following.

Members of the Western Conference Faculty Committee also awarded four championship meets. The University of Iowa obtained the outdoor track and field meet, which will be at Iowa City June 3. The swimming championships went to the University of Chicago, the meet to be held on March 17 and 18 and on those same dates the indoor track and field meet will be decided in Patton Gymnasium, Northwestern University, Evanston. Purdue will be entered in the cross-country runners on Nov. 25.

HEAVY BAYLOR ELEVEN GAINS 24-0 VICTORY

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 3.—Baylor University cleanly outplayed the Mississippi College eleven, today, winning, 24 to 0. The Texas team outweighed its rivals and displayed more initiative and resourcefulness. Breaks of the game also favored the Texans. The tricky Baylor offense counted three touchdowns and one field goal.

Wesley Bradshaw, Baylor's all-Southwestern quarter, directed his team with excellent judgment and made end runs and punt returns which sparkled throughout the game. Capt. Hale of the Choctaws was the chief ground gainer for his team. He also starred on the defense and his punting was the best seen in Dallas this year.

He was ably supported by Sheffield at center, W. G. Stuart at tackle and Everett at guard.

Tennis Body to Meet.

A meeting of the East St. Louis Tennis Association will be held Tuesday night, Dec. 6, in the East St. Louis Y. M. C. A. building, Sixteenth and Summit avenues. All members are urged to attend as important matters will be presented for consideration. The East St. Louis association came into existence last month and next Tuesday's meeting will complete the details in connection with the organization work. Officers of the tennis body are: J. L. Brewer, president; William C. Adair, vice president, and Russell Reader, secretary.

Principia Plays McKinley.

Principia Academy will open its basketball season next Friday night against the McKinley High School five. The second teams of both schools will meet in preliminary contest. Coach McRoberts of the Academy has been giving the basket squad stiff practice for the opening game. The South Side school has a good squad out for practice sessions and a close contest is looked for when the teams meet.

Penn State Team Beats Washington In Tilt on Coast

Sundodgers Fight Hard in Every Period, but Lose by 21-7 Score.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 3.—Penn State's Lions fought their way to a 21 to 7 victory over the University of Washington Sundodgers today in a game that was hard fought in every one of the four periods. Penn State scored touchdowns in each of the first three periods. Washington's supreme effort came in the third period when Capt. Ray Eckmann got away for 40 yards and the Washington backs smashed down from midfield for the Sundodgers' only touchdown.

The Sundodger linesmen were unable to fathom the Easterners' attack until the closing moments of the third period, and the fast Penn State backs gained almost at will, using a varied attack.

It was not until Penn State had scored her three touchdowns and the third period was well advanced that Washington took the actual offensive. On the kick-off, after Penn's last goal, Capt. Ray Eckmann, playing his final game for the Purple and Gold, received and, breaking straight through the center of the advancing Penn State line, carried the ball to midfield on a long straight run that brought the spectators to their feet with a roar. The Sundodgers had their blood up and smashed irresistibly toward the goal, three, four and five yards at a time. Nearly every play was through the line. Eckmann, who had carried the ball repeatedly, took it over from the one-yard line for Washington's only touchdown.

Penn State Scores Early.

Penn State scored early in the first period, Wilson, Redinger and Killinger carrying the ball down from kickoff in an onslaught that halted at no resistance. Knabb went over the last mark from the 1-yard line and Killinger kicked goal.

The Easterners repeated in the second period, a 10-yard pass, Killinger to McCollum, sending the ball over. Killinger again kicked goal. A long drive down the field in the early moments of the third frame enabled Redinger to score Penn's last touchdown of the game. Killinger kicking goal.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. Davis

WHY?

I HAVE a human questionnaire
In my domestic plant;
He wants to know the why and where
Of everything extant.
"What makes the auto wheels go round?
What makes the airplanes fly?"
And when the problems I expound
He promptly asks me, "Why?"

I'm patient with the little bloke
And lend a willing ear;
He wants to know what makes the smoke
And where it goes from here.
But when I tell the little limb
It goes up to the sky
In order to get rid of him
I've got to tell him why.

In questioning my little one
Is eager and intense;
Compared to him T. Edison
Would look like 30 cents.
Of knowledge I have quite a store
But he will pump me dry.
If told that two times two were four
I know he'd ask me "why."

QUITE SO.

Footballically speaking, it might be said that the Praying Colonels were the Centre of attraction this season.

In the meantime, the California Bears are anxious to have some team from the East or Middle West to come out to their native heath on New Year's day and then gang' em.

TOO TRUE.

ALTHOUGH "still" waters may run deep,
We're here to say they don't run cheap.

There is talk in New York of organizing a boxers' union. Some calamity if the entire country should ever be tied up by a box fighters' strike.

One of the peculiar angles to the boxing game is that a fighter is never all in till he is knocked out.

THERE was a man in our town
Who was a firebug;
At every fire, great or small,
You'd always see his mug.
He'd run with all his might and main
Some little blaze to see.
But otherwise he was as sane
As any guy could be.

Tulane Players Attack Referee

Finley Refuses to Allow Score After Forward Pass—Alabama Wins, 14-7.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 3.—The University of Alabama defeated Tulane by a score of 14-7 in a post-season game here this afternoon. The contest ended in an attack on Referee Finley by spectators and students of Tulane, when he ruled that a 50-yard forward pass from Legendre to Maloney, who ran ten yards for the touchdown to tie the score was illegal as he had blown the whistle for time on the period.

All newspapermen at the game agreed that the ball was in play when the whistle blew, but Referee Finley ruled otherwise and had to be escorted from the field by 12 policemen.

"Stumpy" Bartlett and "Rosy" Rosenfeld starred for the winners, together with Capt. Al Clemens and "Shorty" Cooper on the line.

Legendre and "Dizzy" Fitts, big Tulane tackle, played the best and most consistent game for Tulane.

Unsworth	Right end	Newton
B. Brown	Quarterback	Bartlett

Illinois Eleven Has Beaten West Frankfort and Swedish Americans This Year.

The Scullins of the St. Louis Soccer League, last season's finalists in the United States Football Association championship series, will get the first test against out-of-town competition at High School Field this afternoon. Brady's men are scheduled to oppose Johnston City, Ill., in a third-round U. S. F. A. clash. The game starts at 2:30 o'clock.

A preliminary tilt between the DeAndreis, leaders in the St. Louis League, and the Ben Millers, will be played at 1:15 o'clock. Thirty-minute halves will be played in this battle and 45-minute periods in the cup clash.

In meeting Johnston City, the Scullins will face an eleven made up mostly of English-born athletes. Only three men, Reeves, Kolar and McGill, are American-born. One of the stars of the eleven is F. Blockley, a fullback, who played here some years ago with the Pullmans of Chicago.

O'Hanlon Has Bad Knee.

Johnston City has played two cup games this season. In the first round West Frankfort was defeated 1—0 after two hours. The Swedish-Americans were downed, 3—2, in the second round. Johnston City is in the Southern Illinois League, and in three tilts has counted 18 goals, according to Secretary Robert Leck.

The Johnston City lineup will be picked from the following players: Gallagher, J. Hope, W. Hope, Reeves, Kolar, McGill, Turpin, Martin, Hardy, Pearson, Blockley, Baker, Murray and Woods.

Brady will use all his regulars with the possible exception of Tommy O'Hanlon, who has a bad knee.

Harvard-Yale Contest Produced Thrill of Season, Edgren Writes

Aldrich's Desperate Tackle of Chapin in Fourth Period Most Dramatic Play of Year, He Asserts — Eastern Football Without a Champion This Campaign.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1921.)

THE greatest of all football seasons, over except for occasional post-season contests, has produced its share of surprises and sharp reversals of form. Yale figured on all the dope sheets, a fair favorite over Harvard, and the football sharps agree that so far as ground gaining was concerned the Blue team made good on the dope—but not in the scoring.

For members of the famous Big Three, Yale and Harvard surely played some ragged football at times, mixing blunders and mistakes with magnificent plays in a way that knocked the props from under all calculations. But there were sensational moments, in that rip-tearing last period, that gave the spectators thrills never known where everything runs with machine-like smoothness and accuracy.

The keenest gridiron moment I've seen this season came in that fourth period, when Yale's furious rally carried the ball in resistless plunges down the field and within easy striking distance of Harvard's goal. It seemed sure Yale would score and go back into the lead. Every drive into the resisting Crimson line brought a gain.

But Harvard tightened its grip on the last bit of Harvard territory, and Aldrich essayed a forward pass, on the third down. There had been little forward passing, so far, and what there was might have been better done by any high school team. So a forward pass at that moment was a hazardous thing.

A Dramatic Moment.

The ball went back to Aldrich where he stood in position as if to kick. He straightened up, turned from side to side, and then hurled the ball over toward the Harvard goal posts. It was a very neat pass. The only trouble with it was that there wasn't a Yale man within ten yards of its line of flight, and it popped straight into the hands of Chapin of Harvard, newly in the game substituting for Coburn, and hardly expecting much luck.

But if Chapin was surprised he didn't show it. Like a flash he darted straight down the field toward Yale's goal. There were no Blue warriors in his path, and before any could cut across four Harvard men ran into a perfect line of interference, cutting off all attack as Chapin edged out toward the side of the field for more running room.

It looked as if Chapin could jog along to a touchdown without any trouble at all. He was absolutely protected, and he was far out ahead of every other man on the field.

The Comeback of Aldrich.

And here came the dramatic touch, the startling surprise. As Aldrich threw that pass I saw him stiffen in his tracks, goggle-eyed, as he realized there was no Yale man rushing down to take the ball—that the signals had failed and the end in whom he depended had gone headlong into the line instead of down the field.

He must have felt, even while the ball was in the air, that the pass had thrown away Yale's chance to win. Next thing his startled eyes saw was Chapin dashing down the field with the ball tucked under his arm. And the line of Harvard's interference sweeping into place to cover him.

Two or three blue-jerseyed men dashed against that interference and were bowled over.

Harvard stands rose up and yelled "Touchdown — touchdown — touchdown!"

Then suddenly there was Aldrich running straight down the field but with the interference between him and Chapin going like the wind straight through the ruck of Yale's dazed tacklers. His hand had thrown the ball, and his hand must repair the damage. It didn't look as though any Duffey, or Wefers, or Paddock, or Drew ever went faster. Near midfield Aldrich passed and turned the point of the interference, brushed against it, and flung himself desperately at the flying Chapin.

It was a matter of inches. His outstretched left hand and wrist seemed barely to graze Chapin's shoulder, but the Harvard runner went spinning over the line to a sprawling tumble, while Aldrich plunged headlong to the ground. They lay there, 10 feet apart, both knocked silly by the fall. And so far as that play was concerned Yale was saved. A wonderful tackle—as close a thing to a miss without being one as ever was seen on any gridiron.

There were more important plays, ground-gaining plays and scoring plays, in that last of the big Eastern college games, but none with a more breath-taking thrill at the end of it.

Should Vary Schedule

Big Bill Edwards, former Princeton player and a figure in the game for many years, has a proposition he thinks the Big Three should listen to. It is to rotate the games, instead of having Yale-Harvard always last on the list. With one playing Princeton a week before the final game, and the other resting by putting subs into a smaller game, the last game is always one-sided. Princeton really beat Yale for Harvard, Big Bill Edwards says, because the Yale team was stale after its battle with the Tigers, and Harvard was fresh. It would be better, since there is nothing to choose in "class" between these three, to rotate the schedule year after year, shifting the positions of the three big games.

Eastern football is without a champion this year, although Penn State seems to have the best team, and Lafayette ranks next. Both of these colleges are playing a more advanced game of football than any in the "Big Three," which is a somewhat new situation. Besides that, Princeton lost to Chicago, 9—0.

Out near the middlewestern section Notre Dame has been showing some championship football, and on an Eastern invasion beat the Army by a score of 28—0, and Rutgers 48—0. Notre Dame plays modern football—the most modern there is.

One of the Notre Dame backs, August Desch, looks like an All-American. He is fast as a streak, and handles the forward pass with machine-gun accuracy. He doesn't wear any pads in his football uniform—wears a loose, light jersey so that his arms will be as free as a baseball pitcher's, light moleskins and light shoes—everything else sacrificed for speed.

In fact, pads are not worn at Notre Dame at all. The team goes light—for speed. Speed is the essence of the game, just as it is in many other Western colleges.

Iowa's big team, Middle Western champion, plays the latest style of football, combining a strong line with a perfect air attack and great speed. It was too strong for Notre Dame—which indicated much class.

Since last New Year's Day, when the University of California overwhelmed Ohio in Pasadena, the Bears have attracted a lot of attention in football circles. Last year's team was a marvel on the coast, but this year California has an even more powerful scoring machine, averaging about 40 points a game for the season, and against good, active opponents.

Years ago no one would have expected a college with less than 300 students to show much form. Centre came into the northland last year intending to trim Harvard, and was cleaned up. Centre played a fast open game, and was crushed by Harvard's powerful line. This year Harvard expected Centre to toss the forward pass and use open play, and Centre showed up with a line-crushing bunch that outplayed Harvard at her own game; using modern passing and open play only occasionally. Result, Centre won, 6—0.

FOOTBALL DEFENDED BY EDUCATION OFFICIAL

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Dec. 3.—John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, speaking today before the Massachuettts Teachers' Federation, defended the gridiron against recent charges that football is productive of much profanity among the players under the stress and strain of the game.

Tigert, who acted as an official at the Harvard-Centre game, declared that in this contest, not a word was spoken which would not have been said with propriety in the presence of the player's mothers, sisters and sweethearts.

"Football is a crucible which tests men," he said, "and if it finds them honest, can guarantee them to be honest when temptations arise."

Commissioner Tigert deplored what he said was the tendencsy to reduce taxes at the expense of education funds.

Draft Rule Will Be Discussed at Buffalo Meeting

Class AA Circuits Will Again Oppose Law, Although Change Is Needed Badly.

When the annual meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues is opened at Buffalo, starting Tuesday, there will be one question top-most in the minds of all present. That will be the draft rule. Of course, other business will be transacted by the minor league officials, but from all indications the draft question will hold the center of the floor.

While the meeting will be handled by the minor leaguers, with Secretary John H. Farrell in the chair, the majors will be well represented at the gathering. The "big boys" will be there to see that the "little fellows" do nothing to interfere with the new agreement signed last season. If anything of this sort is done, it will have to be ratified by the majors before becoming effective.

St. Louis' two major league clubs will be well represented. The Browns will have Business Manager Bob Quinn, Manager Lee Fohl and Scout Jack Ryan on hand. The Cardinals will be represented by Manager Branch Rickey, President Samuel Breadon, Scout Charley Barrett and Burt Shotton.

Major Leagues to Meet.

Following the minor league gathering, the St. Louisans will depart for New York, where the annual winter meeting of the majors is scheduled to be held the following week. The American Leaguers will get together Dec. 14.

The chief fight on the draft problem at Buffalo will come from the American Association, International and Pacific Coast, the three Class AA circuits. These organizations are opposed to the majors drafting players from their circuits, and last season were omitted. Indications are that they will stand pat.

However, many of the smaller leagues have suffered, and will attempt to get a higher price for drafted men. Present draft prices are as follows: Class AA, $5000; Class A, $4000; Class B, $2500; Class C, $1500, and Class D, $1000.

Clubs Seek New Talent.

If the Class AA organizations fail to come into the draft agreement at Buffalo it means they will be forced to develop new talent steadily until their teams reach the standard of the major leagues. This would be extremely desirable but for two things: First, the minors cannot afford to pay major league salaries, and second, the majors must have better players or lose patronage.

Of course, there will be the usual trade talk, not only among the minor league managers, but also between the majors and the "little fellows."

From present indications, every major league club is in the field for new talent. While both Quinn and Rickey stated they had nothing definite in regard to trades, they admitted they were on the lookout for talent with which to strengthen their clubs. If anyone has a desirable player for sale both local clubs will make efforts to obtain the athlete.

It is expected, however, that the "big noise" as far as the majors are concerned, will be held over until the following week at New York.

Landis Has Some Ideas.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of the national pastime, has had a full year in office and has certain ideas he would like to have carried out. He will put these things before the officials. Then it also is possible that Judge Landis will wait until the New York meeting to give his decision in the cases of "Babe" Ruth, Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy, Yankee players, who barnstormed after the world's series. One thing certain, the world's series spoils of these three athletes are still locked away in Landis' "strong box."

Among the interesting things that are looked for when the major league moguls get together in Gay Gotham are the following:

Judge Landis' decision in the case of Babe Ruth and other members of the Yankees.

Judge Landis' proposed changes, especially cutting the world's series to seven instead of nine games.

Several trades, as all clubs are on the lookout for talent. Chief interest in the case of Heine Groh.

Possible sale of the Boston Red Sox.

In regards to the world's series, it is almost certain that if Judge Landis broaches the subject of cutting the classic from nine to seven games he will meet with plenty of opposition. The past few series, especially that of 1920, proved mints to the owners, and it is hardly likely they would pass up the dividend from two additional games without a fight.

Groh Almost Sure to Go.

That Heine Groh is sure to go was indicated in a story printed in San Francisco during the week, which stated that the Cincinnati club had obtained Jimmy Caveney from the Seals for a cash consideration and Pitchers Coubme, Geary and Mitchell and Outfielder See. The Cincinnati officials have not confirmed this report, but they probably will at New York.

Manager Branch Rickey of the Cardinals asserted that the only trade that he knew of to be transacted at New York would be the passing of Groh to the Giants.

While the Groh deal, if it pans out, will be of chief interest, there is a possibility that several clubs will switch players. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, according to reports, is sour on several of his second placers, and is ready to talk shop with rival magnates.

Pitchers seem to be the chief need of all the clubs, with even the New York Yankees, pennant winners in the American League last season, on the hunt for new hurling talent. That also is the chief need of the two St. Louis aggregations.

There have been strong hints that Harry Frazee would get out as owner of the Red Sox, and something on this matter may come out of New York.

Let's play an open game. I need the business now and you need the clothes.

LET'S EXAMINE some plain facts. When any product becomes the most popular in its entire field, there must be a reason.

Surely you will agree to that. And what is the reason?

Value! It makes no difference what the product is—a suit of clothes—an automobile—a phonograph—a collar—a camera. You can think of the leading product in every one of those fields and —the reason for leadership in every case is VALUE.

It is the same with White Owl. White Owl is the outstanding value among 3 for 25¢ cigars. There is no question about that. Any White Owl smoker will tell you that no other cigar at the price offers the same combination of quality, size and unvarying dependability.

And think of this: Unless you have tried three White Owls you are not acquainted with America's most popular cigar!

KANSAS PHYSICIAN GETS LIFE TERM FOR MURDER

Dr. W. A. Nixon Convicted of Killing A. C. Banta, Attorney, Over a Debt.

By the Associated Press.

GREAT BEND, Kan., Dec. 3.—Dr. W. A. Nixon, a physician of this city, was sentenced in District Court here today to serve the remainder of his life in the State penitentiary at Lansing, following his conviction by a jury on a charge of having killed Arthur C. Banta. Banta, a young attorney, was shot to death the night of July 6 last. After five hours' deliberation the jury returned a verdict of guilty of first degree murder. Sentence followed after Judge Harris denied a motion for a new trial.

An appeal will be taken to the State Supreme Court, attorneys for the convicted physician announced. Judge Harris fixed bond at $50,000 pending the outcome of the appeal. A decision from the high court probably cannot be had for three or four months, attorneys said.

Dr. Nixon, painted by the prosecution as an arch-plotter and a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," who coldly planned and carried out the killing of Banta, received the verdict and sentence without display of emotion. The only comment he had to utter was a reiteration of his innocence. "I am absolutely innocent of the murder of Arthur Banta," he said. The physician maintained the composure and self-assurance displayed throughout his trial.

Two Others to Be Tried.

Two others remain to be tried on charges of first degree murder in connection with the Banta killing. They are A. L. Wallace, a restaurant owner, and Roy Hayes, a filling station employe, who were the chief witnesses for the State against Dr. Nixon. Banta's body was found on the morning of July 7 beside his motor car on a little used road near here. Six bullets had been fired into the body.

Testimony that Dr. Nixon was the last one seen with Banta on the previous night was brought out at the trial. The prosecution contended that the physician lured Banta to the lonely spot and killed him over the payment of a debt.

Wallace testified at the trial that Nixon told him after the murder that Hayes killed the attorney. Wallace testified he was in his restaurant at the time of the murder.

Drove to Scene of Murder.

Hayes testified that upon instructions from Nixon he drove the physician's car to the scene of the murder where Nixon got into the car and drove back to town. Later, Hayes testified, Nixon remarked:

"Banta won't owe anybody else." Several witnesses testified they saw the physician in company with Banta in Banta's motor car on the evening of Banta's death.

Dr. Nixon's defense was an alibi. On the stand he accounted for his whereabouts on the evening of the murder, declaring he was in his office with patients. His wife testified he returned home from his office and remained at home all night. He served in the army medical corps during the war.

The defense presented a number of witnesses whose testimony was announced as designed to corroborate the physician's statements. Part of the witnesses were patients. Other witnesses presented testimony that the doctor's reputation was "good" and that he had always been regarded as a peaceful, law-abiding citizen of the community. The defense also directed attacks against the characters of Hayes and Wallace and brought admissions from each of the men that he had been arrested on many occasions.

The courtroom was deserted of spectators this afternoon when the jury came in with its verdict.

Mrs. Nixon broke under the strain of the trial and was led sobbing to a corridor while waiting the outcome of the trial. She was comforted by relatives and returned to the courtroom to hear the verdict.

Amended Indictments Against Four Men for Robbery at 1005 Pine Street Returned.

Amended indictments charging first-degree robbery, returned yesterday against Charles Vance, Thomas Skinner, Harry Londo and Charles Huer in connection with the hold-up Nov. 26 at the store of the St. Louis Refining Co., 1005 Pine street, specified that diamonds and jewelry valued at $29,980.39 were stolen.

As has been stated Louis B. Moss, one of the members of the firm, at the time of the robbery reported that the value of the stolen goods was between $60,000 and $75,000. The amount specified in the indictment is based on an iventory of the company's stock. Moss explained yesterday that in his excitement following the robbery he included a stock of jewelry that was in the hands of customers.

CITY TO ASK PAY FOR USE OF PART OF BRIDGE APPROACH

Claim Against Government or the Terminal Involves Use of Switch Under Federal Control.

The Municipal Bridge Commission yesterday determined to present a claim to the Federal Government or to the Terminal Railroad Association for rental of that portion of the west approach to the Free Bridge used during the period of Federal control of railroads as a switch track, a use which since has been continued by the Terminal.

Director of Public Utilities Hooke was instructed to prepare an estimate of valuation on that part of the bridge used for the track, a proper depreciation charge and an estimate of the cost of restoring the approach to its former condition as a basis for a rental claim.

Associate City Counselor Haid was instructed to prepare the claim, which, under the transportation act, must be presented before next February if any collection is to be made from the Government.

Conference's Effect on U. S. Policy More Important Than Armament Cut

Discussions Are Educating Public Opinion, Which Was Not Ready to Accept Wilson's League Plan, to See Need for International Association—What Will Follow Parley Is Biggest Question.

By GEORGE S. JOHNS,
Of the Post-Dispatch Editorial Staff.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The question of what the arms conference will accomplish within the limited scope of its program is becoming more and more subordinate in interest to the question of what will follow it. What is the next step? Every intelligent observer of the conference realizes that while it is a long stride in the right direction it is only a stride. The satisfactory solution of its prescribed problems will not be an end, but a beginning. It must lead to other things of far more importance to the welfare of mankind than the limitation of armaments and the temporary adjustment of the Far Eastern questions. In saying this I do not diminish the importance of the objects of the arms conference. Its completed work will do much for economic relief from tax burdens and for the maintenance of peace.

What it will accomplish, however, beyond its agenda, in paving the way to larger and closer international co-operation for peace and prosperity, particularly how far it will lead the United States on the road to international association, is the big question that looms out of the fog of discussion.

The undercurrents—the forces working beneath the surface—are now more absorbing and significant than the surface movements. If you have watched a swift-flowing river—the Missouri, for instance—you will understand what I mean by undercurrents and their indications. On the surface the current is smooth, but occasionally you will see it broken by a boiling movement from below. It is a powerful undercurrent breaking through the surface.

Picking Up the Beans.

So there is now and then a cropping out of the program discussions an indication of the forces beneath. One instance of this was the hint dropped by President Harding in a moment of genial confidence that he was thinking of an association of nations of some sort. Since then he has been carefully picking up the beans he spilt, but the hint showed the trend of his thought and the forces moving to put America into international harness. It was a response to the undoubted aspiration of the American people to co-operate with other nations for a better order of civilization in international relationships and to the business pressure for American participation in the task of rehabilitating European finance, industry and trade. The avidity with which the hint was seized upon for comment is evidence of the intensity of public interest and expectation in that direction.

Another question that is continually cropping out is that concerning an economic conference. The pressure of business for American action in concert with other nations for the economic salvation of Europe is tremendous. The administration feels it cannot be resisted. There will be an economic conference, but not in connection with the arms conference. It will follow. The surface movement of the conference is fairly smooth and apparently is running with irresistible force to a conclusion. There is a general expectation that all the subjects of the program will be brought to conclusion which will be accepted by the conference. The expectation is well founded. Diplomacy prompts the persistent expression of a spirit of concession, good will and co-operation on the part of the delegations and their spokesmen, but this expression is not wholly diplomatic. The delegates expect a satisfactory conclusion. No one who watches the proceedings, hears the reports of progress, meager as they are sometimes, doubts that there will be no serious break or that acceptable solutions of virtually all points will be reached.

Japan is haggling over the ratio of naval limitation and is putting forward strong pleas for consideration in the Chinese adjustments. The close bargaining of Japan on the ground of national needs is creating a bad impression, just as the talk of Briand about armaments and war instead of disarmament and peace created a bad impression. But the logic of the Hughes ratio is inexorable and everybody believes that the Japanese will yield on the ratio, possibly with conditions on other points which will satisfy their national aspirations and caution.

Japan Will Come In.

The British, who are just now the best little boys in the world, willing to play the game fairly, ready for any concession that others will agree to and striving persistently for harmony and co-operation, are working on the Japanese. Their influence as Japan's friend and ally with the old alliance still in the air is potent. It is decidedly against haggling. But, aside from this, Japan cannot afford and does not want to assume the role of a pariah among nations. She will come in.

There are two men in the conference upon whom confidence for its success rests—Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour. The head of the British delegation has made a resounding hit. His candor and fine spirit are captivating; they are blended with the best qualities of diplomacy and evidence of a sincere desire to accomplish all the vital ends the conference has in view.

Mr. Hughes strikes an observer as a man who has found himself, discovered his powers and knows how to use them. He is master of the situation. His vigorous analytical mind is working at its best. In his talks he is as candid as diplomatic courtesy will permit. He talks straight and clear as far as he can. What has been called his red-shirt diplomacy is softened with all the reassuring and pleasant gestures that are required to convince his hearers that his feeling is good and his intention generous, but he stands firm for two things, namely: that the conference shall accomplish the work it was designed to do and that nothing outside of the prescribed agenda shall be permitted to disturb its council.

Land armaments, for example, will be handled by a conference, including all the nations with land forces.

Hughes Showing Diplomacy.

In addition to strength Mr. Hughes is displaying diplomatic cleverness. His shifting of the Shantung question to Japan and China outside of the conference proper, with the co-operation of himself and Mr. Balfour, was a clever stroke. It rid the conference itself of a complicated question involving a lot of agreements and treaties that might have disturbed its counsels and put the responsibility for a fair conclusion upon Japan and China. The public should get clearly in its mind that nothing will be done outside of the carefully outlined subjects presented in the program. This will enable the people to avoid disappointments based upon conjectures and rumors concerning subjects that may be taken up. Mr. Hughes' determination to check any incursions into other fields is as firm as his determination to do everything that the conference has been called upon to do, especially the limitation of armaments. That is his prime object.

When, however, the agreements have been reached, the question of guarantees must be settled. That comes within the field of the conference. It is a delicate question. What form shall it take? How far can the administration go towards entering into covenants or treaties sanctioning the agreements reached in the conference? Certainly there must be some conclusion with regard to the carrying out of the conference agreements. Assuming that all the naval Powers are willing to limit their armaments according to the ratio suggested, what assurances do we have that this agreement will be carried into effect and that they will be protected when they carry out their agreement?

Of course, the moral effect of agreements to limit armaments is very strong and in itself constitutes protection against aggression, but the disarming nations will probably want more than this.

Effect on Policy Far-Reaching.

This question shows how far-reaching the conference is in its effect upon the policy of the United States. The settlement of it is likely to determine how far we will go in all questions effecting international relationships and international co-operation for peace and the general welfare. How are we to get peace without guarantees of peace—without agreements of nations to stand together against the aggressor and to substitute law and the processes of reason for the sword?

When trial by battle among individuals—judicial combat—was abolished, there had to be a substitute. Saint Louis' proclamation abolishing the judicial combat within the realm of France substituted trial by evidence, so, after a long and slow process of evolution, individual society has the protection of laws and police. The dominating opinion is against crime and the aggressor. There are well-defined and enforced means of protection and this protection alone has abolished general carrying of arms. So with nations. There must be a similar evolution in which there will be a "moral disarmament," a predominating sentiment against war and armaments and for settlement of disputes by arbitration and legal tribunals.

We come thus face to face with the question of an association of nations or some sort of arrangement by which the nations may co-operate for progressive disarmament and the maintenance of peace. Let us clarify our thought on this subject. Wise supporters of a League of Nations have learned a lesson. It is a lesson similar to that of the Russian soviet revolution which taught the socialists elsewhere that nothing could be accomplished for so-called industrial democracy by over-night revolution. The process must be evolutionary. We have found that there are many steps between the conception of the League of Nations and its realization. The civilized world rose for a moment under the stress of war sorrows and sacrifices to the splendid idea of Woodrow Wilson, but straightway fell away from it because public opinion was not fully prepared to accept it. The stimulus was artificial. Here in America, where support was necessary to the complete success of the league, the reaction was greatly strengthened by partisan attack. That reaction must be overcome. It is being overcome. How rapidly remains to be seen.

"Another Peace Advertiser."

The arms conference will accomplish much in this direction. It is what Lord Riddell aptly called "another peace advertiser." It revived the thought of world peace and the hope of substantial achievement in that direction in the minds of all the people. It supplemented the peace advertisement of the League of Nations and so it is a stride. The agreements we make in this conference will lead us farther on the road. Then will come the economic conference in which we will go into the councils of Europe. The economic conference will be called. That is settled. It is merely held in abeyance and used somewhat as a bait to lead the other nations to a successful conclusion of the arms conference. When it is held we will be face to face with the question of co-operating with all nations for justice, peace and prosperity. The pressure in that direction is continually growing stronger.

The phrases, "Will to peace" and "Moral disarmament," which are on so many lips nowadays, mean nothing more than public opinion. When public opinion is ready for the great step it will be taken. We must think of this thing, not in terms of today or tomorrow or next day, but of years. The leaven is working.

Tumulty Reveals Details of Plot to Oust Wilson and Part It Had in Lansing's Dismissal From His Cabinet Post

Why Executive Accused Secretary of State of Disloyalty

"My God!" He Exclaimed, "Think What I Have Done for Him, Raising Him From a Subordinate Departmental Position to the Great Office He Holds and Making Him a Member of the Peace Commission in Which Capacity He Signs the Treaty and Then He Comes Home and Denounces the Very Thing He Has Signed!"

Tells How Official Endeavored to Induce Him and Dr. Grayson to Sign a Certificate of Disability So the Vice President Could Be Called In to Perform His Duties.

By JOSEPH P. TUMULTY.
For Ten Years Private Secretary to Woodrow Wilson.

TENTATIVE plans for a Western trip began to be formed in the White House because of the urgent insistence from Democratic friends on the Hill that nothing could win the fight for the League of Nations except a direct appeal to the country by the President in person.

Admiral Grayson, the President's physician and constant friend, who knew his condition and the various physical crises through which he had passed here and on the other side, from some of which he had not yet recovered, stood firm in his resolve that the President should not go West, even intimating to me that the President's life might pay the forfeit if his advice were disregarded. Indeed, it needed not the trained eye of a physician to see that the man whom the Senators were now advising to make a "swing around the circle," was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. More than once since his return from the Peace Conference, I had urged him to take a needed rest; to get away from the turmoil of Washington and recuperate; but he spurned this advice and resolved to go through to the end.

No argument of ours could draw him away from his duties, which now involved not only the fight for the ratification of the treaty, but the threatened railway strike, with its attendant evils to the country, and added administrative burdens growing out of the partisanship fight which was being waged in Congress for the ostensible purpose of reducing the high cost of living.

Ready for Any Sacrifice

One day, after Democratic Senators had been urging the Western trip, I took leave to say to the President that, in his condition, disastrous consequences might result if he should follow their advice. But he dismissed my solicitude, saying in a weary way: "I know that I am at the end of my tether, but my friends on the Hill say that the trip is necessary to save the treaty, and I am willing to make whatever personal sacrifice is required, for if the treaty should be defeated, God only knows what would happen to the world as a result of it. In the presence of the great tragedy which now faces the world, no decent man can count his own personal fortunes in the reckoning. Even though, in my condition, it might mean the giving up of my life, I will gladly make the sacrifice to save the treaty."

He spoke like a soldier who was ready to make the supreme sacrifice to save the cause that lay closest to his heart.

As I looked at the President while he was talking, in my imagination I made a comparison between the man Woodrow Wilson, who now stood before me, and the man I had met many years before in New Jersey. In those days he was a vigorous, agile, slender man, active and alert, his hair but slightly streaked with gray. Now, as he stood before me discussing the necessity for the Western trip, he was an old man, grown grayer and grayer, but grimmer and grimmer in his determination, like an old warrior, to fight to the end.

There was another whose heroism was no less than his, Mrs. Wilson. She has since referred to the Western trip as "one long nightmare," though in the smiling face, which she turned upon the crowds from Columbus to San Diego and back to Pueblo, none could have detected a trace of the anxiety that was haunting her. She met the shouting throngs with the same reposeful dignity and radiant, friendly smile with which she had captivated the peoples of England, France, Italy and Belgium.

At home and abroad she has always had a peculiar power to attract the populace, though she herself has never craved the spotlight. Like her husband, she finds home more congenial, and, like him, she prefers not to be written about.

In her husband's career she has played a notable role, the more noble because self-effacing. She has consistently disavowed intention to participate actively in public affairs, and yet in many a crisis she, out of her strong intelligence and sagacity, has been able to offer timely, wise suggestion. No public man ever had a more devoted helpmate, and no wife a husband more dependent upon her sympathetic understanding of his problems. The devotion between these two has not been strengthened, for that would be impossible, but deepened by the President's long illness. Mrs. Wilson's strong physical constitution, combined with strength of character and purpose, have sustained her under a strain which must have wrecked most women. When the strong man broke, she nursed him as tenderly as a mother nurses a child.

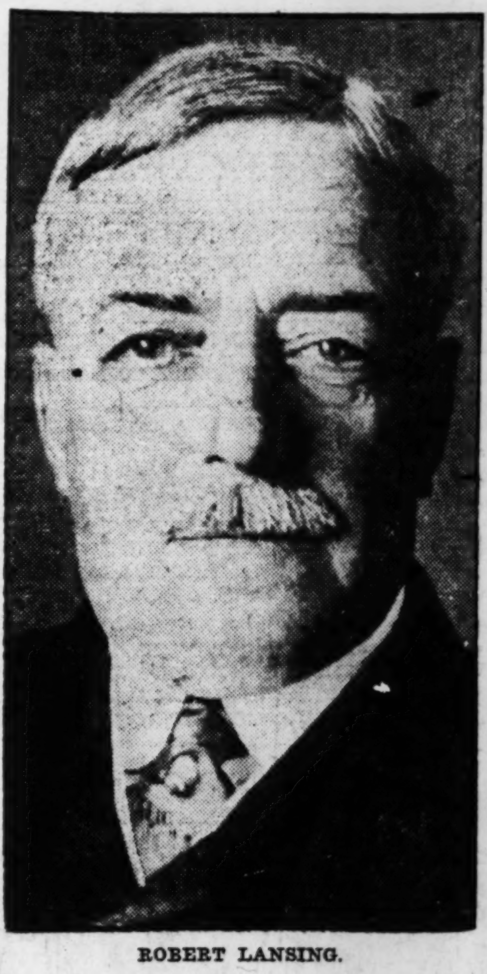
Mrs. Wilson must have left the White House for that ill-omened journey with a sinking heart, for she knew, none better, that her husband was suffering from accumulated fatigue, and that he should be starting on a long vacation instead of a fighting tour that would tax the strength of an athlete in pink of condition. For seven practically vacationless years he had borne burdens too great for any constitution; he had conducted his country through the greatest of all wars; he had contended, at times single-handed, in Paris with the world's most adroit politicians; he had there been prostrated with influenza, that treacherous disease which usually maims for a time those whom it does not kill, and he had not given himself a chance to recuperate; he had returned to America to engage in the most desperate conflict of his career with the leaders of the opposition party; and now, when it was clear even to his men friends, and much clearer to the intuition of a devoted wife, that nature was crying out for rest, he was setting out on one of the most arduous programs of public speaking known even in our country, which is familiar with these strenuous undertakings. Mrs. Wilson's anxieties must have increased with each successive day of the journey, but not even to us of the immediate party did she betray her fears. Her resolution was as great as his.

When the great illness came she had to stand between him and the peril of exhaustion from official cares, yet she could not, like the more fortunately obscure, withdraw her husband from business altogether and take him away to some quiet place for restoration. As head of the nation he must be kept in touch with affairs, and during the early months of his illness she was the chief agent in keeping him informed of public business. Her high intelligence and her extraordinary memory enabled her to report to him daily, in lucid detail, weighty matters of state brought to her by officials for transmission to him. At the proper time, when he was least in pain and least exhausted, she would present a clear, oral resume of each case and lay the documents before him in orderly arrangement.

Refuses to Approve Vacation.

As woman and wife, the first thought of her mind and the first care of her heart must be for his health. Once, at an acute period of his illness, certain officials insisted that they must see him because they carried information which "it was absolutely necessary that the President of the United States should have," and she quietly replied: "I am not interested in the President of the United States. I am interested in my husband and his health."

With loving courage she met her difficult dilemma of shielding him as much as possible and at the same time keeping him acquainted with things he must know. When it became possible for him to see people, she, in counsel with Admiral Grayson, would arrange for conference and carefully watch her husband to see that they who talked with him did not trespass too long upon his limited energy.



ROBERT LANSING.

When it became evident that the tide of public opinion was setting against the League, the President finally decided upon the Western trip as the only means of bringing home to the people the unparelleled world situation.

At the Executive Office we at once set in motion preparations for the Western trip. One itinerary after another was prepared, but upon examining them the President would find that they were made by those of us—like Grayson and myself—who were solicitous for his health, and he would cast them aside. All the itineraries provided for a week of rest in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, but when a brief vacation was intimated to him he was obdurate in his refusal to include even a day of relaxation, saying to me that "the people would never forgive me if I took a rest on a trip such as the one I contemplate taking. This is a business trip, pure and simple, and the itinerary must not include rest of any kind." He insisted that there be no suggestion of a pleasure trip attaching to a journey which he regarded as a mission.

Suffered From Violent Headaches

As I now look back upon this journey and its disastrous effects upon the President's health, I believe that if he had only consented to include a rest period in our arrangements, he might not have broken down at Pueblo.

Never had I seen the President look so weary as on the night we left Washington for our swing into the West. When we were about to board our special train, the President turned to me and said: "I am in a nice fix. I am scheduled between now and the 28th of September to make in the neighborhood of 100 speeches to various bodies, stretching all the way from Ohio to the coast, and yet the pressure of other affairs upon me at the White House has been so great that I have not had a single minute to prepare my speeches. I do not know how I shall get the time, for during the past few weeks I have been suffering from daily headaches; but perhaps tonight's rest will make me fit for the work tomorrow."

No weariness or brain fag, however, was apparent in the speech at Columbus, O. To those of us who sat on the platform, including the newspaper group who accompanied the President, this speech, with its beautiful phrasing and its effective delivery, seemed to have been carefully prepared.

Day after day, for nearly a month, there were speeches of a similar kind, growing more intense in their emotion with each day. Shortly after we left Tacoma, Wash., the fatigue of the trip began to write itself in the President's face. He suffered from violent headaches each day, but his speeches never betrayed his illness. As one reads the Western speeches of the President he must be convinced that a great conviction and nothing else could have enabled a man as ill as was the President to rise to such heights of argument and utterance.

In those troublous days and until the very end of our Western trip the President would not permit the slightest variation from our daily program. Nor did he ever permit the constant headaches, which would have put an ordinary man out of sorts, to work unkindly upon the members of his immediate party, which included Mrs. Wilson, Dr. Grayson and myself. He would appear regularly at each meal, partaking of it only slightly, always gracious, always good-natured and smiling, responding to every call from the outside for speeches—calls that came from early morning until late at night—from the plain people grouped about every station and watering place through which we passed. Even under the most adverse physical conditions he was always kind, gentle and considerate of those about him.

I have often wished, as the criticisms of the Pullman smoking car, the cloakroom and the counting house were carried to me, picturing the President's coldness, his aloofness and exclusiveness, that the critics could for a moment have seen the heart and great good-nature of the man giving expression to themselves on this critical journey. If they could have peeped through the curtain of our dining room, at one of the evening meals, for instance, they would have been ashamed of their misrepresentations of this kind, patient, considerate, human-hearted man.

Deeply Incensed by Lansing

When he was "half-fit," an expression he often used, he was the best fellow in the little group on our train—good-natured, smiling, full of anecdotes and repartee and always thinking of the comforts and pleasures of the men gathered about him. The illness of a newspaper man, or of one of the messengers or conductors, or attaches of the train was a call to service to him, and one could find the President in one of the little compartments of the train, seated at the bed of a newspaper man or some attache who had been taken ill on the trip. There is in the President a sincere human sympathy, which is better than the cheap good-fellowship which many public men really cultivate.

It was on the Western trip, about Sept. 12, while the President, with every ounce of his energy, was attempting to put across the League of Nations, that William C. Bullitt was disclosing to the Committee of Foreign Relations at a public hearing the facts of a conference between Secretary Lansing and himself, in which Mr. Bullitt declared that Mr. Lansing had severely criticised the League of Nations.

The press representatives aboard the train called Mr. Bullitt's testimony to the President's attention. He made no comment, but it was plain from his attitude that he was incensed and distressed beyond measure. Here he was in the heart of the West, advancing the cause so dear to his heart, steadily making gains against what appeared to be insurmountable odds, and now his intimate associate, Mr. Lansing, was engaged in sniping and attacking him from behind.

On Sept. 16 Mr. Lansing telegraphed the following message to the President:

"On May 17 Bullitt resigned by letter, giving his reasons, with which you are familiar. I re-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Submergence of Lodge.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is altogether fit and proper that this nation should commence to take heed and register its profound repugnance to the now transparent hypocrisy in the late attitude of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge toward the Versailles treaty, which has resulted in isolating this country from its allies or associates in the late war, placing a blight upon permanent peace prospects and probably frustrating irrevocably the sole medium through which warring among nations is possible of repression.

For no other reason than to serve vicious political partisanship has this man prostituted his leadership, blasted a more or less auspicious career and writ himself down the most pernicious parasite of politics of the present momentous time, if not of all time.

Who can gauge the monstrous consequences to the world and all humanity of his miscreant representations on the League of Nations and their inglorious outgrowth?

Then note his complete transformation from blubber and bluster to shamefaced silence and obscurity. How many know today that this erstwhile vociferous Senator is a delegate to the disarmament conference? What is the explanation of his silence and submersion in the counsels of that international gathering?

At this conference the veriest essentials of the Senator's doctrines are being benumbed and negated. What becomes of the Senate's vaunted sacred rights to ratify this country's international commitments in the light of the proposal that formal treaties be dispensed with and "gentlemen's agreements" substituted in respect to limitation of armaments or anything else the conferring nations may agree upon? In politics as in business, "gentlemen's agreements" invariably have proved impracticable when put to the test, choked by the stuff upon which they feed.

When Senator Lodge cunningly selected Mr. Wilson as a convenient subject for his venom as a means of carrying his political party into power, he denied him even his elementary constitutional privilege to discuss his foreign policies in public without previous consultation with the Senate; now he is participating in a conference which, according to report, is seriously considering, in apparent unanimity, entering into an insane informal convention that means nothing and which at the crucial moment is bound to break down. Apparently the prime motive of this whole iniquitous scheme is to circumvent the necessity of consulting Congress at all. C. J. N.

Goods for Money.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE business situation of the world seems to be in a tangle; especially confusing seems to be the question what to do with the loans due the United States from European countries. The statement has occurred with more and more frequency that the United States should cancel these loans. It does not seem to me that this would be wise, and I do not see how this alone would help the present depression in business.

What I should propose is the following: Let the loans stand as they are, but let the United States, whenever any amount is paid, be it small or great, give to these countries the merchandise they need so much, even, if necessary, to the full amount or value of the money they have paid on their loan. This would mean that the money paid to us by European countries would be immediately invested in products of this country and returned to European nations. Thus we would help ourselves while at the same time helping others. Suppose, for instance, that France pays us $5,000,000 on its indebtedness. Then suppose that France needs wheat and cotton. See how it would help the farmers at once by having this money invested in their products. France would also be helped by giving to it the things it does not raise itself, in a manner that would be bound to aid its people in regaining their full equilibrium.

Other countries would receive other products, so that in each instance the money paid us, being returned in the form of merchandise, would be used to build up that country and would not become a source of depletion. Our own people, on the other hand, would be benefited as much as the European countries, and it would not be long before the specter of business depression would be routed from the entire world.

I believe many of us would feel, if this plan were carried out, that we had solved a delicate and difficult situation, and that the sense of mutual respect between thi scountry and the nations of Europe had been much enhanced.

Of course, this plan is given "in the rough," but I believe it needs but little revision. It is broadly honorable. "Let's carry on." S. F. SWANTEES.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Central Association of Science and Mathematics Teachers wish to express to you their feeling of appreciation for the publicity which you have given to their annual meeting, held in St. Louis, Nov. 25 and 26.

A. F. EWERS,
Chairman of Publicity Committee.

THE CONFERENCE IS SUCCEEDING.

The provisional acceptance of the 5—5—3 ratio by Japan, reported to have been reached at a meeting of Secretary Hughes, Baron Kato and Arthur J. Balfour, coupled with the statement that the vexatious Anglo-Japanese alliance is to be allowed to lapse, brings the past week of the Washington conference to an impressive climax.

The verdict of success may be premature, but there is no doubt that substantial progress towards the conference's objective has been made. That judgment stands, despite the conditions yet to be disposed of before the reported dispositions may be announced as accomplished facts. In the case of the ratio, for instance, it is explained that the indorsement of the Japanese Government must be had, though the news from Tokio is that the Government has authorized Baron Kato to conclude an agreement, and that the agreement is conditioned upon a satisfactory adjustment of the Pacific and Far Eastern questions. Troublesome as some of those questions are, it is improbable that they will be permitted to wreck the warship ratio and the decrease in naval expenditures which is indispensable to the economic welfare of the world. The capacity for agreement already demonstrated in the major issue should be equal to the demands of validating details.

The lapsing of the Anglo-Japanese alliance is guardedly reported, but, even so, it is likely to stand. That assumption is given additional color by the explanation, somewhat conjectural, to be sure, that the British proposal of a triple alliance has been rejected and that, instead, there is to be a "series of understandings" between the United States and Japan, the United States and England and England and Japan. Such evidence is corroborative.

The plight of China continues to harass the conferees, but decision to send an international commission to determine whether the Chinese Government is competent to administer that nation's affairs removes that difficulty from the present program; it necessitates, of course, another meeting, either of this conference or a successor, and thus assures continuity of international effort at solving international problems. China's demand, however, for the return of Shantung is not subject to postponement and for the next few days, apparently, will command the energies of the conference.

The week that commenced discouragingly and for a time seemed skirting disaster has ended luminously. The conference is winning its way to real results.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS NEEDED.

It is estimated that at least $15,000 will be needed by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association this year in order to carry Yuletide cheer into the hundreds of homes where otherwise poverty would prevent any form of observance of the festal season. The magnitude of the twenty-second great community Festival depends entirely on the generosity of St. Louisans, and the Post-Dispatch again asks their support and co-operation, confident that, as in former years, the appeal will be answered with overflowing liberality.

Subscription lists will be sent to business establishments and offices within a day or so and contributions of any amount are welcome, from the penny to the large-sized check, according to ability. All contributions will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

When you encounter an opportunity to participate in the joy of giving to those who have not, do not pass it by, and deprive some child, who has known little laughter and much want, of the rightful heritage of childhood on Christmas Day.

LIVING 100 YEARS.

A forecast by a department of the Red Cross last week that in another century or two the average length of life would be 100 years has brought a Dr. Stephen Smith of New York into the news with the announcement that a person of average health may attain that age now. As the doctor lacks but a few months of the century mark a certain authority may, perhaps, be conceded to him.

The venerable doctor's de senectute, however, is likely to be disappointing. Abstemiousness is spread over it all. Up a Matterhorn of thou-halt-nots the wayfarer is to climb to the summit of longevity. With the doctor's little of meat and none of drink—not only the constitutionally prohibited, but tea and coffee as well—we are all familiar. Yet there has been many a near-centenarian who has disregarded the Smith code and swung into the nineties with vigor and joy. And many who have practiced a harsher denial have dropped out early in the race.

Yet granting the wisdom of Dr. Smith's Spartan table, his command of 10 hours' sleep regularly will be questioned. Under such a regimen the person who rises at 6 would have to be in bed by 8, while idlers who slumber far into the morning, say, as late as 7 o'clock, would have to call it a day when the cuckoo stepped forth to carol 9. To say nothing about the readjustment such a schedule would entail—and much might be said about it—it needs only to be remarked that Dr. Smith's quota would appropriate 41 2-3 per cent of our century to sleep.

With due respect to his white hairs, Dr. Smith has given us a recipe for sleeping, rather than for living, a hundred years. "Better a day of strife than a century of sleep," sang the gentle poet, Father Ryan. The "spend and be spent" which Roosevelt preached and practiced is a nobler creed.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

With due allowance for native pride, we can honestly say that there has been visible among the young people of this city, and especially in the last few years, a remarkable interest in the arts. Music, perhaps, leads the list, but drama, painting and sculpture are not far behind.

This has been manifest in various aspects. The success of the Junior Players, with their repertoire of dramatized fairy tales, is but one instance; there are others. The dramatic club of Washington University gave, a few nights ago, what a Post-Dispatch critic described as "an excellently balanced program" of three one-act plays, two of which bordered on classic lines. The settings, devised by students, were austerely simple. The performers, also students, maintained their roles with mature repression. The house was filled—almost entirely by students—who gave appreciative audience. The noteworthy percentage of young people at the Symphony Orchestra concerts and among the visitors to the Art Museum are facts well known.

Divers moralists of morbid bent have drawn a depressing picture of American boys and girls squandering their youth in the barbaric halls of jazz. Animalism, they say, is rampant; "the hour is sex o'clock." Young America, frivolous, reckless, pleasure-mad, is headed for the rocks. We commend the doleful prophets to the public libraries, the "pop" concerts and the little theaters. The general impression may not be wholly Athenian, but it certainly does not reek of Babylon as they would have us believe.

It is safe to declare that this phenomenon is quite the most cheering thing on the horizon. On that identical foundation Greece sustained a marvelous civilization until it was wrecked by war. Perhaps it would never have perished if the Greeks, having first done their fighting, and thus got it out of their systems, had turned to the higher concerns of existence. Let us hope that this is the course of the modern world, and that St. Louis youth is showing the way. Destruction will end when we are sufficiently tired of it. Most of us are pretty weary now. A golden future beckons if we will but heed. The later generation is showing distinct signs of doing so.

WHY THE FARMER IS SORE.

The city food expert of Chicago reports that the egg supply of that city is controlled by three men who are making a profit of $30,000 a day by selling "fresh" eggs at 50 to 53 cents a dozen which they bought last March at 19 1-2 cents.

Thus it is shown again that the cold storage utility, which should be a boon to man, has become a boon chiefly to the profiteer, a purloiner of food from the mouths of the poor and a burden on production. The farmer gets a pittance, the storage monopolist gets a fortune and the consumer gets an inferior food at an exorbitant price.

What wonder that the farmer is organizing to control his own markets and block legislation! What wonder that we have Townleyism and Socialism! What is the next move? Manifestly, the people are not always going to stand for the unconscionable plundering of food speculators. Profiteering in food by nonproducing manipulators must be stopped.

JUST A MINUTE . . .

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

JUST A MINUTE IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Would it surprise you to know that there is no such thing as international morals? It took the World War to teach us that there is no such thing as international law, and we are learning at the peace conference that there is no such thing as international morals. This is one of the great obstacles to agreement with Japan. Japan does not believe that any of the countries which are exploiting China would keep such an agreement. Bad faith characterizes the relations of nations to such an extent that none of them trusts the others. Our own country is furnishing an example of international immorality in the matter of Panama tolls. Some of the Senators who favor exemption of our coastwise ships from those tolls deny that by so doing we would violate the treaty made with Great Britain when she consented to construction and ownership of the canal by us. This is sophistry, which makes the better thing appear the worse. It is the philosophy of pirates, burglars—and, unfortunately, nations. That has been the history of nations.

It is precisely this international immorality which created the critical situation in the Pacific. No one has shown absolute good faith as to China. We have the best record, though everybody who knows that part of the world says our open door has been a hollow sham. There is no open door. The British and the Japanese have violated every agreement they have made. Their record is a scandal even in the East, where morals are anything but Puritanical. Mr. Wilson was somewhat ingenuous as to Shantung. The Japanese can get out of it and still not get out of it. Everybody who knows these predatory nations in China understands how that is done. An economic penetration can be quite as effective as a military occupation. People who know the situation in Shantung say it has nothing left in it for Chinamen. It has been sucked dry by Japanese business. The Chinese can go there and work for the Japanese mine owners, merchants, bankers and manufacturers. That is all. So it is in Manchuria and Korea, and so it is to be soon in Siberia. Japan agreed with the Powers to withdraw her troops from Siberia, but she has never done so. She will not do so until she has accomplished the economic penetration of all that part of Eastern Siberia which Japan is overrunning, surveying, staking out for her own. Her bad faith matches that of the other Powers engaged in the exploitation of Asia. It is the one thing in which the other nations believe as to Japan, just as it is the one thing in which Japan believes as to the other powers.

It ought not, therefore, to be a very difficult matter to reach an agreement as to China or anywhere else under foreign exploitation. There will be agreement. The thing is as to war, which would inevitably result from further competition between the Japanese and American navies. No one seriously believes that Japan's imperialism is to be halted by the Washington conference. She is as immovably set upon that course as our own or any other empire was in the process of making itself great and powerful. The rest of the world will have to close its eyes to a great deal for the sake of peace. This will be particularly hard upon us, for we have never asked for a part of China or any other part of the Asiatic mainland. We have become the single protestant against the imperialism of Japan—her imposition of the 21 demands upon China at a time when the rest of us were occupied with the war; her retention of Shantung, which Germany had stolen from China; her seizure of Korea, despite her earlier assurances that she would exercise only a protectorate over Korea; her occupation of Eastern Siberia, which has gone to her by default during the Russian upheaval, and her exclusion of the rest of the world's commerce from Manchuria, where the door is closed against any but Japanese goods. Japan can never be headed off now. She is one of the great Powers, and her strength is growing. All the rest of the world can hope to do now is to head off a conflict which would probably array the white race against the yellow race. Japan's economic empire is already made. She has her place in the sun. The World War pulled the sun down from the high sky, and Japan jumped aboard. It has been a feat without parallel in history. If it has been in many respects highly immoral, so too were all the other empires immorally made. We may not admire the Japanese in some ways, but we must admire their physical and mental prowess. They are a nimble people.

The hope of something better than this faithlessness, from which we have the situation on the Pacific, is an international court. The nations have never had any other redress when one of them failed to keep faith than to go to war, nor can they ever have any other redress until we can have an international tribunal capable of enforcing international contracts. It is pitiful to observe the Washington conference from the viewpoint of domestic society. Domestic society has courts of justice. International society remains at the whim of might. The Japanese, who are holding up agreement on the Hughes proposal, are strong enough to do as they like. If they choose to go their own way, ignoring our own and the British wish to limit naval armament, they are at liberty to do so. It is because a nation powerful in arms has the privilege that nations have aspired to become empires. If they were compelled by international morality to keep faith with one another, as we are compelled to keep faith in domestic contracts, they would have no use for the independence which power gives them. An outlaw must be well armed.

Our American Indians always claimed that our Government never kept its covenants with them. We would enter into agreements solemnly enough, but we never kept them. It is only within late years that our national morality began to support the Indians in this claim. If our national morality has just been aroused, how long must it be until there is such a thing as international morality in the world?

LAMENT.

"Listen, children:
Your father is dead.
From his old coats
I'll make you little jackets;
I'll make you little trousers
From his old pants.
There'll be in his pockets
Things he used to put there.
Keys and pennies
Covered with tobacco;
Dan shall have the pennies
To save in his bank;
Anne shall have the keys
To make a pretty noise with.
Life must go on,
And the dead be forgotten;
Life must go on,
Though good men die.
Anne, eat your breakfast;
Dan, take your medicine;
Life must go on;
I forget just why."

LABOR RESERVE SYSTEM.

WILLIAM McCLELLAN in North American Review.

CAN a Federal employment reserve system be designed? The first difficulty we face is the concreteness of labor. There can be no transfer of labor credits from Pittsburg to Des Moines, as in finance. It is as if the gold itself had always to travel where it was needed. Even this would not be as impracticable for gold as it is for labor. For, generally speaking, labor is immobile. The only labor that can be moved back and forth like gold is military labor. It has been shown that at best only the unattached worker is at all mobile, and there are varying degrees of attachment. Nevertheless there is a respectable volume of unattached labor which is mobile and would be specie for a Federal employment reserve system. Such a system obviously must consist of well organized employment agencies, established at the proper centers and efficiently related to each other so as to mobilize the "unattached" labor reserve. The labor unions of the country, if they were wise, would organize such a reserve system at once for all labor, skilled and unskilled. To a certain extent the best organized unions provide such a service in their own crafts. They would make the reserve self-supporting and would accept or permit only supervision and regulation by the Government, under a law generally similar to the Federal reserve law. I say this because I firmly believe that no Anglo-Saxon Government can successfully be paternal. It is contrary to its genius. I say it also because just as the Federal Reserve Bank was almost the first unselfish act of capitalism, even though for its own protection, so the establishment of a Federal employment Reserve by the representative organizations of labor would be a constructive act toward industrial peace irrespective of any selfish motive.

CAUSE OF CHINA'S UNREST.

CHANG HSIN-HAI in North American Review.

THE fundamental difficulty that is responsible for the unrest and disorder which now reigns supreme in Chinese political and social affairs can be traced accordingly to the appearance of foreign ideas and, what is more important, to their rampant dissemination. Foreign ideas, merely because they are foreign, are not taboo; on the contrary, they should be warmly received. But differences in time and place require the exclusion of those which have no special bearing upon the Chinese people and upon their problems. The tendency in China at present unfortunately is towards taking over everything foreign—good, bad and indifferent, with perhaps a greater attraction for the bad and the indifferent, of which there is a full supply in the treaty ports where the common people receive strictly first-hand knowledge of the West. This is as it inevitably must be when the ideas lack control and concentration; and the ultimate result is that not only do they become dangerous catchwords, which, because they are strange to the mental habits of the people, are deprived of all their original meaning and content, but they also render useless those native ideas which for centuries have formed their mental support. The Chinese mind today is, to all intents and purposes, loosened from all moorings. It has been drifting, especially within the last 10 years, whither no one knows; neither is there any group of competent men of power and influence to whom it may look for guidance, nor is it itself capable of finding definite aim to direct its endeavors. It has thus come to pass that instead of making for progress and enlightenment, these new ideas have been making for danger and turmoil.

Approach of Holiday Season Finds Social Calendar Filled With Entertainments for Subdebs, Temporarily Taking Places of Debutantes as Guests of Honor—Long List of Tea Dances and Other Functions Announced.

WITH the advent of the holiday season and with most of the coming-out parties over, the debutante gives way temporarily to the subdeb, who is released from her studies for the Christmas period. An important feature of the entertaining will be the large number of tea dances, the first on the calendar, in honor of the members of the Princeton Triangle Club, to be given by Joseph Werner and Wallace Smith on Dec. 22 at the Country Club. Mrs. John Douglass will be hostess at her home in Vandeventer place Dec. 23 for her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Douglass, and on Dec. 24 Mrs. Charles E. Lane and Mrs. R. S. Bradshaw will entertain at the Country Club for their daughters, Miss Marian Lane and Miss Frances Bradshaw.

Mrs. Vincent Price will be hostess at the St. Louis Club on Dec. 26 for her daughter, Miss Lauralouise Price, and the following day will be marked by two tea dances, one given by Mrs. J. W. Fristoe for her daughter, Miss Frances Fristoe at the Woman's Club and the other by Mrs. Edward K. Love at the St. Louis Club in honor of her son, Edward K. Love Jr. Mrs. L. Ray Carter will be hostess Dec. 28 at her home in Portland place complimenting her twin daughters, Misses Mary and Margaret Carter, and on Dec. 30, Mrs. William Caleb Sipple will entertain at the Country Club for her daughters, Misses Mary Lemon and Katherine Sipple. Miss Marie Lenore Scullin will be the honoree at a luncheon Dec. 28 at the Country Club with which her mother, Mrs. Charles Scullin will entertain.

It is to be regretted that the Yale Glee Club will not make its annual visit to St. Louis this year and it is understood that there is doubt about the Harvard Glee Club coming. The advent of these two clubs is always occasion for increased social activities.

Graceful Lines
In a Comfort Shoe

Most shoes distort the foot because they are wrongly shaped. They bind the muscles, retard circulation, and frequently cause fallen arches, corns and bunions. Many physical ills and nervous disorders are directly traceable to incorrectly shaped and fitted shoes.

Without departing from harmony in line, the Cantilever Shoe conforms to the natural contour of the foot—gives correct space for each portion of the foot—distributes the body weight without strain over the heel, the ball, and outside of the foot—flexes with the instep, sustains the arch without use of appliances, gives firm, restful support to the small bones of the foot.

Because the foot is correctly fitted in Cantilever Shoes, one walks with an easy-swinging carriage—a natural charm of movement.

Come and see how good looking a correct shoe can be. We are the sole agents for Cantilever Shoes.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS KEEP CONFERENCE DELEGATES BUSY

Receptions and Parties for Washington's Distinguished Visitors Keep Them Constantly on the Go.

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Conference and more conference. It continues to be the topic of conversation these days. With parties galore, starting with breakfasts, lunches, teas, dinners and receptions, the poor delegates hardly know where to turn. The week opened with a reception at Rauscher's for the Netherlands delegates to meet the members of the press, at which the Netherlands Minister, Dr. Everwijn was host. Several smart dinner parties in honor of the distinguished visitors were also features of that evening.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Herbert Hoover have been entertaining at a series of dinners and on Tuesday Sir Robert Borden of the British delegation and Lady Borden were the guests of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are noted for their ingenuities in arranging successful dinner parties. Although they are official, they manage to assemble most interesting company of diplomats and members of resident society.

Gayety at Army and Navy Club.

The Army and Navy Club was the scene of much gayety on Wednesday when the club entertained at a reception for the delegates. Gen. Pershing was one of the conspicuous persons there and was surrounded during the evening by different groups of friends. Major General Tanaka, a delegate to the conference from Japan, will give a dinner on Dec. 7 in honor of Gen. Pershing.

One of the most interested spectators at the open sessions of the conference for the discussion of the limitation of armament is Mrs. Selden P. Spencer of Missouri. Mrs. Spencer is on familiar ground in

Measuring Mistakes

The dials of speedometers measure more than miles—they measure mistakes. Watch yours today, tomorrow—week after next. How many miles do you average a day? Fifty? Possibly. Seventy? We doubt it!

If you are averaging forty to fifty miles a day in a gasoline car you are carrying excess baggage in cruising radius and paying for it. Your car is built for touring not for the every-day town and suburban use to which you put it.

The Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile has a cruising radius more than ample for all ordinary needs and the cost of upkeep and operation is but a fraction of gas-car expense.

It will interest you to know more about it—we're here to tell you.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS KEEP CONFERENCE DELEGATES BUSY

Memorial Continental Hall, for this is the national home of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. Spencer is chaplain-general.

The D. A. R. has turned over the use of its hall to the Government for the open conference session, and this association to preserve the records of history is satisfied to put itself at great inconvenience in its ordinary business for the purpose of helping Uncle Sam entertain his distinguished guests properly.

Mrs. Spencer's Bible Classes.

Mrs. Spencer will resume her Bible classes, which have been such a huge success, in Lent. It is an inspiring sight to see the grande dames of Washington society gathered around her studying their Testaments assiduously, as they did their social calendars earlier in the season. Mrs. Spencer also conducted a Bible class at the Business Women's Council at the Church of the Covenant every Friday night. This class is composed of hundreds of the young Government workers and it is one of the popular features in the council's program.

A host of friends welcomed back to Washington last week the widow and daughter of the late Champ Clark. Mrs. Clark, who is busy writing her autobiography, which is to contain her reminiscences of 25 years in Washington official life, was entertained informally at tea by Mrs. Harding. Mrs. Thomson accompanied her there and, although they are still in deep mourning, many of their close friends saw them and renewed the old ties. Mrs. Thomson, who is like her distinguished father and was known as the "Daughter of the House" during her school days here, is deeply engaged in newspaper work at present and is learning the business from the ground floor up on her husband's paper, the New Orleans Item. She is now assistant to the business manager and after she learns that end will study the editorial and circulation fields of a daily newspaper.

Train Held for Mrs. Champ Clark.

A pretty little incident happened at the Union Station when Mrs. Clark and "Genevieve," as all of Washington calls the former Speaker's daughter, were leaving for Asheville, N. C., where they spent several weeks, en route to New Orleans, where Mrs. Clark will be the guest over Christmas of her daughter, Mrs. Clark arrived first at the gates and Mrs. Thomson was to join her there. It came to be within three minutes of train time, then two minutes, and no Genevieve. Mrs. Clark was very anxious. Naturally someone told the railroad agent of the road on which they were to travel who Mrs. Clark was.

"Very well," he answered. "I'm from Missouri, too, and I'll hold the train for Champ Clark's people." Hold it he did. Mrs. Thomson had lost the train tickets, so reluctantly he let the train go without them, after waiting three or four minutes for the missing tickets to be found. Yet Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Thomson did not mind the long wait for the next train, because of the vivid demonstration to them that Champ Clark's memory still lives.

316 Births, 175 Deaths Last Week.

WOMEN FOR DELEGATES ON NEW CONSTITUTION

Petitions Being Circulated for Seven as Candidates for Convention Members.

The Missouri Woman's Constitutional Committee, the membership of which consists of representatives of the leading women's organizations of the State, has announced that it is circulating petitions to place on the ballot at the election Jan. 31 the names of seven women, who have been active in public movements, for delegates-at-large to the constitutional convention which will be called sometime next year.

In addition to the seven women, the committee has indorsed several men, and has announced it will assist in circulating petitions for them.

The women who are being supported are: Mrs. George Gellhorn, St. Louis, former president of the Missouri League of Women Voters; Miss Marie B. Ames, St. Louis, legislative secretary of the Missouri Woman's Legislative Committee, and a member of the Minimum Wage Commission; Mrs. Walter McNab Miller, St. Louis; Mrs. Nellie G. Burger, Springfield, state president of the W. C. T. U. and a member of the Minimum Wage Commission; Mrs. W. W. Martin, Fayette, president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Laura L. The men indorsed by the committee are:

Dean Isidor Loeb of the Missouri State University; Cornelius Roach of Kansas City, former Secretary of State; former Judge Samuel Rosenfeld and Dr. M. A. Bliss of St. Louis; R. T. Wood of Springfield, president of the Missouri Federation of Labor and Charles Sumner of Kansas City, representing labor; Chester H. Gray of Nevada and Sherman P. GANZ LETS MUSTACHE GROW

"Kansas City Demanded It," Says Director of Orchestra.

A new mustache has burgeoned upon the countenance of Rudolph Ganz, director of the Symphony Orchestra, replacing another which he shaved last summer, saying that it kept getting in his way when he was climbing in the Alps.

"Kansas City demanded it," he said yesterday. "The orchestra plays in Kansas City, and I have to have a mustache to please the people."

PLANS FOR MODIFYING BUILDING CODE INVITED

Committee to Consider Constructive Criticism of City's Present Regulations.

A central committee composed of representatives of the American Institute of Architects, Master Builders' Association, Engineers' Club, Chamber of Commerce and Real Estate Exchange has been organized to consider constructive criticism of the building code of St. Louis, with a view to its revision.

The committee desires to receive from the public suggestions for constructive revision of the code whereby greater economy in construction may be effected without detracting from the serviceable standard at present provided for. Such suggestions must be addressed to the Central Committee, Building Code Revision, Real Estate Exchange, Room 10? Wainwright Building.

The committee was created following complaints that the code's requirements are too drastic as applied to small dwelling construction.

CAMPAIGN FOR VETERANS' INSURANCE OPENS TOMORROW

Effort Will Be Made for Reinstatement of Policies Which Have Lapsed.

The United States War Veterans' Bureau will begin a campaign tomorrow, which will last all week, to reinstate the war risk insurance of 50,000 St. Louisans who have allowed their policies to lapse. Only 10,000 Government policyholders have kept their insurance of the 60,000 men here who originally held them.

During this week offices will be maintained at the Chamber of Commerce Building, where free medical examinations will be given to those desiring reinstatement. Only those whose policies have lapsed for more than six months will be required to undergo a physical examination. Applicants in good health may reinstate by the payment of two month's premiums; men with service disabilities may renew their insurance by the payment of all back premiums since the lapse of their policies.

All former service men, with the exception of those having permanent and total disabilities or those who have disabilities which are not the result of service, may renew lapsed insurance. The last date on which reinstatement may be made is Dec. 31.

TUMULTY REVEALS DETAILS OF PLOT TO OUST WILSON

plied by letter on the 18th without any comment on his reasons. Bullitt on the 19th asked to see me to say goodby, and I saw him. He elaborated on the reasons for his resignation and said that he could not conscientiously give countenance to a treaty which was based on injustice. I told him that I would say nothing against his resigning, since he put it on conscientious grounds, and that I recognized that certain features of the treaty were bad, as I presumed most everyone did, but that was probably unavoidable in view of conflicting claims, and that nothing ought to be done to prevent the speedy restoration of peace by signing the treaty. Bullitt then discussed the numerous European commissions provided for by the treaty on which the United States was to be represented. I told him that I was disturbed by this fact, because I was afraid the Senate, and possibly the people, if they understood this would refuse ratification, and that anything which was an obstacle to ratification was unfortunate, because we ought to have peace as soon as possible.

When the President received this explanation from Mr. Lansing he sent for me to visit with him in his compartment. At the time I arrived he was seated in his little study, engaged in preparing his speech for the night's meeting. Turning to me, with a deep show of feeling, he said:

"Read that and tell me what you think of a man who was my associate on the other side and who confidentially expressed himself to an outsider in such a fashion. Were I in Washington I would at once demand his resignation! That kind of disloyalty must not be permitted to go unchallenged for a single minute.

The testimony of Bullitt is a confirmation of the suspicions I have had with reference to this individual.

Lansing Embarrassed Him in Paris.

"I found the same attitude of mind on the part of Lansing on the other side. I could find his trail everywhere I went, but they were only suspicions and it would not be fair for me to act upon them. But here in his own statement is a verification at last of everything I have suspected. Think of it! This from a man whom I raised from the level of a subordinate to the great office of Secretary of State of the United States. My God! I did not think it was possible for Lansing to act in this way. When we were in Paris I found that Lansing and others were constantly giving out statements that did not agree with my viewpoint. When I had arranged a settlement, there would appear from some source I could not locate; unofficial statements telling the correspondents not to take things too seriously; that a compromise would be made, and this news, or rather news of this kind, was harmful to the settlement I had already obtained and quite naturally gave the conference the impression that Lansing and his kind were speaking for me, and then the French would say that I was bluffing."

I am convinced that only the President's illness a few days later prevented an immediate demand on his part for the resignation of Mr. Lansing.

That there was no real devotion on the part of Mr. Lansing for the President is shown by the following incident:

A few days after the President returned from the West and lay seriously ill at the White House, with physicians and nurses gathered about his bed, Mr. Lansing sought a private audience with me in the Cabinet room. He informed me that he had called diplomatically to suggest that in view of the incapacity of the President we should arrange to call in the Vice President to act in his stead as soon as possible, reading to me from a book which he had brought from the State Department, which I afterwards learned was "Jefferson's Manual," the following clauses of the United States Constitution:

> In case of the removal of the President from office, or his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve upon the Vice President.

Lansing's Plot to Oust President.

Upon reading this, I coldly turned to Mr. Lansing, and said: "Mr. Lansing, the Constitution is not a dead letter with the White House. I have read the Constitution and do not find myself in need of any tutoring at your hands of the provision you have just read." When I asked Mr. Lansing the question as to who should certify to the disability of the President, he intimated that that would be a job for either Dr. Grayson or myself. I immediately grasped the significance of what he intimated and said: "You may rest assured that while Woodrow Wilson is lying in the White House on the broad of his back, I will not be a party to ousting him. He has been too kind, too loyal and too wonderful to me to receive such treatment at my hands."

Just as I uttered this statement, Dr. Grayson appeared in the Cabinet room and I turned to him and said: "And I am sure that Dr. Grayson will never certify to his disability. Will you Grayson?" Dr. Grayson left no doubt in Mr. Lansing's mind that he would not do as Mr. Lansing suggested. I then notified Mr. Lansing that if anybody outside the White House circle attempted to certify to the President's disability that Grayson and I would stand together and repudiate it. I added that if the President were in a condition to know of this episode he would, in my opinion, take decisive measures. That ended the interview.

It is unnecessary to say that no future attempt was made by Mr. Lansing to institute ouster proceedings against his chief.

I never attempted to ascertain what finally influenced the action of the President peremptorily to demand the resignation of Mr. Lansing. My own judgment is that the demand came as the culmination of repeated acts of what the President considered disloyalty on Mr. Lansing's part while in Paris, and that the situation was evidently exaggerated by Mr. Lansing's notes to Mexico during the President's illness.

When I received fro the President's stenographer the letter to Mr. Lansing, intimating that his resignation would not be a disagreeable thing to the President, I conferred with the President at once and argued with him that in the present state of public opinion it was the

A Sensible Xmas Gift
A CIRCLET is a gift that is sensible because it is useful as well as ornamental. It is "more than a brassiere" and beautifies as it encircles. It is self-adjusting and controls the figure above the waist as the corset does below. Sisters, Mothers, Aunts, Cousins—all would welcome one as a Christmas gift.
The Circlet illustrated, No. 2504, is a beautifully tailored model made in pink batiste of a fancy weave. Like all other Circlets it has no hooks nor eyes to tear or pull out. The price is $2.50.

TUMULTY REVEALS DETAILS OF PLOT TO OUST WILSON

wrong time to do the right thing. At the time the President was seated in his invalid chair on the White House portico. Although physically weak, he was mentally active and alert. Quickly, he took hold of my phrase and said, with a show of the old fire that I had seen on so many occasions: "Tumulty, it is never the wrong time to spike disloyalty. When Lansing sought to oust me, I was upon my back. I am on my feet now and I will not have disloyalty about me."

Not Worried by Lansing Criticism.

When the announcement of Lansing's resignation was made, the flood-gotes of fury broke about the President; but he was serene throughout it all. When I called at the White House on the following Sunday I found him calmly seated in his bathroom, with his colored valet engaged in the not arduous task of cutting his hair. Looking at me with a smile in his eye, he said: "Well, Tumulty, have I any friends left?"

"Very few, Governor," I said. Whereupon he replied: "Of course, it will be another two days' wonder. But in a few days what the country considers an indiscretion on my part in getting rid of Lansing will be forgotten, and when the sober, second thought of the country begins to assert itself, what will stand out will be the disloyalty of Lansing to me. Just think of it! Raised and exalted to the office of Secretary of State, made a member of the Peace Commission, participating in all the conferences and affixing his signature to a solemn treaty, and then hurrying to America and appearing before the Foreign Relatfions Committee of the Senate to repudiate the very thing to which he had given his assent."

During the illness of the President his political enemies sought to convey the impression that he was incapacitated for the duties of his office. As one who came in daily contact with him I know how baseless were these insulations. As a matter of fact, there was not a whole week during his entire illness that he was not in touch with every matter upon which he was called to act, upon which he was asked to render judgment. The White House files contain numerous memoranda showing his interest in all matters to which department heads felt it incumbent to call his attention during his illness. One of the most critical things upon which he passed was the question of the miners' strike, which resulted in the beginning from an injunction suit by the Attorney-General, Mr. Palmer, to restrain the miners from carrying out their proposed strike. This was one of the most critical situations that arose during his illness, and with which he daily kept in touch.

Uncomplainingly the President applied himself to the difficult tasks of the Western trip. While the first meeting at Columbus was a disappointment as to attendance, as we approached the West the crowds grew in numbers and the enthusiasm became boundless. The idea of the league spread and spread as we neared the coast. Contrary to the impression in the East, the President's trip West was a veritable triumph for him and was so successful that we had planned, upon the completion of the Western trip, to invade the enemy's country, Senator Lodge's own territory, the New England States, and particularly Massachusetts. This was our plan, fully developed and arranged, when, about 4 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 26, 1919, Dr. Grayson knocked at the door of my sleeping compartment and told me to dress quickly, that the President was seriously ill. As we walked toward the President's car the doctor told me in a few words of the President's trouble and said that he greatly feared it might end fatally if we should attempt to continue the trip and that it was his duty to inform the President that by all means the trip must be canceled; but that he did not feel free to suggest it to the President without having my co-operation and support.

When we arrive at the President's drawing room I found him fully dressed and seated in his chair. With great difficulty he was able to articulate. His face was pale and wan. One side of it had fallen, and his condition was indeed pitiful to behold. Quickly I reached the same conclusion as that of Dr. Grayson, as to the necessity for the immediate cancellation of the trip, for to continue it, in my opinion, meant death to the President. Looking at me, with great tears running down his face, he said: "My dear boy, this has never happened to me before. I felt it coming on yesterday. I do not know what to do." He then pleaded with us not to cut short the trip. Turning to both of us, he said: "Don't you see that if you cancel this t p Senator Lodge and his friends will say that I am a quitter and that the Western trip was a failure, and the treaty will be lost?" Reaching over to him, I took both of his hands and said: "What difference, my dear Governor, does it make what they say? Nobody in the world believes you are a quitter, but it is your life that we must now consider. We must cancel the trip, and I am sure that when the people learn of your condition there will be no misunderstanding." He then tried to move over nearer to me to continue his argument against the cancellation of the trip; but he found he was unable to do so. His left arm and leg refused to function. I then realized that the President's whole left side was paralyzed. Looking at me, he said: "I want to show them that I can still fight and that I am not afraid. Just postpone the trip for 24 hours and I will be all right."

Grayson Ends Trip.

But Dr. Grayson and I resolved not to take any risk, and an immediate statement was made to the inquiring newspaper men that the Western trip was off.

Never was the President more gentle or tender than on that morning. Suffering from the greatest pain, paralyzed on his left side, he was still fighting desperately for the thing that was so close to his heart—a vindication of the things for which he had so gallantly fought "on the other side." Grim old warrior that he was, he was ready to fight to the death for the League of Nations.

In the dispatches carried to the country, prepared by the fine newspaper men who accompanied us on the Western trip, it was stated that evidences of a breakdown on the part of the President were plainly visible in the speech he delivered at Pueblo on Sept. 25.

I had talked to him only a few minutes before the delivery of that speech, and the only apparent evidence that he was approaching a breakdown was in his remark to me that he had a splitting headache, and that he would have to cut his speech short. As a matter of fact, this last speech he made, at Pueblo, on Sept. 25, 1919, was one of the longest speeches delivered on the Western trip, and, if I may say so, was one of the best and most passionate appeals he had made for the League of Nations.

His Last Great Treaty Speech.

Many things in connection with the Pueblo meeting impressed themselves upon me. In the peroration of the speech he drew a picture of his visit on Decoration day, 1919, to what he called a beautiful hillside near Paris, where was located the cemetery of Suresnes, a cemetery given over to the burial of the American dead. As he spoke of the purposes for which those departed American soldiers had given their lives, a great wave of emotion, such as I have never witnessed at a public meeting, swept through the whole amphitheater. As he continued his speech, I looked at Mrs. Wilson and saw tears in her eyes. I then turned to see the effect upon some of the "hard-boiled" newspaper men, to whom great speeches were ordinary things, and they were alike deeply moved. Down in the amphitheater I saw men sneak their handkerchiefs out of their pockets and wipe the tears from their eyes. The President was like a great organist, playing upon the heart emotions of the thousands of people who were held spellbound by what he said.

It is possible, I pray God it may not be so, that the speech at Pueblo was the last public speech that Woodrow Wilson will ever make, and I, therefore, take the liberty of introducing into this story the concluding words of it:

> What of our pledges to the men that lie dead in France? We said that they went over there not to prove the prowess of America or her readiness for another war, but to see to it that there never was such a war again. It always seems to make it difficult for me to say anything, my fellow citizens, when I think of my clients in this case. My clients are the children; my clients are the next generation. They do not know what promises and bonds I undertook when I ordered the armies of the United States to the soil of France, but I know, and I intend to redeem my pledges to the children; they shall not be sent upon a similar errand.
> Again and again, my fellow citizens, mothers who lost their sons in France have come to me and, taking my hand, have shed tears upon it not only, but they have added, "God bless you, Mr. President!" Why, my fellow citizens, should they pray God to bless me? I advised the Congress of the United States to create the situation that led to the death of their sons. I ordered their sons overseas. I consented to their sons' being put in the most difficult parts of the battle line, where death was certain, as in the impenetrable difficulties of the Forest of Argonne. Why should they weep upon my hand and call down the blessings of God upon me? Because they believe that their boys died for something that vastly transcends any of the immediate and palpable objects of the war. They believe, and they rightly believe, that their sons saved the liberty of the world. They believe that wrapped up with the liberty of the world is the continuous protection of that liberty by the concerted powers of all the civilized world. They believe that this sacrifice was made in order that other sons should not be called upon for a similar gift—the gift of life, the gift of all that died—and if we did not see this thing through, if we fulfilled the dearest present wish of Germany and now dissociated ourselves from those alongside whom we fought in the war, would not something of the halo go away from the gun over the maintenance or the sword? Would not the old uniform lose something of its significance? These men were crusaders. They were going forth to prove the might of justice and right, and all the world accepted them as crusaders, and their transcendent achievement has made all the world believe in America as it believes in no other nation organized in the modern world. There seems to me to stand between us and the rejection or qualification of this treaty the serried ranks of those boys in khaki, not only those boys who came home, but those dear ghosts that still deploy upon the fields of France.
> My friends, on last Decoration day I went to a beatutiful hillside near Paris, where was located the cemetery of Suresness, a cemetery given over to the burial of the American dead. Behind me on the slopes was rank upon rank of living American soldiers, and lying before me on the levels of the plain was rank upon rank of departed American soldiers. Right by the side of the stand where I spoke there was a little group of French women who had adopted those graves, had made themselves mothers of those dear ghosts by putting flowers every day upon those graves, taking them as their own sons, their own beloved, because they had died in the same cause—Farnce was free and the world was free because America had come! I wish some men in public life who are now opposing the settlement for which these men died could visit such a spot as that. I wish that the thought that comes out of those graves could penetrate their consciousness. I wish that they could feel the moral obligation that rests upon us not to go back on those boys, but to see the thing through, to see it through to the end and make good their redemption of the world. For nothing less depends upon this decision, nothing less than the liberation of the world.
> Now that the mists of this great question have cleared away, I believe that men will see the trust, eye to eye and face to face. There is one thing that the American people always rise to and extend their hand to, and that is the truth of justice and of liberty and of peace. We have accepted that truth and we are going to be led by it, and it is going to lead us, and through us the world, out into pastures of quietness and peace such as the world never dreamed of before.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal-oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

NATURE OF WORK DONE BY VISITING NURSES

Association Is Now Seeking a Fund of $10,000 to Continue Its Activities.

Journey, if you will, for a day with one of the nurses of the Visiting Nurse Associtaion, and conclude whether or not this work is worthy of the support of St. Louisans. The asosciation is now seeking to raise money, by individual subscriptions, to carry on its work without curtailment, and it has made no appeal for aid to the general public, save for brief notices that have appeared in the press.

Suppose you have agreed to meet the nurse you will accompany at some transfer corner. You find her there, bright and early—or rainy and cold, but just as early, as the case may be—and recognize her by the becoming uniform she wears. She has a dark felt hat, ornamented with a "V. N. A." pin; dark blue serge coat, with a "V. N. A." armband; dark blue wash dress, with a black tie and white collar. She carries a leather case for the supplies and simple instruments she needs.

The uniform is quite different from that of a nurse of the Municipal Nurses' Association, which is supported entirely from the general revenue of the city, and which performs a different sort of service.

Examples of Service Given.

The nurse and you go into the little home of a workman whose daughter was burned, when her clothing caught fire as she was playing with matches. The child is resting fairly comfortable, and while a surge of pity for her misfortune sweeps over you, the nurse quickly takes her temperature, pulse and respiration, a routine, you will find, that she follows everywhere. You are shocked by the deep burns on the little body, but the nurse carefully dresses them and bathes the sufferer. Fresh linen is arranged and your first visit is over.

Next you stop to see a chronic tubercular patient, whose spine has been so affected as to prevent her from even sitting up in bed. It is necessary to bathe her, dress her back, and make the bed. She is a widow, supported by her mother, who works in a factory, and who daily stops at Father Dempsey's day nursery on the way to work, to leave her daughter's 4-year-old son.

Soon you find yourself at the home of a youth whose back was broken in an automobile accident, and who has been operated on. He has a bed sore which must be dressed.

Skilful nursing is required in the next case, that of a man who fell from a ladder and suffered a compound fracture of the leg. The injury became infected and an antitoxin must be given daily by means of a hypodermic syringe.

Maternity Cases Also Watched.

Perhaps it is time now to get a bite of lunch. The nurse leads the way to an unpretentious neighborhood lunchroom likely—her salary does not permit her to spend much—and before long you are back on the street, to call next on a mother and newborn baby. Besides caring for them the nurse tells neighbors, who supplement her efforts, how to care for two other small children.

A short visit follows to look after a man suffering from empyema, a dangerous resultant of pneumonia. Then comes a stop of some duration to give prenatal instruction to a woman. "One more and we'll call it a day," says the nurse as she sees signs of weariness in you.

But the next case takes time and adds to your growing wonderment that so much disease and want exist in a modern community. The patients, a mother and new baby, are locked in the house and nurse has to find the neighbor who has the key. Then the mother, who has not recovered as she should have, is found to have fever and a doctor is called. He decides on immediate hospital treatment. Once the ambulance has taken the patients away, your companion breathes a tired sigh, and you part, she to rest for a succession of similar days of service and you, perhaps, with thoughts of getting all your friends to contribute to this great work.

Actual Story of Day's Visits.

The visits of one day, just related, form the actual story of a recent day's work by one of the Visiting Nurse Association's 34 nurses, eight of whom are negroes, who work among their own race. The report for that typical day will perhaps serve to show the range of the work, although it should be explained that prevention is an important and large part of it. The nurses first of all devote themselves to caring for the sick or injured for whom they were called, the calls being transmitted by various agencies, and then they analyze the causes that brought them and either remedy these fundamental conditions or refer them to the proper agency.

The nurses visit an average of 300 patients daily. It costs about 75 cents for each visit, a sum which includes nurse's time, carfare, and

REPORT MADE ON WORK DONE BY THE BLIND

One Women, 73, Cut Out 1000 Pieces of Cloth for Aprons in Last Year.

Reports on the practical work being done by blind persons in Missouri, were made last night at the annual election of officers of the Missouri Association for the Blind, held at the Medical Society headquarters, 3525 Pine street. The officers elected were:

President, Robert Johnston; vice president, W. Frank Carter; treasurer, Arthur Barnes; directors, Samuel McK. Green, Louis Gustafson, John F. Queeney, Arthur Baer and Christopher L. Johnson.

Miss Sarah Woods, who is 73 years old, and blind, reported that during the last year she had cut out 1000 pieces of work which blind workers made into aprons, towels and dust cloths. Miss Addie Ruenzi, also blind, who visits the homes of adult blind persons in St. Louis to give lessons in reading, writing and occupational work, told the directors that in the last year she had made 1200 such visits—an average of 100 a month.

James Huff, blind superintendent of the workshop here, reported that the articles manufactured at the shop during the year included 4000 dozen brooms, 700 dozen brushes, 100 dozen whisk brooms, 60 dozen mops and 50,000 cans of a cleaning preparation. Some of the work, he added, was done by adults who had recently lost their sight, but had become able, within the year, to help support themselves.

Theatrical managers and the promoters of various musical affairs had supplied many tickets to blind persons, it developed. Also, during a week of Shakspearean repertoire, 15 free seats were given each night to blind persons.

The association is a voluntary organization which devotes its energies toward educating the blind and obtaining work for them, and also toward preventing blindness. It cooperates with the Missouri Commission for the Blind.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Le Faivre Were Married at St. Charles.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Le Faivre of 4225 Enright avenue, celebrated their golden wedding at their home last Monday. There were many guests for dinner and a reception, including some who witnessed their marriage in St. Charles Borromeo Church, St. Charles, on Nov. 28, 1871, which was Thanksgiving day that year. Theirs was the last wedding ceremony performed in that church.

LeFaivre was born in St. Charles and met his wife, a St. Louis girl, when she was attending Sacred Heart Convent at St. Charles. LeFaivre, who is 72 years old, is employed at a downtown store. His wife, who is 65, has not been in good health recently, but was able to receive at the golden wedding. The Le Faivres had six children. Only two are living, Hubert J. Le Faivre of 2630 Margaret avenue, Maplewood, a former Maplewood Councilman, and Edgar F. LeFaivre of Indianapolis, Ind.

NATURE OF THE WORK DONE BY VISITING NURSES

a pro rata of the small "overhead" cost of running the association. About one-half of the visits are paid for in full. A number of patients pay the nurses' carfare, but about one-quarter of them receive care without any payment on their part. Those who don't pay are those who cannot. The total expense for 1921 will total about $65,000, including the payment of nurses' salaries at $115 a month.

A month ago the association sent letters to 10,000 St. Louisans, asking for contributions of any size, no matter how large or small; to 50 firms, asking for $50 apiece, and to 100 wealthy persons, asking for $100 apiece. Aside from newspaper notices this is all that has been done to get funds. It was desired to raise $10,000, which sum would assure the full continuance of the work until about April 1, next year. Plans for the maintenance thereafter are being formulated. There has been raised during the past month about $6000 of the desired $10,000.

President Explains Work.

Mrs. John A. Haskell of 4453 West Pine boulevard, president of the association, explained its work. She said:

"It is the foundation for the other social service organizations. If we can prevent sickness the other organizations may not be needed so much, and where we have sickness with us already we can often obviate hospital care, at a saving to the public. We take care of mothers and babies in greater numbers than any other class of patients. We don't handle patients without the supervision of physicians, for we believe in 'ethical' nursing, which means proper diagnosis and instruction.

"Our nurses are the field force of a city-wide hospital and each is known in her neighborhood as is the policeman or postman. The children, seeing one, cry out, 'Here comes our nurse,' or 'our health policeman.' Ultimately the city should support this work, but that is not for discussion now."

The Visiting Nurse Association was organized 11 years ago by Mrs. Philip N. Moore, who is now honorary vice president. Its appeal for funds has been indorsed by Health Commissioner Starkloff and Dr. Emmett P. North, president of the St. Louis Medical Society and the State Board of Health, among others.

The event will be in the nature of a testimonial performance in his honor. He will be supported by a stock company.

SALVATION ARMY CHRISTMAS KETTLES APPEAR ON STREETS

Salvation Army kettles with the familiar slogan, "Keep the kettle boiling," appeared on the streets yesterday, with Salvation Army women ringing bells to attract attention. Thfe kettles will remain on the streets until Christmas Eve and the funds raised will be used for winter relief work.

Brigadier David E Dunham, head of Salvation Army activities in St. Louis, issued a statement in which he said that the demands on the army now were much heavier than for the same period last year.

He also issued a warning against fake solicitors who are going from door to door soliciting funds. He said that many of these persons intimated that they are in some way connected with the Salvation Army. He said the army had no solicitors going from door to door and that, as in the past, the kettles will be the only means employed to obtain winter relief offerings. He asked that persons going from door to door, representing themselves as Salvation Army workers, be reported to the police.

ALLEN DECIDES ON APPOINTMENT OF FOUR OF HIS AIDS

Gus O. Nations Said to Be Slated for Chief Enforcement Officer in St. Louis.

ELMER TO BE CHIEF COUNSEL

Percy Bollinger of Clinton Expected to Head Kansas City Office and Ashcraft May Get Springfield Job.

A decision was reached yesterday by William H. Allen, Prohibition Director for Missouri, on four appointments to the more important positions under him, which, according to reliable information, will be entirely satisfactory to the Rev. W. C. Shupp, superintendent of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, Republican National Committeeman Babler and Senator Spencer.

Although Allen refused to tell a Post-Dispatch reporter whom he had decided upon, he admitted he had reached a decision. From other sources it was learned that Gus O. Nations, a lawyer of St. Louis, who served for a time as Supervisor of the Blue Sky Division of the State Department of Finance, has been agreed upon for Chief Prohibition Enforcement Officer of St. Louis, and will be appointed unless there is an unlooked for slip. His selection is reported to be on demand of Shupp.

There are in Missouri three group heads in the Prohibition Enforcement service. They are in charge of the offices in St. Louis, Kansas City and Springfield, and are really Chief Enforcement officers. Nations, according to the report, is to be the group head in St. Louis. Percy Bollinger of Clinton, which was Allen's former home, will be appointed for the Kansas City office, and Lon L. Ashcraft of Carthage for the Springfield office.

Elmer to Be Special Council.

William P. Elmer of Salem, member of the Legislature from Dent County, and since the adjournment of the Legislature a special attorney for the State Tax Commission, will, it is said, be appointed Special Council for the Prohibition Director with headquarters in Kansas City. Elmer's acceptance is reported to have been with the understanding that it was not to weaken his support for appointment to the office of United States District Attorney in St. Louis, for which he is slated by the Babler forces when a vacancy occurs.

The selections appear to Republican politicians in St. Louis to have been very largely dictated by Babler and Shupp, though Spencer was consulted. It is probable that in making their slate Babler and Shupp were careful to select men who would not be objectionable to Spencer.

Bollinger, who is slated to head the Kansas City office, is known politically in St. Louis, and probably was Allen's personal selection. Nations was an active supporter of Gov. Hyde in the primary and general election campaigns and, according to information at the time, was promised a good job by Hyde. Instead he was given a subordinate place in one of the departments at Jefferson City, from which he resigned after serving a short time.

Nations has long been considered an Anti-Saloon League choice for appointment to some place, and has been considered for several, among them being that of Prohibition Director, to which Allen was appointed. Babler is said to have supported Shupp in the demand for Nation's appointment as chief enforcement officer.

Ashcroft a Babler Man.

Ashcroft, who has been chairman of the Republican County Committee of Jasper County, has been lined up politically with the Babler element, and was in no sense one of the house cleaners of the last campaign. He supported Spencer in the primary.

Elmer for many years has been closely associated with Babler in Republican politics. He also was principal defender of the Hyde administration on the floor of the House during the three sessions of the Legislature this year, though he was for McJimsey and against Hyde for the nomination for Governor. In an aside in a debate on the floor of the House several months ago, he said: "I am a Jake Babler Republican."

Supported for District Attorney.

Elmer has the active support of Babler for appointment as United States District Attorney when District Attorney 'Carroll's place becomes vacant. Carroll has nearly three years to serve, and there have been negotiations for Elmer to go into the office as an assistant, to be elevated to District Attorney later, but Carroll is reported to have objected to that arrangement, as he also is reported to have demurred to a suggestion that he resign at the end of another year to permit Elmer's appointment.

Allen said yesterday he would not make public the names of those he had chosen for positions under him until they had been approved in Washington.

He said he had not considered either Nick Polito, Republican City Committeeman from the Fourth Ward, or Andrew Stevenson, former city detective and former manager of the Falstaff bar and cafe, for chief enforcement officer in St. Louis. There have been reports for several weeks that local Republicans were divided between Polito and Stevenson for the job. Allen said they would not be considered for any jobs except enforcement officers, for which there were several hundred applicants. There are only 13 enforcement officers in Missouri. Allen said that number was not sufficient for St. Louis alone, and that he intended to ask that the number be increased.

Jewish Council to Meet Here.

The triennial meeting of the Jewish Council, an organization composed of 40,000 women in 179 different sections throughout the world, including England, Australia and Japan, will be held in St. Louis during 1923, in the latter part of November. This was announced in a telegram received by Mrs. M. J. Lowenstein, past president of the St. Louis section. It is estimated by Charles F. Hatfield, secretary and general manager of the St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau, that the meeting will bring at least 5000 delegates and visitors to St. Louis.

PROMOTION OF MAJ. PECK TO BE PROPOSED AGAIN TO SENATE

War Department Makes Known Intention; Curtis Says He Will Ask for Rejection.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Senators opposed to the confirmation of Maj. Robert G. Peck to be Lieutenant-Colonel predict that his renomination will be rejected whenever it reaches the Senate.

Announcement was made by the War Department yesterday that Maj. Peck's nomination would be sent in again.

Senator Curtis said he was against Maj. Peck's confirmation and forecast rejection.

The War Department stated that the action of the Senate was "disciplinary" and that opportunity should be given that body to determine "if such action should continue or be concluded."

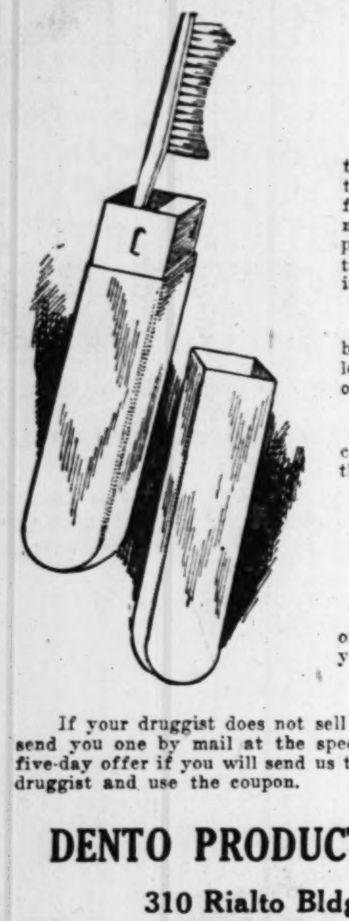
The Department's announcement reads:

"The many inquiries that have been received on the status of promotions since the Senate's nonconfirmation of the nomination of Maj. R. G. Peck, infantry, for promotion to the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel, calls for a statement of the War Department's interpretation of the effect of the Senate's action.

"The nonconfirmation of the nomination of Maj. Peck is regarded as affecting all vacancies that existed on the date when the Senate declined to confirm his nomination. Promotions to fill all such vacancies will be made immediately by the promotion of those already confirmed and by recess appointments of other officers next in line for promotion.

"The Senate's action will be interpreted as not extending to vacancies created subsequent to the date that the Senate declined to confirm the nomination of Maj. Peck. The senior officer in a grade is by law entitled to nomination for promotion. Furthermore, the Senate has, in effect, taken disciplinary action, and should, therefore, always have the opportunity to decide if such action should continue or be concluded. The nomination of Maj. Peck for promotion will, therefore, be submitted to the Senate for confirmation to fill the first vacancy in the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel arising subsequent to the date of the Senate's action."

Senator Capper this morning said he was "surprised at the nerve of the War Department in planning to send back the nomination of Maj. Peck." He thinks a worse defeat will be administered than was the case last session when the Senate rejected the promotion. Senator Capper stated also that additional testimony against Maj. Peck would be available.



For Those Who Care

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's death was caused from an abcessed tooth. Lord Grey's threatened blindness was relieved by clearing up a tooth infection. James J. Hill, pioneer railroad builder of America, died from pyorrheal infection. Thousands of insane persons have had their mental faculties restored by removal of impacted teeth. The mental and physical conditions of school children have been greatly improved through the teachings of prophylaxis—all of which emphasizes the tremendous importance of the proper care of the teeth and the mouth.

More germs live and breed in the mouth than any other part of the body and, while they can only be seen by use of strong microscopic lenses, they multiply very rapidly. One germ can produce a family of over fifteen million in twenty-four hours.

Unless the toothbrush is thoroughly sterilized before using it becomes a source of great danger to the health of the individual using the brush.

PROTESTS TO HYDE ON DETECTIVE'S ACTION

Michigan Governor Says Man Was Removed From State Without Requisition Papers.

After receiving a letter of protest from Gov. Groesbeck of Michigan, Gov. Hyde of Missouri asked Circuit Attorney Sidener to report to him the circumstances under which Louis Fodor, under indictment here on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses, was brought to St. Louis from Detroit, Nov. 4, by Detective Sergeant John Becherer, without extradition.

Fodor is charged with having passed a worthless check for $150 on the Night and Day Bank last April. Through a private detective agency he was arrested in Detroit, April 29. An indictment was issued against him here and he was brought to St. Louis on extradition papers issued by Gov. Hyde and honored by Gov. Groesbeck.

Released on Bond.

After being brought back Fodor was released on a $1000 bond signed by Louis Seidel, a professional bondsman. He is said to have jumped his bond and returned to Detroit. Detective Sergeant Becherer went to Michigan with extradition papers charging Fodor with being a fugitive from justice. Gov. Groesbeck this time refused to honor the extradition papers. Becherer then brought Fodor back without requisition.

In a letter to Gov. Hyde Friday Gov. Groesbeck said the Attorney-General of Michigan advised him that he would be in his rights if he were to ask that Fodor be returned to Michigan at the State of Missouri's expense and that he also would be justified in asking that Becherer be sent to Michigan on extradition to answer a charge of kidnaping.

Gov. Groesbeck's Attitude.

Gov. Groesbeck wrote that he would make only the first mentioned request at this time, but he asked for an explanation as to Becherer's conduct in removing Fodor from the State of Michigan.

Circuit Attorney Sidener yesterday said he was looking into the case, but had reached no conclusion as to the legality of the detective's action.

At police headquarters it was said that Becherer went to Detroit with authorization of Seidel to take charge of Fodor as a bond-jumper, and that he was assured by the State's Attorney of Detroit that he had a right to bring Fodor to St. Louis.

After returning with Becherer, Fodor waived a preliminary examination and pleaded not guilty. He is awaiting trial.

Grocery Manager Reports Robbery.

Charles Gordon, manager of a Kroger grocery at 3613 West Florissant avenue, reported to the police yesterday that burglars had broken into the store Friday night and had found a sack containing $46.69, which he had secreted in a case of beans for safekeeping instead of taking chances on carrying it home with him and being held up.

SIX MEN NOW IN CONTEST FOR ST. LOUIS POSTMASTERSHIP

Three of These, C. D. Comfort, G. W. Kriegesman and W. A. Benson Already Filed for Examination.

Senator Spencer announced yesterday that he had received notice from three applicants for the St. Louis Postmastership that they would take the Civil Service examiliation Dec. 20. From the three highest in the examination the Postmaster will be chosen.

The applicants mentioned by Spencer were C. D. Comfort of 4670 South Broadway, a number of years ago auditor of postoffice stations in St. Louis, and now connected with the Shapleigh Hardware Co.; George W. Kriegesman, Webster Groves, and W. A. Benson, a manufacturer's agent, 620 Chestnut street. Others who are expected to take the examination are Circuit Clerk Nat Goldstein, George W. Davidson, an employe in the Postoffice, and H. E. Nelson, a clerk in the St. Louis office of the Railway Mail Service.

Goldstein is the only one of the applicants with the political support usually considered necessary to obtain the appointment. Although Spencer never has publicly acknowledged support of Goldstein, Goldstein is looked upon as the Spencer candidate.

Town to Be Sold for Judgment.

By the Associated Press.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 3.—Auction of West Fargo, which grew up around the Equity Co-operative Packing Co., has been postponed ten days, it was announced here today. Decision to postpone the sale, which was to satisfy a judgment of approximately $50,000, which Lewis Altenbernd, of Sabin, held against the packing company in consequence of a loan, was reached after a conference between Altenbernd and company officials. The town consists of 24 dwellings, a combined store and hotel and 82 acres.

A Good Piano

Can Once More Be Obtained at Small Cost

New low prices are in effect on the well-known Washburn Pianos and Player Pianos! Now, again, you can get a thoroughly dependable instrument at a very moderate figure.

This is the buying opportunity for which thousands have waited! They have hesitated to risk the purchase of a piano that might be "tin-panny" in ten years. But war-time costs put such good instruments as the Washburn beyond their reach.

A Lifetime Piano

Everywhere the Washburn Piano is known for uncommon durability. Thousands of these instruments have stood the rigors of ocean travel and are giving true satisfaction under the severe climatic conditions of tropical lands—of South America, of Asia, of Africa!

It is as an ideal piano for the home that the Washburn has achieved its great success. Its purity and sweetness of tone help to train the child's ear to a true appreciation of musical quality.

Scientific design and great care in construction assure this lasting goodness. They result, too, in musical quality rare among such moderate-priced pianos. The tone of the Washburn will delight you! It is round, resonant, full, and sympathetic. And its sweetness remains unimpaired by time and use!

The Washburn Player

The Washburn Player Piano takes the same position of leadership! For in the good Washburn is incorporated the perfected Lyon & Healy-made Player. It is an instrument of true musical worth! It holds keen enjoyment for the first-time performer. And the trained musician, as well, finds in it unlimited opportunity for expression—to give his own interpretation to the music.

Lyon & Healy Founded 1864

That it is made by Lyon & Healy guarantees the goodness of the Washburn Piano. Into it has gone the knowledge born of 57 years of handling high grade instruments.

You Save $100

At the new price level, the purchase of a Washburn Piano or Player Piano saves you fully $100 from the usual price of competitive instruments. And you get an instrument that stands out as notably superior! In beauty of tone, skill of workmanship, and excellence of material, it has few rivals, except among those pianos whose claim to artistic pre-eminence is recognized.

See and hear these good instruments at your first opportunity! Why not come in tomorrow?

ART LEAGUE DRAMA PRIZES ARE AWARDED

Mrs. Edna Wallace McCourt Wns $100 on Play, "Holt Macadam."

The awards in the annual drama contest of the Art League were announced yesterday by Mrs. Walter B. Douglas, chairman of the league's Committee on Drama.

Prizes were offered in three classes, $100 for the best three-act or four-act play, $50 for the best one-act play, and $25 for the best fantasy or other special work. No second prizes were offered in these classes, but mention was made of two plays in the longer class, and of one in each of the other classes. The list of awards is:

Long plays:

First prize, $100, Mrs. Edna Wallace McCourt, 6060 Pershing avenue, "Holt Macadam."

Second place, Robert Hanna, 4453 West Pine boulevard, "Mated."

Third place, Irving Brandt, newspaper writer, "The Rope."

One-act plays:

First prize, $50, Mrs. John T. Boogher, 4315 Washington, "Cleopatra's Breakfast."

Second place, Irving Brandt, "I Don't Bet."

Special class:

First prize, $25, Mrs. Margaretta Scott Lawler, "Jumping Jack," a children's fantasy.

Second place, John J. Johns, Sappington, "The Garden Wall."

Mrs. McCourt's prize-winning play, "Holt Macadam," pictures a naturalist who, for the sake of his growing family, must give up the study and research which might make him famous in his favorite pursuit, and stick to business life. This renunciation is carried out to the last, and the final great opportunity to join an expedition to South America disappears, when the son who was to take his father's place in the factory decides that he must follow his own professional bent instead. As a compensation, it is indicated that the family for which the sacrifice has been made is a worth-while one.

Robert Hanna's "Mated," is a presentation of varying phases of married life. Brant's "The Rope," is about a labor leader, accused of murder through misleading circumstances, and of his ironic fate through the mistaken impulse of a mob.

"Cleopatra's Breakfast," shows the famous Queen in a cynical frame of mind toward her Mark Anthony, and disposed to gibe at his oft-repeated reminder that he had "thrown the world away" for her. "I Don't Bet," is in light vein.

Under the terms of the contest, the Art League has the right to one production of the winning plays. In some years such productions have been made; in other years they have not been found possible, but the producing qualities of the plays offered, within reasonable limits of stage resource, are considered by the judges in reaching their decision.

The judges who made this year's award were Prof. John Robert Moore of Washington University; Miss Florence Hayward and Carlos F. Hurd.

Book of Knowledge

I Waited Too Long

PROCRASTINATION caused me to neglect the most important duty of my life, to give my child an education at home. I can look back now and see my mistake. A few years ago my boy nearly drove me crazy asking questions, but they were either too hard to answer or I was too tired to bother with him. The inevitable thing happened; he lost his desire to learn and after a while did not trouble me with any more questions.

Your Home an Educational Institution

No teacher, no school, can thoroughly educate children. Education begins when a child first opens its eyes, and ends only when they are closed for the last time. We ask an impossibility when we expect a school to take our boys and girls a few hours a day for a few years, and return them to us high-minded, efficient—in short, educated men and women.

The real task of the teacher is to put a child in the way of educating himself. Education is an individual matter in which the teacher is only one factor. The home surroundings and the spirit in which the child regards the school are quite as important as the part of the teacher. The more a child brings to the school-room, the more he will gain there. The home, if properly equipped, is the greatest Educational Institution in the world.

Answers Every Question a Child Can Ask

A Christmas Gift Worth Any Sacrifice

To most parents the welfare of their children is dearer than their own. Therefore a gift which will make the children happier in the home, more resourceful on the playground and more successful in the school, and through which, at the same time, high ethical ideals are unconsciously inculcated, self-reliance developed, and the desire for knowledge made a passion, is worth any sacrifice.

The BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE will do all of these things. The children will be content to stay at home to devour the volumes, instead of seeking companionship, sometimes undesirable, abroad.

A New System of Home Study

The BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is a new method of education in the home. Over 10,000 striking educational pictures, many in colors, and brief interesting articles show and explain to the child of today the whole cycle of existence and circle of truth to which he is entitled by birth. It is the first work of reference which a child ever really enjoyed reading. It expands every faculty of the child's growing mind and leads him step by step from his first simple question into all the departments of knowledge.

A Child Learns Through Curiosity

Curiosity is the beginning of all knowledge. Do you know any subject about which your child has not asked you a dozen questions? Let him ask as many as he likes, and be sure to answer them correctly. It is your plain duty to answer the child's questions or give him the means of finding the reply himself. When a child's curiosity voluntarily offers an opportunity to teach him something he will never forget, it would be wrong to let it slip. The BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE was created to satisfy this "Divine Curiosity." It answers every question a child can ask, clearly and in words he understands. It educates while it entertains.

INVESTMENT TYPE SECURITIES STILL IN GOOD DEMAND

Foreign Exchange Rates Have Sharp Upward Range During Week—Stock Market Helped by Strength of Bonds.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Sustained demand for investment securities continues to be the outstanding feature of our domestic financial and business situation. Good new issues are absorbed promptly. Government bonds press forward to new high records, and the supply of investment funds overflows from the bond market into that for the better grade of dividend paying stocks. Reactions in stocks expected for technical reasons fail to materialize because of this persistent investment buying. Furthermore, with trade reflecting seasonal dullness, and with continued imports of gold, an easy money market and a strong demand reasonably may be anticipated during the coming week.

German Marks Rally.

"Sharp rallies and reactions in German marks and the allied exchanges call attention afresh to the approach of a crisis in German reparations. Starting from 37 hundredths of a cent on Tuesday, marks swept up to 58 hundredths on Thursday and then reacted to 43 hundredths before the close on Friday. Sterling jumped from $3.99 to $4.07½ and then reacted to $4.04. The other allied exchanges showed comparable movements. All this resulted from the growing idea that developments at London favor a revision of the reparation terms, and from the announcement of a conference between representatives of the principle allied banks of issue to consider the avoidance of exchange disturbances in connection with future reparation payments.

"Cables from London which have reported the recent visits of Stinnes and Rathenau and the conversations between representatives of the Bank of England and the German ministry of construction refer to the possibly of a moratorium on reparation payments. It would be premature to assume, however, that such an event is likely in any simple form. It must be remembered that a sharp split exists between British and French interests and sentiments in this matter. As a result, the British are likely to joint out that Germany cannot pay more than perhaps another installment of the existing program and that to continue the present stupendous rate of inflation in Germany is but to court disaster and prolong chaotic conditions in Europe. The French, on the other hand, will point to the justice of their claim, accuse Germany of shamming, and demand that every francs possible be exacted. A compromise embodying certain concessions to Gehmany, such as providing for an increased proportion of reparations in kind, while at the same time requiring fiscal reforms by Germany, is the probable outcome.

Reparation Problem.

"While our own interests in the matter probably are more closely akin to those of England, the wisest policy to pursue with regard to the reparations problem is to urge that the matter be looked at from an economic standpoint. There is no use in saddling Germany with a heavier load than she is able to carry. Such action will simply defeat our own ends. The problem really consists in ascertaining Germany's ability to pay and then adjusting reparations with reference to this amount. Necessary reforms should at the same time be insisted upon. Our attitude should be, in other words, that of a creditor confronted with the necessity of rehabilitating a bankrupt debtor.

"The responsible allied representatives meanwhile continue to indulge in defiant gestures for home consumption, although doubtless recognizing the true nature of the situation. Paradoxical as it may appear, democracy probably is delaying a rational situation of the difficulty. Many persons are dispirited by such circumstances and can see no good in the present outlook. Such pessimism is unwarranted. Europe has progressed far since the days of Kahki elections. Bolshevism has lost its hold. Socialistic finance is on the wane. Governments now dare to introduce financial reforms which two years ago might have caused revolutions. People are beginning to recognize that Governments cannot support countries, but that countries must support Governments. Budgets gradually are coming under control and the worst of the trade depression probably lies behind us. Barring unexpected acts of folly, the situation justifies cheerfulness."

Saturday's Market Higher.

"Trading on the Stock Excahnge was relatively quiet, with price changes irregular. Rails were practically neglected and hardly moved in price from the day before. Continued strength among independent steels was a feature of the industrial list. Gains and losses of a point or two occurred among a number of issues, but movements for the most part were fractional. Sterling was firm at $4.04⅝ and German marks recovered to 0.45 of a cent. Business was light. January cotton gained 18 points at 17.30c, but rain and snow in the Southwest brought slightly lower prices for wheat. May lost ⅝ of a cent at $1.16⅛.

"An increase of $3,400,000 in surplus reserve is shown by the Clearing House banks, the total for this item standing at $18,000,000. Loans have increased by $17,500,000 and deposits by $5,700,000. Reserve deposits at the Federal Reserve Bank have increased by $2,900,000. Government deposits are less by $10,600,000."

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The Evening Post, in its weekly foreign exchange review, says:

"Violent advances in European exchanges on Thursday overshadowed all other movements and developments in the market during the week and demanded concentrated attention on the remaining days of the week. These advances were practically the consummation of a series of upturns and periods of strength that have bee ncontinually noted since the beginning of September, and which have resulted in gradual contractio of the volume of business in exchanges on all important points until at times the market became one of wide movement, with onl ya nominal amount of trading.

"On Monday the tone was extremely weak, demand sterling then selling as low as $3.98, and continental exchanges were also heavy and substantial declines, but improvement quickly set in and there were general advances on the two succeeding days carrying demand sterling to above $4 again on Wednesday.

"Then steps for the control of the exchange markets, including the arrangements for a conference in London to be attended by a delegate from this country and the suggestions in regard to an outer German moratorium and the creation of a German credit in London, together with numerous rumors and predictions caused a display of strength that was reflected in violent advances on Thursday. Demand sterling advanced to $4.07¼ for the first time since April, 1920, when it held at $4.07 for an extremely short period, and violent advances were also made in French, Italian and German rates. Checks on Paris, after selling as low as 6.89 on Monday, rushed up to 7.39, and lire checks moved up from 4.06 to 4.41¼, reaching a new high level for the year.

"Exchange on Germany was directly influenced by the reported plan including new credits and moratorium, marks checks moving up from .35 to .56. A better tone was shown in the market for Central European exchanges. Spanish moved up to a new high for the year, but Swiss and Dutch were not materially altered in their market position, although there were wide variations during the week in exchange on Amsterdam.

"Sterling was firm Saturday and German marks recovered to .45 of a cent. Business was light.

PROFIT-TAKING MARKS CURB TRADE AFTER RISE

Oil Shares Attract Most Attention Though Interest Shown in Minings.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Business was fair on the curb exchange today, but after early advances had been recorded in some issues there was a somewhat easier tendency due to the taking of profits. The oil shares attracted most attention, but some interest was shown in mining issues, Cortez silver being active and strong, with a good demand for a time in Eureka Croesus and Boston and Montana. Acme Coal was more active. The tobacco stocks were easier.

Anglo-American and Simms Petroleum were features of the oil list, both being in demand at higher levels. Standard Oil of Indiana eased off on profit-taking. Small advances were recorded in International Petroleum and Imperial Oil of Canada.

Philip Morris led the list in the tobaccos. United Retail Candy, which usually moves with the tobaccos, acted independently and moved up a small fraction. Business was smaller in bonds. The tone was steady and price changes generally were confined to fractional limits.

What Does $1000 Earn For You?

Great fortunes are built on the earning power of money—and not on savings bank interest.

These fortunes are built by seizing opportunity by the forelock. This can be done in investment markets as well as in business or personal life.

The opportunities are always there—it is merely a question of seizing them. Isn't it reasonable that our 95-page book devoted to should be the means of placing you on the right road to financial independence which all of us strive for, but which so few of us achieve?

"Scientific Methods of Investing and Trading in Stocks"

FINANCIAL LONDON STILL HOPEFUL OF ARMS CONFERENCE

Reported Hitches and Complications Have Not Changed Feelings — Outlook Favors Improvement in Investment Securities, Says Writer.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"In spite of reported hitches and complications, the feeling in financial circles regarding the Washington conference is hopeful. It is impossible, for example, not to believe that Washington must have an increasing appreciation of the complicated political problems which Britain has to handle in the European situation. Inasmuch, therefore, as Washington and London's aims with reference to international peace, with freedom from every kind of aggression, are identical, it is considered that closer active co-operation between America and Britain should result. Apparently there is already some evidence of this tendency in the smoothing out of Chinese problems.

"The further important rally in the German mark indicates the importance attached to proposals for leniency and revision in the reparation arrangements. It is believed that reparation payments increasingly will take the form of a delivery of goods rather than cash on a gold basis, and it is difficult to see how France, having regard to the Wiesbaden agreement, can combat arrangements along these lines. There is much talk that any leniency in the matter of reparation payments will be strictly conditional on the German Government's commencing drastic reforms of budgets and currency. Nevertheless, it is well to remember that drastic deflation means much temporary inconvenience and distress and it is a question as to whether any Government is strong enough to effect other than gradual reforms.

Curzon's Speech Called Deplorable.

"Our Government's general policy towards the present attitude of France is approved in financial quarters, barring Curzon's recent speech, which is a deplorable specimen of diplomacy.

"Vanderlip's proposals, like his previous suggestions, are regarded as fine in principle, but premature and idealistic. Moreover, it is considered better that interest and enthusiasm for the devastated countries, whether displayed by America or Britain, should take the form of active support of the Ter-Meulen bond scheme, which undoubtedly is the soundest proposal at present before the public. It has the merit of requiring the active co-operation of the Governments of importing countries in everything pertaining to international reforms.

"Reppington's cable from New York to the Daily Telegraph discussing the idea of mobilizing your gold accumulations as a kind of central fund for restoring international trade on a gold basis is scouted as impracticable. All these schemes lack sufficient recognition of the sanctity of Mieum and Tium and the necessity for debtor countries redeeming wartime obligations through increased labor. Moreover, lurking behind these schemes is an indefinable worship of idleness and leisure, and a refusal to recognize the ennobling influence of labor.

"Our Government now is eagerly pressing export credits upon manufactures, but the thing is somewhat clumsily done. The object manifestly is chiefly political with an eye to relieving unemployment. It is impossible, meanwhile, to take a really optimistic view about Ireland, because even assuming for the moment that Ulster were semi-coerced into union with Sinn Fein in a joint parliament, the closest observers believe that such a situation could not possibly last.

Investment Securities Strong.

"The outlook still favors an improvement in investment securities, checked only by constant fresh loans. Among the favorable factors are continuance of comfortable conditions in the money market and bursts of hopefulness concerning the outcome of the Washington conference. Of course, if the conference is successful, it is hoped that the first result will be a revival of international trade. The views concerning the effect of such a revival on money rates are conflicting. Some assert that money rates must rise; others maintain that a revival of international trade is only possible if preceded by fresh creation of international government credits, which would, of course, involve fresh inflation."

To Offer $55,000,000 New York Refunding Issues.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Comptroller Craig has announced that bids would be opened Dec. 15 for $55,000,000 50-year corporate stock of New York City. This is the first long-term bond sale that has been made by the city since July 12, 1917. The bonds will pay 4¼ per cent. Besides the amount offered to the public the municipal authorities will purchase about $50,000,000 for the sinking and pension funds.

The practice of issuing long-term obligations was discontinued in 1918 to avoid having the city sell its bonds in competition with the Federal Government.

The Comptroller said yesterday that, with the bond market again at 4¼ per cent level it was determined to clean up the city's short-term obligations. Practically all of these issued during the war are being refunded. The new money is being borrowed, so the city's debt is not increased by the sale.

Drygoods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Cotton goods showed softening tendency at first hands in today's market. Yarns were quiet. All staple lines of wool dress goods were quiet. Silks were marked up following the rise in raw materials, but demand was light. Burlaps were lower, with a slightly easing tendency, while linens were steady.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The raw sugar market was quiet and as no sales were reported, prices were unchanged at 3.87@3.11 for centrifugal. The market for raw sugar futures was quiet and closing prices were unchanged to three points net lower. Under scattered local selling, January, 2.17; March, 2.18; May, 2.27; July, 2.38. The demand for refined is still limited and prices were unchanged at 5.20 to 5.30 for fine granulated. Refined sugar futures were without transactions, closing unchanged to a shade net higher. January, March and May closed at 5.30 bid.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Trading in the stock market this morning was quiet by comparison with yesterday. Interest was limited to a number of special issues, some of which were weak, but most of which went higher. On the whole the market position at the end of the day was very little changed. There was no suggestion, any more than there had been the previous days, of the reaction which the trading element has been discussing. On the contrary, nearly all of the fresh initiative was on the side of rising prices.

No further light was thrown upon the negotiations for the new steel merger or upon the terms on which the various properties are to be taken in, but all the stock concerned got well above yesterday's prices.

The other features of the day were the shipping stocks, which were actively bought on a report that the President would soon come out with a special message advocating a subsidiary for the American merchant marine; Transcontinental Oil, which was favorably affected by the reported completion of its deal with Standard Oil of California, Westinghouse Electric, Atlantic Oils, American Ice, and Wickwire Steel. On the other hand, Central Leather stocks were very weak. International Paper, Sears-Roebuck and Industrial Alcohol were heavy.

The Bond Market.

The greater part of the bond market today was practically at the levels established around the close yesterday. Liberty Bonds made the largest gains. Their activity together with the dealings in railway securities, most of which were steady, constituted the bulk of the trading. Foreign Governments generally were firm although a few of these issues, which fell off slightly yesterday, continued to decline fractionally. This was true of City of Copenhagen 5s, and City of Rio de Janeiro 8s at 101½.

Again today there was considerable demand for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas issues. The adjustment 5s, on a when-issued basis were in demand and crossed 43 for the first time. The 4s and 5s, series A, also on a when-issued basis, advanced fractionally. Union Pacific 6s gained slightly. Likewise Pere Mrquette first 5s, the New York Central debenture 6s and 3½s Erie convertible 4s, series D and Reading 4s were notably strong. On the other hand, weakness was displayed in such bonds as the New Haven debenture 6s and Denver & Rio Grande 4s.

In the Industrial section the majority of the representative issues were very little changed. American Smelting and Refining 5s continued reactionary. The transactions and public utilities were steady.

Trans-Continental Oil.

Heavy buying of Transcontinental Oil, starting at the opening and carrying the stock up over a point, was later explained by an authoritative statement that the long-pending negotiations between the company and Standard Oil of California, had been closed. Under the terms of the arrangement tSandard Oil of California will undertake the development of the larger part of the Transcontinental's oil acreage in Columbia and at the same time look out for the funding of that company's floating debt while providing new working capital.

Specialty Moves.

There were a number of interesting specialty moves, but not all of them up. The Central Leather issues were very weak. It took only a moderate amount of buying to push Midvale up above 30. Lackawanna Steel and Republic were both scarce when buying got into them again. Pittsburg Coal and Pittsburg & West Virginia were the favorites among the coal stocks.

WEATHER DOMINATING INFLUENCE IN WHEAT

Estimate of Condition of Winter Crop in Kansas Low—Pork Price Up.

The wheat market during the past week was influenced largely by estimate on the condition of the domestic winter crop.

At times the wehat market displayed activity on a somewhat larger scale, with an increase of trade from the outside reported indicated. Bullish sentiment was first stimpuated by reports of smallness of the rice crop in Japan and China with talk that this probably would cause buying of wheat for those countries. Reported falling off in the estimated exportable surplus of Australia was also given attention. It was only, however, when remarkable Kansas crop figures were published and later when a Chicago private statistician suggested that the United States winter crop taken as a whole would be reduced to 475,000,000 bushels as against 544,000,000 bushels last year that the more decided gains in price for the week were effected. On the other hand, rains in Texas and Kansas as well as in Southern Argentina tended more or less to ease the market again as the week drew to a close. Saturday's market reflected report of snow in Kansas.

Predictions that colder weather would probably bring about enlarged receipts of corn were influences on the value of corn and oats.

Pork's advance was credited to the reported small stock on hand. Lard and ribs, though, were but little changed.

St. Louis Grain Market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday there was but slow demand for red winter wheat and prices were unchanged to 2c lower. Some grain was carried over. A few mill orders for good grade wheat were reported, while a light local milling inquiry was noted. Hard wheat was 1c lower. The corn market was active and higher, with late prices 1c to 1½c higher. There was an increase in export business for shipment by way of the gulf. Several houses were said to have filled orders. The export business stimulated local buying. Cash oats were in good demand and prices were steady to ½c higher. Offerings were only moderate and buying by local people cleaned up the tables. Some shipping demand was reported, but such bidders found prices out of line for most part.

Sales were made at the following quotations:

Wheat—No. 2 red winter, $1.25; No. 3 red winter, $1.16@1.20; No. 4 red, $1.12; car garlicky at $1.05; sample grade, 90c to $1.20; No. 2 hard winter, $1.16@1.22; No. 3 dark hard, $1.21; No. 3 soft white, $1.20.

Crops Make Fair to Good Start.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The fall-sown cereal crops of the Northern Hemisphere are generally entering the winter in a fair to good condition, with the exception of some areas, where drouth has followed seeding and germination, according to reports today to the Department of Agriculture. Recent rains have benefited the new crops in Germany and Austria, and the condition is up to the average, although the long drouth may have reduced the acreage somewhat. Seeding has been greatly hindered by drouth in France, Hungary and Rumania. Moisture conditions have been favorable in Northern Africa.

The prospect for the wheat harvest in British India and Canada continued good, the reports show, and condition of the winter crop in the United States is favorable throughout the north central states, but there is damage in the lower plains region.

The crop news from Argentina continued favorable.

SNOW IN SOUTHWEST IS FACTOR IN WHEAT TRADE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—In a fairly lively session on the Chicago Board of Trade today, wheat registered net losses of from ⅝c to ¾c in December and May, and of from 2⅛c to 2½c in July, the latter breaking sharply just at the close. Corn finished ⅛c lower to ⅝c higher. Oats ⅜c lower to ⅛c higher, and provisions generally 2c to 7c lower.

Wheat started easy on reports of rain or snow in the largest winter wheat sections of Kansas and Oklahoma, but foreign advices as to the Argentine crop prospects and some hints that export inquiries were expected, led to buying by strong commission houses. The decline was not only checked, but the longs forced prices up above yesterday's close and then evened up, leaving the market without support in the final minutes. Outside trade continues light, but shows itself spasmodically on the breaks.

Corn averaged higher on a bullish interpretation of the War Finance Corporation statement and a revival of export demand. In addition, there was a cash sale of a quarter million bushels to go to store.

Oats generally followed corn, being aided in this course by a tip that there might be some export sales soon in this grain.

Eastern interests were credited with selling provisions, which eased off under this influence. Buying was scattered and trade on the whole was dull.

The opening was 3 to 6 points higher. LITTLE CHANGE SHOWN IN LIVESTOCK PRICES

Hogs Advance at Close of Week After Steady Market During Early Days.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. week	Year ago.
Cattle and Calves	26,096	18,789	22,113
Hogs	88,936	73,343	66,801
Sheep	11,675	5,755	10,991
Totals	126,707	97,887	99,905

Except for a lower average in some classes of butcher cattle, particularly heifers which are 50c or more down for the period, there was no great change in live stock values on the close of the St. Louis market from those of a week ago. Hogs, if anything, finished slightly higher, top Saturday $7.35. Beef steers, under fair receipts Monday and Tuesday ruled dull and lower those two days. A smaller run mid-week, however, influenced a stronger market and values ruled upward the last half of the week with the result that all of the early declines have been regained. The top for beef steers was $9 per 100 lbs. paid for a drove of yearlings. Heavy steers topped for this class at $8.25. The larger portion of the steer offering, however, cleared from $5 to $7. There were several dozen cars of westerns included in the run. Quality of the steer offerings, with few exception, was medium to common. The showing of butcher yearlings comprised the cheaper grades, as a rule, and demand was exceedingly narrow all week, causing the 50c or more depreciation in values. Sales extended largely from $2.60 to 6.50, with occasional droves of steers and heifers mixed up to 8.25 and with steers, as previously mentioned topping at $9. While the best butcher cows ruled steady to strong, clearing from $4 to $5, other grades and canners and cutters averaged steady to possibly 15c lower. Plain butchers sold down to $3.25, medium to fair went at $3.50 to 4.00. Canners were available at $2 to 2.75 and cutters $2.75 to 3. Buls held steady a greater part of the week, but eased off on the close. Beef types made $3.75 to 5.00 and bolognas $2.75 to 3.75. Receipts of stocker and feeder steers were light and trade, on this account was restricted. Those here met with active demand at strong to slightly higher prices. The bulk clearing from $4 to $5.50. The veal calf market held steady Monday and Tuesday, top $10, but broke $1 or more Wednesday. The top and bulk Monday, $9.

Hog Market Steady

Although receipts in the hog department were the largest since February, totaling approximately 90,000, the market remained on a practically steady basis throughout the week, until the closing session, when prices went 10c to 20c higher. Price fluctuation were extremely narrow, as at no time did the top fall below $7.00, or exceed $7.35 on good butchers. The latter price was the top today and for the week on 200-pound hogs. Pigs at the start sold up to $7.50 and during the remainder of the week until today at $7.25. Today $7.40 was paid for one lot of light pigs. At the close of last week, best butchers were bringing $7.10@7.15, lightweight shippers, $7.15 to $7.25, and pigs, $7.25@7.50. At this time butcher and light hogs are selling together at $7.25@7.35 and pigs from $7.25@7.40. Demand from all sources was enlarged to suit the increased run and markets were active each day and few hogs were carried over. Rough sows are selling at this time from $5.75@5.85 or, about a dime higher. Stags at $4.75 show no change.

Sheep Market Active

Receipts the past week at the sheep house were more than double the preceding week's run, totaling approximately 12,000, against 5755. Except for a 25 to 50 per cent advance on fat sheep and a decidedly more active market for all aged classes, the week's trade developed no important features. Lambs experienced a good demand and sold active and steady, with the top at $10. Several loads of fed Western lambs were received and these being somewhat better than any of the natives offered went at a slight premium, bringing $10, whereas no natives sold over $9.75. Bulk of the native lambs extended from $9.50@9.75., medium to good, $8.75@9.50, feeders, $8@8.75; yearlings, $8@8.50; culls, $6@7; fat handyweight sheep, $3.75@4; and heavier kinds, $3@3.50. Demand for fat sheep particularly handy weights improved greatly the last few days, affording a striking contrast with a week or two ago when they were hard to dispose of at any price.

Horse Demand Slow

Demand for horses was again narrow and the market again showed a lower average in some departments. Cheap southerners were particularly slow of movement and average values were the lowest in many years. Plain southerners sold around $15 per head, better bringing $25 to $35 and tops $50 to $70. The demand for Eastern types was not especially urgent and while further declines were often prevented, the market, nevertheless ruled slow. Chunks sold from $40 to $60, draft types $75 to $110 and up to $150 for best. The commission offering of horses embraced about 400 head, a moderate supply.

Receipts of mules were likewise moderate in number and demand rather indifferent. Though the larger and better mules held about steady, further weakness was noted in the market for virtually all grades of the smaller types. Local dealers proved poor purchasers and most of the offering had to go to outsiders.

COTTON FUTURES UP AT SESSION'S CLOSE

Buying on Insect Report and Covering by Shorts Factors in Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 7 to 18 points under further covering for over the week-end and scattered buying promoted by reports concerning the pink boll worm situation in the Southwest, more optimistic feeling over the results of the Washington conference and bullish comment on the week-end figures which had inspired some buying yesterday afternoon. The bulge met some realizing, however, and a little Southern selling under which prices soon eased, with January selling off from 17.25c to 17.10c, or about 2 points below last night's closing figures.

Week-end cables indicated no improvement in the Manchester market, but sales of print cloths in Fall River for the week were estimated at 120,000 pieces, which indicated a slight increase in business as compared with the previous week. Curtailment of production there was estimated at 70,000 pieces, or about in line with recent figures. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 150,000 bales, against 140,000 last year.

The market was firmer later on reports that non-cotton-producing zones would be established in all sections of Texas infected by the pink boll worm and further covering for over the week-end. January sold up to 17.43 and closed at 17.39, with the general market closing steady at a net advance of 22 to 27 points.

Cotton futures closed steady; December, 17.52c; January, 17.39c; March, 17.37c; May, 17.10c; July, 16.63c.

GOVERNMENT MAY RUN IDENTIFICATION BUREAU

300 Cities and Police Departments in Organization to Vote on Transfer.

Chief of Police O'Brien returned yesterday from Washington, where he attended a meeting of the Board of Governors of the National Bureau of Identification, called to consider a proposal from the Government to take over the bureau and operate it under Government supervision reaching out to every city in the United States. As more than 300 cities and police departments are represented in the bureau, in its present organization, the Board of Governors, while unanimously favoring the move, decided to take a vote of all the members.

The idea of taking over the bureau as a Government institution, increasing its scope and usefulness, originated with United States Attorney-General Daugherty and is fostered by William Burns, newly appointed head of the United States Department of Justice.

The Government laid before the board of Governors the necessity of a bureau of identification of national scope and said there was no need of operating two. It agreed to take over the bureau as composed at present, enlarge the working force and offices, expanding the bureau from its present cost of $10,000 a year to one which they estimated would cost between $125,000 and $150,000 to maintain. The Board of Governors were assured, Chief O'Brien says, that they could name the head of the bureau and at all times the service would be of the same character as now, only more efficient because of enlarged scope.

How Bureau Is Maintained.

The bureau is maintained now by payments from each of the police departments belonging. The St. Louis quota is $200 a year.

Photographs, finger-print and Bertillon records of criminals are kept at the bureau. They are sent in from all the cities belonging to the bureau. In the matter of identifying prisoners the police have found it of the greatest aid. One of the methods of operation is dscribed by O'Brien.

"Say for instance we arrest a man we are satisfied is a criminal but we have no local record to go on," he said. "We take his photograph and finger prints and measurements. We send these to the bureau in Washington. If he is wanted in any of the 300 odd cities belonging to the association, we will have the information back inside of 24 hours, because he will be classed in the bureau as a 'fugitive.'

"These records are of the utmost importance in the quick handling of crime and the board of governors of the association feel that in turning the bureau over to the Department of Justice we will increase our own efficiency and bring Police Departments all over the country in closer touch with the Government.

Vote to Be Taken.

"The small bureau operated by the Government at present is in Fort Leavenworth, in connection with the penitentiary there. That place, we understand, will still be used, but as an adjunct to the headquarters in Washington if our members vote to turn the bureau over. I feel, and I believe all the governors who attended the special meeting feel, that the work of all Police Departments in the country will be greatly increased in efficiency if the plan as now evolved is worked out to completion. The board of governors, while agreed in their opinion favoring the move, felt that as some 300 odd cities contributed to the establishment and maintenance of the bureau, they each should be accorded a vote in the matter of disposing of the bureau. Therefore we decided to get the opinion of all, and ordered the vote taken."

Blanche Bates Stars With Henry Miller in "Famous Mrs. Fair"

Tragi-Comedy of Domestic Life at American Tomorrow Night—"Midnight Rounders," Sumptuous Revue, Tonight at Shubert-Jefferson.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IT chances that the sacristan to whose auspices this department is at present entrusted witnessed in New York last September both the plays which will be seen at the principal theaters this week—"The Famous Mrs. Fair," with Blanche Bates and Henry Miller as co-stars, which opens tomorrow night at the American; and "The Midnight Rounders," with which the Shubert-Jefferson tonight will celebrate its deliverance from a week of vaudeville.

Concerning the former he wrote at the moment: "Blanche Bates and Henry Miller, at the latter's theater in West Forty-third street, struggling valiantly to sweep back the tide of feminism with a melodramatic broom called 'The Famous Mrs. Fair.' While the celebrated Mrs. Fair is gallivanting on a lecture tour, Mr. Fair finds consolation with a widow, and Miss Fair, a daughter, elopes with a scoundrel. Moral: Woman's place is the home."

The chronicler rhapsodized as follows concerning "The Midnight Rounders," after paying a tribute to the Ziegfeld "Follies" of 1920; "Ziegfeld defeated on his own ground, however, by the 'Midnight Rounders' revue on the Century Roof. Such sustained good taste, such unflagging sumptuousness, such universal beauty as to create a glamor and enchantment unprecedented among Shubert productions. Electricity in thrill after thrill; New York's tingling ozone breathing from the stage."

Casualties in the Casts.

AS BOTH these opinions were based on what Kant, had he been doomed to be a drama critic, would vivaciously have termed "the thing in itself," it is presumed that in the main they will stand. Some amendment, however, may be due to changes in cast. The American, for instance, favors us with a list of a dozen names, including those of Miss Bates and Mr. Miller. Outside the stars, only one surviving name can be spied in the cast of 13 which comprised the New York company. It is that of Betty Hall, who plays Nora, a maid.

Conspicuous by its absence is the name of Margolo Gillmore, who, in the original company, had the role of Sylvia Fair, daughter of the tormented family. According to many observers, Miss Gillmore was by way of seizing upon stellar honors in a troupe headed by two stars. At any rate, her performance in this comedy made her a star on her own account. She is now playing the heroine in Eugene O'Neill's "The Straw."

The mortality is quite as cruel in the case of "The Midnight Rounders." The Shubert-Jefferson proclaims that "apostle of pep," Eddie Cantor, as star of the show—presumably in the place of the squeaky Lew Hearn; and supplies seven other names as helping to constitute the cast. Two only of these are survivors—Muriel de Forrest, a dancer; and John Byam, who figured on the Century Roof program as the "Second Rounder." Vanished, apparently, are Rosie Quinn, Madelon la Varre, Ted Lorraine, Tot Qualters and many others.

What Made Mrs. Fair Famous.

AS ONE recalls it, Mrs. Fair became famous because of distinguished service in France during the war; on her return to her home on Long Island, she is invited by an enterprising agent to ascend the lecture platform. Despite her husband's ukase to the contrary, she accepts; whereupon dire results ensue. Mrs. Fair's long absences from home set her spouse to philandering, and enable their young daughter to become entangled with a rather gay set. Only through the joint effort of husband and wife is the girl saved from grave danger, and harmony re-established in the house of Fair.

Miss Bates and Mr. Miller do some exceptionally artistic acting. The author is James Forbes, and his play ran 343 performances in New York. In support of the stars will appear Marjorie Williams, Marie Louise Walker, Bert Leigh, Lynn Starling, Edna Archer Crawford, Florence Carpenter, Betty Hall, Norma Havey, Kathryn Meredith and Elmer Brown.

"The Midnight Rounders" is in two acts of 23 scenes. It had 120 performances at the Century Promenade. The titles of some of the scenes are "Garden of Eden," "The Evolution of a Girl," "Just Clothes," "Conscience," a dramatic pantomime; "The Lamp of Love," "Black and White Ballet" and "Oriental Tone." In the cast are Alice Ridnor, the Penn Four, Georgie Hale, John Byam, Burns and Foran and Colin Campbell.

Next Week—Mrs. Fiske.

MRS. FISKE, in "Wake Up, Jonathan," will appear at the American next week, beginning Monday evening. The play tells what happened when Jonathan Blake, captain of finance, paused in the amassing of millions long enough to attempt to conduct his family in a practical, business-like way.

"Ladies Night," a comedy concerning a bashful young man who blunders into a Turkish bath on an evening reserved for the fair sex, comes to the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night. In the cast are Allyn King, Walter Jones, Evelyn Gosnell and Edward Douglas, among others.

A newcomer at the Orpheum Theater, and the headliner of the week's program, is diminutive Daphne Pollard, who amused London last season with her comic stage portraits of cockney life. She is described as dressing in the funniest costumes, clowning in the most gawky way, and singing in a ridiculously cracked voice.

On the same bill are Florrie Millership and Al Gerard, in "Klick Klick," a musical comedy; William L. Gibson and Regina Connelli, in a new sketch, "The Honeymoon," by Aaron Hoffman; Jimmy Lucas and Francene, in a travesty, "Vampires and Fools;" William Sully and Genevieve Houghton, in "Calf Love;" Harry and Harriette Seeback, in "Jazz in the Gym;" and an animal act called "Howard's Spectacles."

Features at other playhouses are announced thus: Columbia, Mlle. Irene's circus, an animal act; Grand, "Tom Brown's Musical Revue," by the leader of the Six Brown Brothers, saxophone virtuosos; Rialto, Herbert Williams and Hilda Wolfus in "From Soup to Nuts;" Kings, a song and dance revue; Empress, Miss Mildred Pekins, a singer, and Gayety, "Jack Singer's Show," with Harry Lander.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

THEODORE KOSLOFF, famous Russian dancer, who has one of the leading roles in Agnes Ayres' first star picture for Paramount, "The Lane That Had No Turning," recently received a letter from his family in Petrograd. On it were two 1000-ruble stamps. Three years ago these stamps would have been worth $1000, but now they are worth only a few cents.

Two Sharp French Comedies in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

NONE other than that actor of diverse endeavors, Arnold Daly, and the strangely submerged but always competent Blanche Yurka were the guest stars Monday night at the Theater Guild's second production of the season. They had been enlisted for the first performance in this country of "The Wife With a Smile," which, however, is not, with a change of one word in the title, the frolicsome Pinero comedy which about 15 years ago greatly agitated Mrs. Grundy in London anw New York.

It is, rather, a very good English translation of "La Souriante Madame Beaudet," the play by Denys Amiel and Andre Obey, which, when it was first produced in Paris last spring, did much to stimulate interest in the independent theater movement in the French capital.

This play, which begins by holding a grisly interest for its audience, turns a quick somersault almost at its final word and ends amazingly in the vein of ironic comedy. It is called on the program a tragi-comedy, which is a wholly misleading description of it. The fact that it is a trick play and, in effect, a hoax on its audience, is not a bit in its disfavor. It is an ingenious and clever scrap of drama which first agitates, then irritates and finally, perhaps, even soothes you.

A study of extreme domestic incompatibility might describe its scheme well enough, though a sudden and unexpected way out is found for what seems to be a hopeless do-

Odd Facts About the Movies and Those Who Make Them

RUDYARD KIPLING has completed a scenario of his short story, "The Gate of a Hundred Sorrows."

Mildred Davis, a pretty blonde, is Harold Lloyd's leading lady now.

May Collins has been nicknamed "Elbows." She acquired her nickname while appearing on the stage with Grace George in "She Would and She Did," from the fact that the papers in their notices of the play ignored her acting, but raved about the dimples in her elbows.

Wallace Reid has driven almost every kind of vehicle in his pictures. In "The Love Special" he guided a locomotive, and in another picture drove a fast racing car at a speed of a hundred miles per hour.

Pauline Frederick's pet hobby is bird culture. In her beautiful Beverly Hills home she has one of the finest private aviaries in the United States.

Olive Francis is Gloria Hope's real name. She has still another name, Mrs. Lloyd Hughes.

Q. What film star was hurt in a fight called for by the scenario?

A ring contest was part of Bert Lytell's new picture, "Keep Off the Grass." The court was staged, and the star was bruised and out of action for several days. But Bert managed to inflict some punishment on his opponent, who is a professional fighter.

Vivian Martin appeared in a recent picture entitled, "Pardon My French." She is now playing in a Broadway comedy, "Just Married."

In filming the latest production of "The Little Minister" one difficulty was to find a Scotch loom in use about the year 1830 and then to get someone to run it. A loom was finally found in the home of an old Scotch family in Los Angeles, and a man was found who understood its mechanism and was able to keep it spinning on while the camera snapped Betty Compson, the star of the picture.

"The Last Payment" and "The Red Peacock," with Poli Negri as the star, will be released this winter. In "The Last Payment" Miss Negri has a modern dramatic role that is in contrast to the spectacular ones in which she has appeared.

Gladys Hulette has the leading feminine role in "Tol'able David."

"The Three Musketeers" has 894 scenes.

Only Two New Films Are on the Programs of the Current Week

"The Sheik" and "Queen of Sheba" Hold Over; Victor Herbert Is Guest-Conductor at New Grand Central.

ON LOCAL SCREENS

New Grand Central—Katherine MacDonald in "Her Social Value."

West End Lyric—Hobart Bosworth in "The Cup of Life."

Missouri—Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres in "The Sheik."

Liberty—Betty Blythe in "The Queen of Sheba."

VICTOR HERBERT, celebrated composer, is at the New Grand Central this week as a guest-conductor, directing an augmented orchestra in a concert program largely made up of his own compositions.

Herbert is the composer of 25 operettas and three grand operas. His lighter works have made him world famous. His most famous pieces are "The Fortune Teller," "Naughty Marietta," "Babes in Toyland," "The Red Mill," "Mlle. Modiste," "Sweethearts," "Princess Pat" and "Eileen." In each of these successes Herbert has several famous melodies, the best known of which are "Kiss Me Again," "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," "Gypsy Love Song," "For Every Lover," "I Want What I Want When I Want It" and "The Streets of Old New York."

Katherine MacDonald in "Her Social Value," supported by Roy Stewart, is the picture feature. It is a story of classes in which a young business man refuses to marry a rich girl because he loves a shopgirl. The rich girl's family attempts to ruin him. The shopgirl, now his wife, is made to feel that she is responsible for his apparent failure in life. He becomes irritable and frequent disagreements bring on separation. Later they find happiness in the West, where a fresh start is made.

A Thomas H. Ince special production, "The Cup of Life," with Hobart Bosworth heading the all-star cast, is the attraction at the West End Lyric Theater the first half of the week. Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall and Niles Welch are in the cast.

Bosworth is seen in his customary Jack London type of role, except that "The Cup of Life" presents him as a heroic adventurer rather than as the hero of personal physical encounters. Most of the story is laid in Singapore and much of the action is centered in the disappearance of a valuable pearl.

The Missouri Theater will run "The Sheik" another week. In announcing this determination the management of the theater, through its press representative, said: "As has been pointed out this is hardly above a mediocre picture, but the past week has demonstrated so convincingly the power of advertising that the manager of the Missouri will attempt to stretch the past week's enormous business over another period of seven days." Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres are the stars. "The Queen of Sheba," William Fox's big production, starring the beautiful Betty Blythe, goes into its second week at the Liberty.

G. Raymond Nye, Betty Blythe and Fritz Lieber, in "The Queen of Sheba—Liberty.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

scenes in "Moran of the Lady Letty," in which Dorothy Dalton is featured with Rudolph Valentino as leading man. All the sea scenes for the picture were made in San Francisco.

The huge prize fight arena of the American Legion in Hollywood, where weekly boxing cards are held, was the scene for the championship prize fight in Wallace Reid's latest Paramount picture, "The Champion."

The little town of Panamint has sprung into being on the Lasky ranch at Hollywood where Joseph Hanabery has taken his company making Jack Holt's newest Paramount picture, "While Satan Sleeps." A typical street of a Western mining camp type has been erected and some 250 types employed to people the thoroughfare.

One of the biggest sets ever made at the Paramount London studio was for the concluding scenes of the new John S. Robertson production, "Love's Boomerang." The set showed a big hall of the Tudor period with a stone-flagged floor covering approximately 3000 square feet of space. The chief features of the hall are the groin roof, 38 feet high, and a massive stone-carved fireplace. The new set is a reproduction of the big hall of Beaulieu Abbey, Lord Montague's beautiful country residence, of which some striking exteriors were obtained.

One of those quaint settings that always elicit a chorus of "oh's" and "ah's" from the spectators—especially those past middle age—will be seen in Jack Holt's second Paramount star picture, "While Satan Sleeps." A rectory has been furnished, or decorated, by the parishioners from their accumulated lares and penates. Shells, a stuffed owl, religious books, pictures, embroidered mottos, oil lamps, a card receptacle in the shape of two outspread hands, old-fashioned furniture and rag rugs, make up a scene that is distinctly appropriate.

It is just one visit to the dressmaker's after another for Gloria Swanson these days in preparation for her coming picture, "Beyond the Rocks," by Elinor Glyn, author of "The Great Moment," one of Miss Swanson's recent successes.

Eight new Paramount pictures will be released during December. They are: Penrhyn Stanlaws' picturization of Sir James M. Barrie's "The Little Minister," starring Betty Compson; William S. Hart in "White Oak;" "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," a Cosmopolitan production with Sam Hardy and Norman Kerry in the leading roles; "Just Around the Corner," another Cosmopolitan production, including Sigrid Holmquist in the cast; Sam Wood's tri-stellar production, "Don't Tell Everything," with Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter; Sam Wood's production of "Under the Lash," starring Gloria Swanson; "Exit the Vamp," with Ethel Clayton, and Pola Negri in "The Last Payment."

Despite that his favorite reading—for relaxation—consists of old English hunting stories, such as "Nimrod's Sporting Tours," Jack Holt doesn't care for hunting or fishing. But he has an innate love for horses and outdoor life, while in games, polo strikes his fancy most of all.

"THAIS AND TALMAAE" IS NEW OPERA BY SCOTCH COMPOSER

Colin McLeod Campbell's One-Act Work, Based on Novel by France, Produced in London.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—An opera by a Scotch composer was a novelty produced here a few evenings ago by the Royal Carl Rosa Company. It is a one-act work, entitled "Thais and Talmaae," by Colin McLeod Campbell, and it was used as a curtain-raiser for "La Tosca." Like Massanet's full-length opera, it is based on the well-known novel of Anatole France.

In the libretto of C. Harold Bourne, we see the sinner—Thais—become saint, and the saint—Talmaae—transformed by her beauty into a would-be sinner. He seeks to turn her from the faith to which his own piety and pleading has converted her; but all his passionate eloquence fails to move her, and, rather than submit to his entreaties, she kills him, afterwards taking her own life.

That, in brief, is what happens within the opera's half hour of performance. The work resolved itself with a more or less sustained duet, with a monologue at the end for the heroine. The music is described as simple and straight to the point, moving along with a natural impetus that makes for dramatic effect. There is complaint that the orchestral colors were laid on "too thick and slab."

The little opera was received with warm enthusiasm, and there were three hearty "calls" for the composer. He was greatly indebted to Miss Beatrice Miranda and William Boland for the fervor and skill with which they sang the music.

"PYGMALION" TO BE REPEATED

Three More Performances at Guild Beginning Tomorrow.

"Pygmalion," a five-act comedy, will be repeated by the St. Louis Artists' Guild Players for three nights, beginning tomorrow at 8:15 at the Little Theater of the Guild, 810 North Union boulevard. The play was given Nov. 22 to 25, and is repeated because of requests. In order to accommodate students of schools and clubs the balcony seats for the three performances will be sold at 50 cents.

The leading roles of Liza, the Cockney flower girl, whom Henry Higgins, professor of phonetics and modern Pygmalion, trains to pose as a grand lady, thereby winning a wager, will be taken again by Miss Gertrude Walther, and that of the professor by Frank Somerville. The balance of the cast will also be the same as that of the previous performances.

SHAKSPEARE IS NOW HIMSELF A PLAY HERO

Fights With "Kit" Marlowe Over Mary Fitton in Comedy by Miss Clemence Dane.

LONDON, Dec. 3.

A MIGHTY pretty entertainment, making free with famous names, is Miss Clemence Dane's new play in blank verse, "Will Shakspeare," which has been put on at the Shaftesbury Theater. Shakspeare and Marlowe are both lovers of Mary Fitton. Anne Hathaway is so comely and loving that Shakspeare's desertion of her looks blacker than ever. Queen Elizabeth, on her throne, is mainly concerned with the future of the English drama, and locks Shakspeare up with pen and ink that he may set about providing for it on the spot.

You see Shakspeare and Anne at Stratford. She will talk while he is writing, and, as he has been only a few months married, he has not yet learned to say "Yes, my dear," and go on with his work all the same. So he runs away to London with Manager Henslowe and his troop of strolling players. Poor Anne is left heartbroken, and you will see her no more, except in transparencies.

Ten years later, and Shakspeare has grown his celebrated beard. He flirts with Mary Fitton in the royal palace, after the Queen has discussed current theatrical affairs with Manager Henslowe. Mary Fitton looks a delicious minx in ruff and farthingale. The Queen snubs her, and she in turn snubs Shakspeare. There is but one step from the court to the theater, and you are behind the scenes at the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet."

An accident happens to the boy who plays Juliet, and his place is taken at a moment's notice by Mary Fitton. The audience apparently does not notice that she is a woman, but, the play over, she proceeds to prove it to Shakspeare—so effectively that he forgets all about the sad news of young Hamnet's illness that has just come from Stratford. And only a minute or two before her passionate embrace with Shakspeare the baggage has been flirting with Marlowe!

Marlowe Slain With Own Dagger.

But a few days pass and Marlowe has superseded Shakspeare in Mary's affections. She follows Kit, in boy's clothes, to the tavern at Deptford. The guilty pair are discovered by Shakspeare. There is a rough and tumble, and Marlowe gets killed by his own dagger. Mary and Shakspeare escape, and the tavern roysterers sing and dance round the corpse, too drunk to know that it is a corpse. One of them hugs the stiff body—a thrillingly macabre effect.

At the Royal palace the Queen, whose window overlooks the street (as, she says, those who would rule their children must live in the nursery), hears of Marlowe's death from ballad singers. She suspects that baggage Mary, and banishes her from the court. Exit Mary, nose in air, and vituperating Shakspeare, who would follow her, but is held back by scarlet Beefeaters at the Queen's orders.

Then, with Shakspeare on his knees, she delivers a long address, with passing allusions to Mary, Queen of Scots, and the welfare of England. Shakspeare's plays, she tells him, are essential to the welfare. So he had better sit down and write one, now. He does, but once more poor Anne (this time behind a transparency) interrupts him at his work. At last he is left writing.

Dunsany's New Play.

FOUR one-act plays by Lord Dunsany were produced at the Everyman Theater, Hampstead, the other night. The most entertaining, and by far the most unexpected, was entitled "Cheeso."

It was the first production of this play, and the occasion was certainly interesting, because "Cheeso" was hardly the kind of morsel one would have looked for from its author. It is almost a phantasy—like so much of Lord Dunsany's work, but it is a very practical phantasy. It merely treats a possible situation in an improbable way, and for that reason it differs profoundly from the remainder of the program. The other three pieces are of the type that we all know and expect. In them the author is content to take an improbable situation and to treat it in a provokingly probable way.

"Cheeso" is primarily the tale of a patent food and secondarily the tale of a struggle between the crudely practical and the crudely ideal. "Cheeso" is the invention of a gentleman with the euphonious name of Sladder. He has already invented a patent form of bread called "Virilo," which has brought him much money and the public many internal pains.

It is in this way that the crudely practical gets brought into touch with the ideal. The curate of the village, of which he becomes "squire," comes to upbraid him for the physical harm his patent bread is doing the villagers. He makes it clear that he can look after their soults, but not their stomachs.

Can't Believe in Hell.

THIS curate, who is very aptly named Mr. Hippanthigh, is an earnest young man who wages relentless war with his Bishop on the subject of "eternal punishment." He cannot believe in such a thing, and that is why he is still a curate. It is this conscience that prompts his attack on the patent bread. Its maker, who has just devised "Cheeso" as a palatable companion to "Virilo," is incensed with this militant Christianity, and even more annoyed when he discovers that the conscientious curate is in love with his daughter.

That gives him an opportunity to fight the battle of commerce against idealism. He points out that he is at the top of his profession, and that he expects his potential son-in-law to be the same. He must not quarrel with the Bishop. He must displace him, and to do that he must first humor him. "If your Bishop believes in hell," he says, "push hell for all you are worth."

The curate cannot bring himself to change his views on eternal punishment and all seems over until he happens to discover the imminence of "Cheeso." That convinces him of the need of an eternal punishment for the maker of such unhealthy trash, and with that idea he readily avows his belief in the possibility of everlasting torments.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling nearly a half-million cases of eczema and devoting 13 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what all you have used nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. If you write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

TWO SHARP FRENCH COMEDIES ON THE NEW YORK STAGE

mestic impasse. In a provincial city in France Mme. Beaudet is living a dog's life with her boorish, peevish, bumptious and supremely egotistical husband, a woolen merchant.

At Least He Pays the Bills.

He has bullied and humiliated her beyond endurance. At no point does his vulgar nature accord with hers. His one virtue, it appears, is that he pays the bills of the household. As he storms and browbeats it is his habit to play peevishly with an unloaded pistol which he keeps in the drawer of his desk, pointing it at his own head and snapping the trigger in the violence of his absurd tantrums.

The wife, driven beyond endurance, is seized with an idea. She puts cartridges into the pistol and waits for the next family fracas. It comes. This time Beaudet points the pistol, not at himself, but at her. The tenseness of this tragic moment is skillfully contrived. But the bullet only shatters a mirror close beside her.

Beaudet, even in his consternation, remains the bumptious egotist. He instantly jumps at the conclusion that his wife, who has had murder within her heart, had intended the bullet for her own destruction. Out of the narrow escape, comes what promises to be a reconciliation, at least an understanding.

An Amiable Old Dupe.

As a contrast to "The Wife With a Smile," and as a tour de force for Mr. Daly, Georges Courtelme's farce "Boubouroche" was given in its first English translation. Here is a gem of characteristically French humor which was often seen in its native vernacular when Jacques Copeau was the entrepreneur at the Garrick during the war.

It is a derisive study of a plump and genial old dupe, a fellow so easy to deceive that even when he discovers his lady's lover comfortably ensconced in her wardrobe, the shock interrupts only briefly his comfortable faith in her. Edgar Stehli as a tattling neighbor and Oliver May as the guilty but magnificently indignant lady, rather make off with the honors of the occasion.

And yet Mr. Daly, after choking up the piece at its first performance with his monotonous, faltering and utterly unconvincing playing as Boubouroche, might turn around and tweak the whole play into the groove along which its faraway author meant it to move.

There should be a little burst of applause here for the playing of Jeanne Wainright and a little louder burst for the capital bit by Martha Bryan Allen in the first of the two pieces. And something in the line of a loud cheer might well be expended on the Guild and all its workers for their capacity to stage two French scenes without a single suggestion of Utica, N. Y., without a single reminder of the Bronx.

Business Man a Playwright.

Beginning with a laborious first act, the comedy called "Her Salary Man," presented Monday night at the Cort, develops into a fair-to-middling farcical comedy in its second and third acts. Perhaps its content should be rated on the average as a bit under fair to middling, but there are two or three stretches that are broadly amusing. The author is one Forrest Rutherford, said to be a Denver business man, who has now come out of the West with his first play. It is inexpert and crude, most of it, but it will furnish a modicum of laughs for all but the most captious.

Mr. Rutherford has had the greatest of his difficulties in whipping rather an unwieldly idea into the promise of a play. He began, apparently, with the theory that it might be amusing if someone rented a husband instead of marrying him, and it is along these lines that he has proceeded. But, since that it would not be an arrangement calculated to win sympathy for his leading couple, he has been at great pains to provoke his heroine into this step the while she remains pure in heart, and at even greater pains to keep his hero immaculate.

This dual necessity accounts for the strain and dullness of the first act. Thereafter, by bringing the husband unexpectedly back into the circle of his wife's acquaintance (unexpected for all except the audience, that is to say), and by concocting an amusing bedroom scene for his third act, he has managed to introduce moments of merriment. It is, in the main, a comedy for those who find the comic supplement the most absorbing part of the Sunday paper.

The heroine is the pretty and generally capable Ruth Shepley, and the hero is A. H. Van Buren, best known as a veteran of the stock companies, and not without a few traces thereof.

"Kiki," with Lenore Ulric in the title role, was presented Tuesday night at the Belasco Theater. It is a French comedy by Andre Picard. In the cast are Sam Hardy, Max Figman, Thomas Findlay and Sidney Toler.

Shakspeare Paying Proposition.

THE engagement of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in Shakspearean repertory, at the Century Theater, was to have concluded last Saturday night, with a record of four weeks. But so great was public interest in these eminent stars and their classic plays that the engagement was extended two weeks more, ending with the close of the present week. One matinee is said to have brought $5079 into the box office.

Two Avery Hopwood plays, "The Bat" and "The Gold Diggers," are to be produced in both London and Paris this season, according to present plans. Also, two of George M. Cohan's plays, "The Tavern" and "The O'Brien Girl," are to make their London bow early in January. In recognition of Pauline Lord's stellar work in "Anna Christie," Eugene

"I felt it my duty to write you a letter of thanks for your wonderful Peterson's Ointment. I had a running sore on my left leg for one year. I began to use Peterson's Ointment three weeks ago, and now it is healed."—A. C. Gilbrath, 703 Reed Street, Erie, Pa.

I'd rather get a letter like that, says Peterson of Buffalo, than have John D. Rockefeller give me a thousand dollars. It does me a lot of good to be able to be of use to my fellow man.

For years I have been selling through druggists a large box of PETERSON'S OINTMENT for 60 cents. The healing power in this ointment is marvelous. Eczema goes in a few days. Old sores heal up like magic; piles that other remedies do not seem to even relieve are speedily conquered.

WO SHARP FRENCH COMEDIES ON THE NEW YORK STAGE

Neill's play of the sea, her name was placed at the top of the electric sign Thursday evening at the Vanderbilt Theater.

Clare Kummer's new play, "The Mountain Man," opens Thursday night at Atlantic City, and is expected to reach New York, by way of Washington, on Dec. 12. The stage settings are by Robert Edmund Jones. . . . The Keith vaudeville circuit, with its Orpheum circuit affiliations and associated houses, announces that it can now give bookings for three consecutive years to an artist or an act without repeating in any one theater. . . . Baltimore made its first acquaintance with "Declassee" last week, with Ethel Barrymore again starring in Zoe Akins' play. One of the Baltimore newspapers refers several times to the St. Louis author as "Zoe Atkins."

A prominent Broadway manager recently returned from Paris, and was asked if he had visited the Louvre. "Yes," he replied, "I made it a point to go through that place pretty thoroughly. I must have spent nearly an hour there. But I guess I could have gone through it in half the time if the floor hadn't been so darned slippery." . . . Dorothy Shoemaker, who acts the only feminine role in "The Man's Name," had the rare experience of being engaged as a Broadway star without Broadway experience. She had appeared in vaudeville and stock, but never in New York.

It Was Once a Short Story.

IN connection with the same play, another newcomer was brought favorably to Broadway's notice—Marjorie Chase collaborator with Eugene Walter in writing "The Man's Name." Miss Chase played Shakspearean roles with the Coburn Players for two years. Then she tried New York, and in the long waits between jobs wrote short stories, none of which was published. Among them was one called "The Reckoning." An editor who returned it said it was too full of meat for a short story. So Miss Chase made a play of it. Rewritten by Walter, it is "The Man's Name."

Ben-Ami, it is related, has been down to the Bowery 11 times to watch fine points in the acting of Signor Grasso, the Italian star . . . Walker Whiteside's new vehicle, "The Moon God," is described in Atlantic City as "gay melodrama with a thrill." The scene is India, and there is a girl who is kidnaped through the use of forged telegrams, at the instance of an Englishman who thus hopes to win her consent to wed him. Whiteside plays an Indian prince who turns out to be something vastly different.

George Jean Nathan wrote once that Otis Skinner was the worst picker of plays among male stars, and Grace George the worst among the women. Recently Nathan's own play, "Heliogabolus," was published. Miss George is said to have wired promptly to the author: "If Otis Skinner has not obtained rights to your play may I have it?" . . . George White, who got $4 for his "Scandals" in New York, will charge $3 in Chicago next week. "The Circle," in New York, has reduced its top price from $3 to $2.50. Charlotte Greenwood's new play will be submitted to New York at what is known as a "$1.50 top." . . . "Two Blocks Away," recently seen in St. Louis, expired a week ago in Louisville and was sent to the storehouse, leaving Barney Bernard, for the time being, with his occupation gone. . . . "Bringing Up Father," which played in St. Louis last week at a "$1.50 top," is billed this week in Detroit at $1.

Other Revivals Promised.

THIS is a season of revivals. Among those promised for the near future are "Alias Jimmy Valentine," which was based on O. Henry's story, "A Retrieved Reformation," and "Salomy Jane," in which Eleanor Robson, now Mrs. August Belmont, found one of her most successful vehicles. Margolo Gillmore is to head the resurrected piece. "The Straw," in which she was starred, will be presented at special matinees during the run of "Alias Jimmy Valentine." . . . "Golden Days," the piece in which Helen Hayes appeared after the failure of "The Wren" will not endure long on Broadway. It starts on tour next week, opening a week from tomorrow at Buffalo.

Will Rogers has a new one, which he is getting off in the "Midnight Frolic," on the New Amsterdam Roof. "I was down in Washington the other day," drawls the humorous cowpuncher, "and I asked President Harding if he knew any jokes. 'Quite a number,' he told me, and in fact he said he had appointed most of them."

A new operetta by Otto Harbach and Rudolf Friml, authors of "Katinka," "The Firefly," and other successes, is entitled "The Blue Kitten." It is based on a French play, "Le Chasseur de chez Maxim's," which is now in its third year in Paris. Joseph Hawthorne and Lillian Lorraine will have the chief parts when the piece is tried out at Atlantic City, on Dec. 26. This will be Miss Lorraine's first appearance on the stage since her serious accident of several months ago.

The death of Ivan Caryll, on Wednesday, removed a composer who during many years had written the scores of the most successful musical comedies. His real name was Felix Tilkin, and he was a native of Belgium. His great fecundity was due in part to the thorough musical training he received at the Conservatory in Liege and in Paris.

Up to 1911 most of his works were first produced in London, and in America a year later. But after the production of "The Pink Lady" at the New Amsterdam in advance of its London hearing, Caryll spent much of his time and did most of his work in this country. Among his recent scores were those for "Chin Chin," "Jack o'Lantern," "Tip Top" and "The Slim Princess." At the time of his death he was working on songs for his latest play, "Little Miss Raffles."

New Plays by Dreiser and Miss Akins This Week

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

NEW plays by Zoe Akins and Theodore Dreiser are the most important of the week's announcements for the theaters. The list is as follows:

Monday.

Hudson—"The Varying Shore," by Zoe Akins; a serious play in three acts, a prologue and an epilogue. Elsie Ferguson is starred, and in her support will be James Crane, Rollo Peters, Charles Francis, Blythe Daly and Geraldine O'Brien.

McDougal Street—"The Hand of the Potter," by Theodore Dreiser. This is the Provincetown players' second production of the season.

Tuesday.

Republic—"The Fair Circassian," by Gladys Unger. "The Man's Name" is to be withdrawn to make room for this play, the cast for which includes Claude King and Margaret Mower.

Wednesday.

Playhouse—"Bought and Paid For," by George Broadhurst; a revival with Helen MacKellar and William Harrington in the leading parts.

Thursday.

Gaiety—"Alias Jimmy Valentine," another revival, with Margolo Gillmore, Emmett Corrigan and Otto Kruger in the cast.

Ingersoll Orange Grove Units

What They Mean to Persons of Moderate Means, and How You May Make a Thorough Investigation of the Proposition, Without Expense to Yourself.

What These Ingersoll Orange Grove Units Are

The Ingersoll Groves embrace fifteen thousand acres of natural citrus fruit soil, pleasantly situated in the rolling hills of Lake County, Florida. This beautiful tract of land will be gradually cleared, prepared and planted with selected, pedigreed orange trees. About two hundred and fifty acres of orange trees have already been planted, and will receive the best of care until trees come into bearing. Other units will be planted this Winter. Eventually the entire tract will be covered with orange trees, and among them, many comfortable homes.

Who These Ingersoll Orange Grove Units Appeal to

Ingersoll Groves are divided into ten-acre units. The trees in each unit will be scientifically cared for by approved methods. Ownership of one or more of these grove units appeals to persons who want to get back to the land—who are weary of shoveling coal snd snow, and wish to escape the rigors of Northern Winters—who do not want to give up their present occupations at once, but who are able to spare enough from their incomes to pay for a grove which, in a few years, will return a generous income.

Selected, Planted and Developed According to an Ideal of Mr. Charles H. Ingersoll

The Ingersoll Orange Grove Units are in every way desirable and in many ways different from any former development of citrus groves. They have been planned and developed to attain the ideals of Mr. Charles H. Ingersoll of watch fame, who is a man with a hobby. A hobby to have the best to be obtained in orange land, location, trees and care, and to let others enjoy ownership with him at a minimum of labor and cost. The Ingersoll ideal is to strive for better oranges, greater production per tree, standardizing the quality and pack of the fruit, more economical methods of distribution, and an aggressive and competent marketing organization. These ideals will foster the success of Ingersoll Orange Grove Units which will all be planted, developed and managed the Ingersoll Way.

ABOUT 200 GROUPS OF CAROL SINGERS ALREADY ENROLLED

Children's Aid Society Wants Others to Sing Christmas Eve to Raise Funds.

About 200 groups have already signed up for the Christmas eve carol festival of the Children's Aid Society, it was announced yesterday. Leaders are still needed in many parts of the city and anyone willing to form a group of from five to 10 children or adults to go out in their own neighborhoods is asked to notify the Children's Aid Society, Vanol Building, Olive street and Vandeventer avenue. Few rehearsals are necessary and the groups give about two hours on Christmas eve to singing before every house in which a candle shines from the window. After the singing, collections are made, the money going to the care of needy, deserted and sick children in charge of the Children's Aid Society.

The first carol singing of the season will be heard Tuesday, Dec. 13, at the annual luncheon and election of the Children's Aid, at the Statler Hotel, when college quartets will sing.

Among the carol singers will be 12 groups of children from the Harrison School, three from the Laclede and numbers from the Cupples, Cote Brilliante and Benton public schools and the Principia School. Singers will be furnished by the Junior Chamber of Commerce Glee Club, Chaminade Club, Euterpean Choral Club, Industrial Clubs of the Young Women's Christian Association, Girl's Club of Christ Church Cathedral, Girls' Friendly Society of both St. Peter's and St. Philip's Episcopal churches, St. Margaret Church choir, West Park Presbyterian Church, Ethical Society, Ascension Church, Pilgrim Congregational Church, First Congregational Church, Second Presbyterian Church and St. John's Episcopal Church.

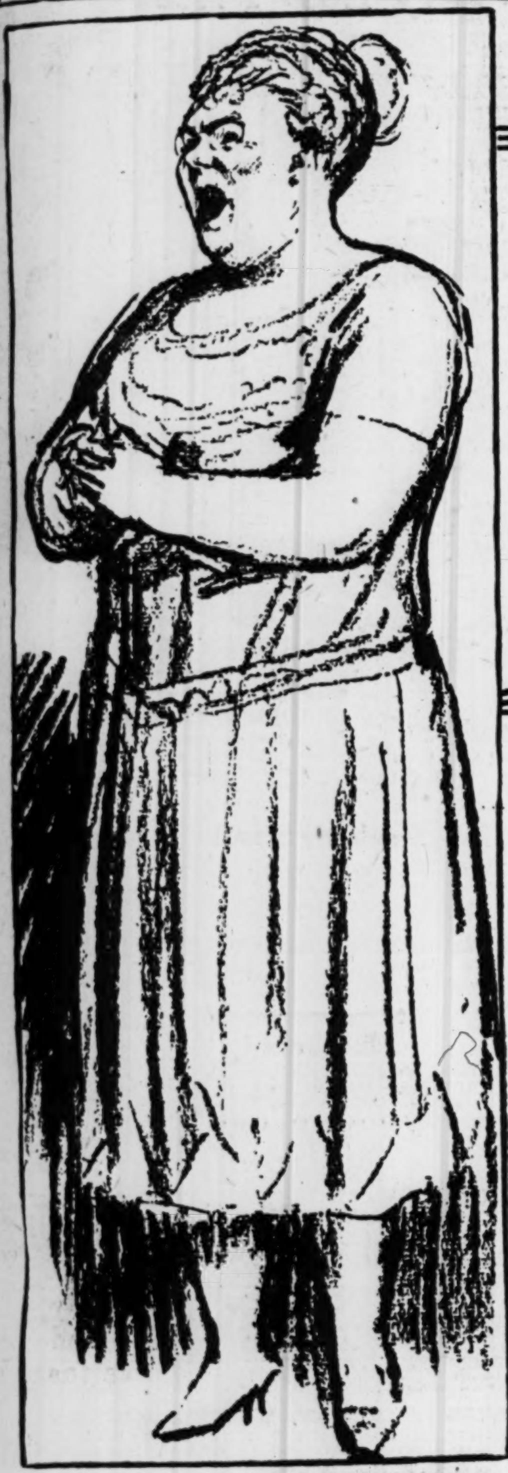
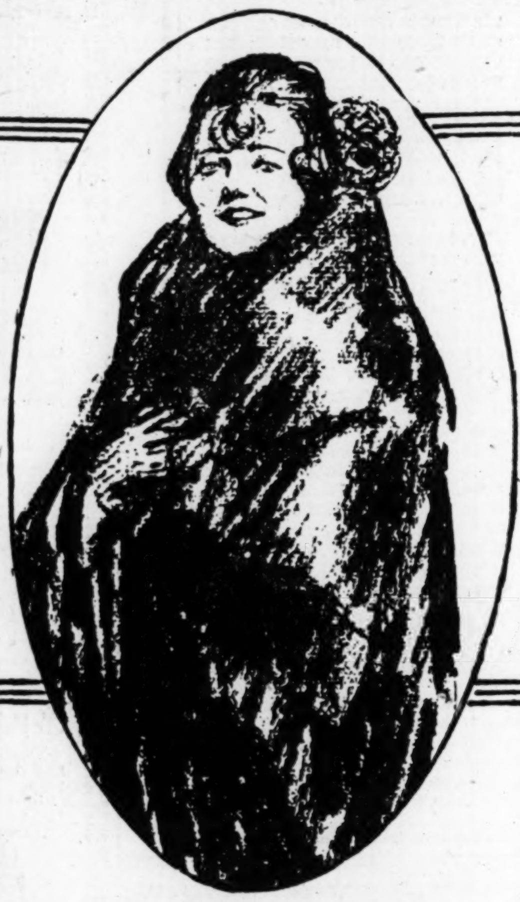
BED TIME

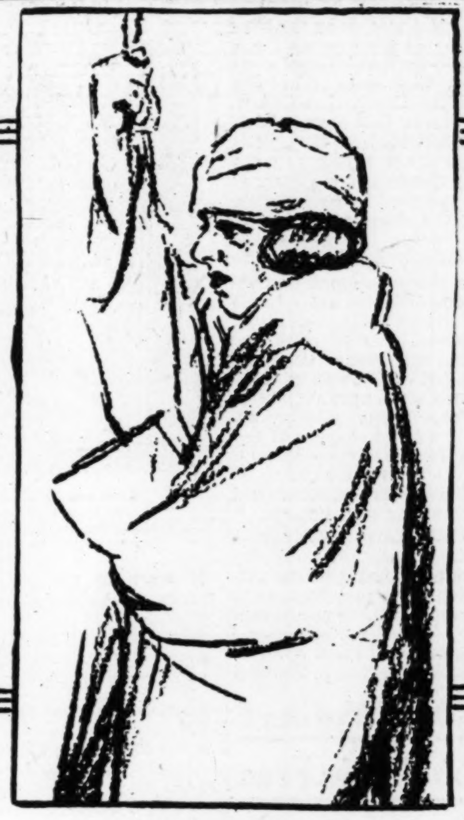
BY W. E. HILL



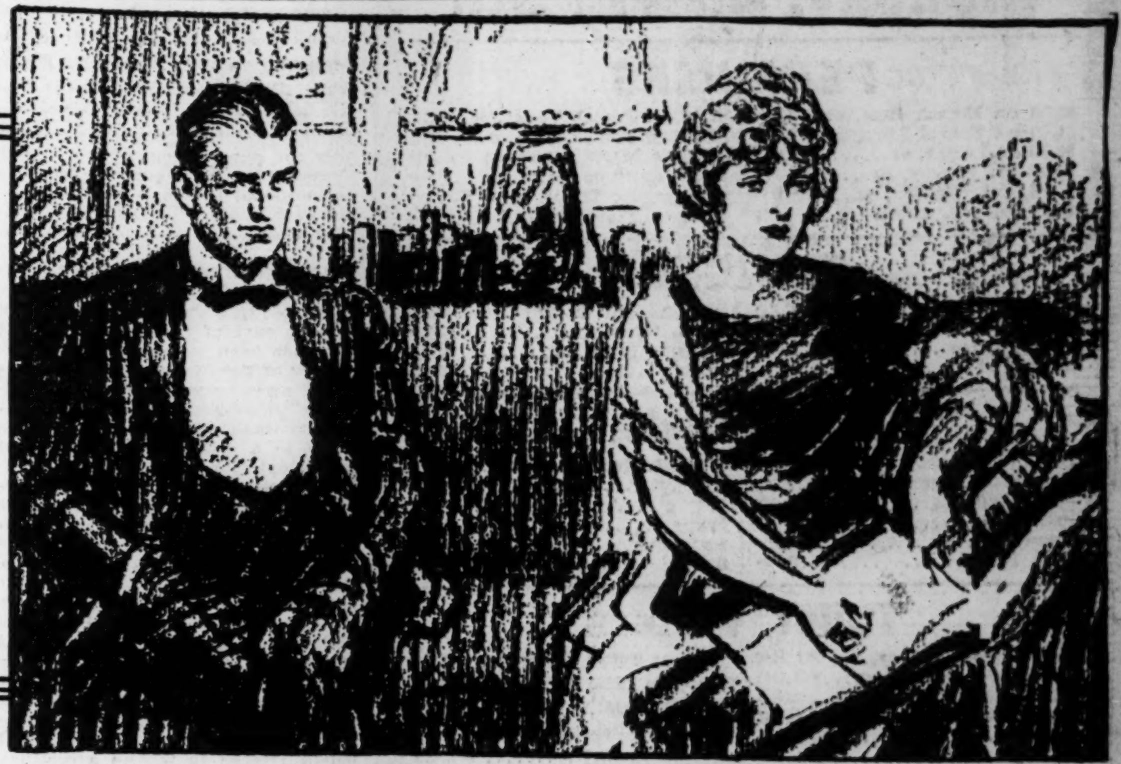
The lullaby Sweet voiced parlor soprano singing at eventide all about her bed is like a little boat. Wouldn't we like to see it, though!



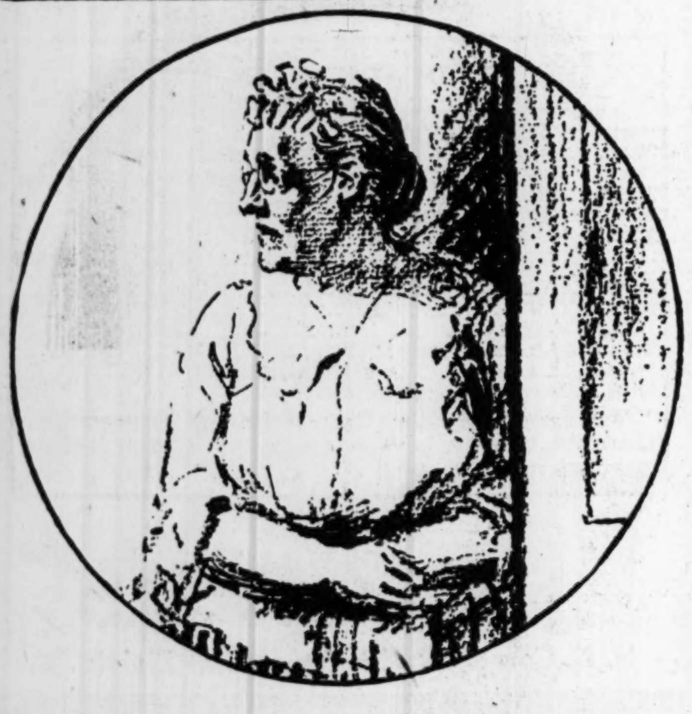
The bedtime hour of Josephine, the flapper, depends on what kind of time she's having. Anywhere from 11 p. m. to 6 a. m. and after.



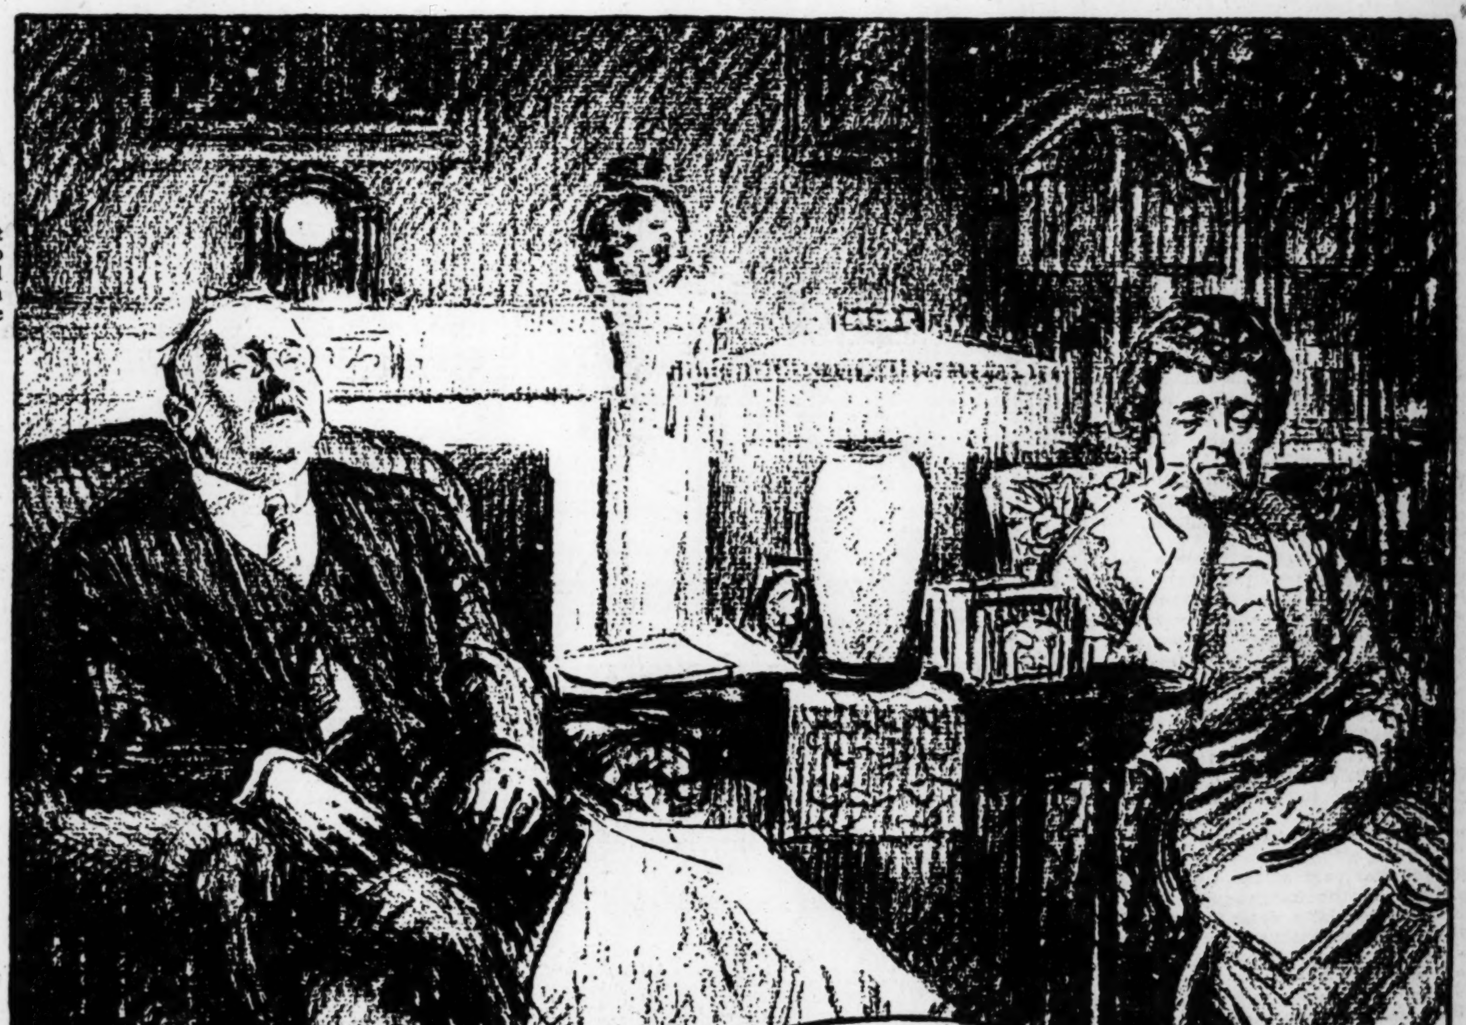
The tired stenog. "Believe me, I'm going to bed tonight as soon as I've had my supper!"



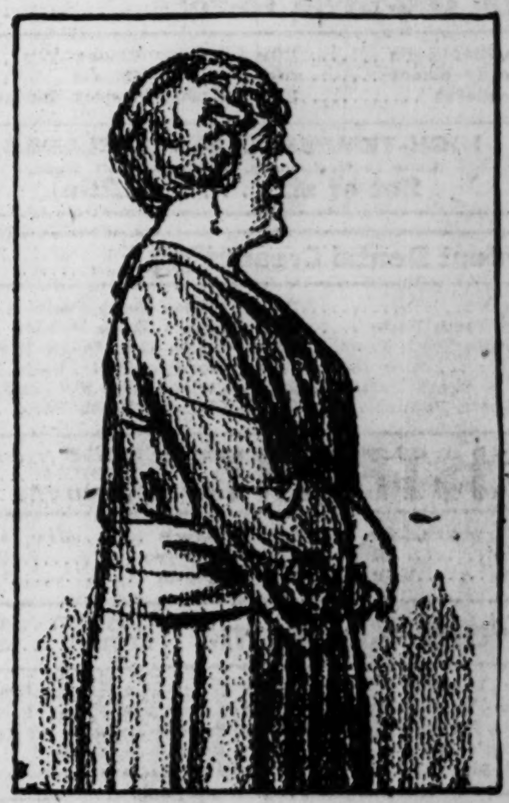
You've probably figured out from the look of things that Harry and Edith have quarreled, but you're on the wrong track. Harry and Edith are entertaining city people for over the week-end at their place in the country. Harry and Edith are awfully anxious to keep in touch with the town, and had planned late sessions at auction, to say nothing of all they would be able to hear about the new plays and what everybody was doing. But the country air and a good dinner have finished the guests for the evening. Though it's not yet 9 o'clock they have retired for the night, leaving poor Harry and Edith to spend the evening alone before the log fire



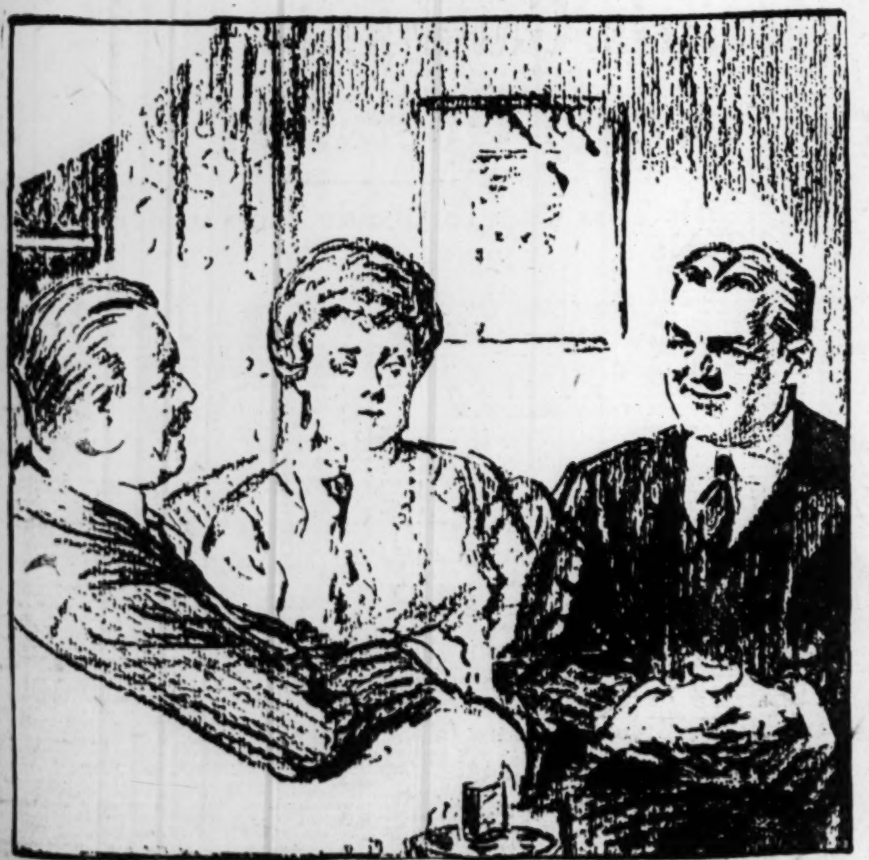
"Joe, I can't remember whether I locked the dining-room windows or not. I think you'd better go down and make sure"



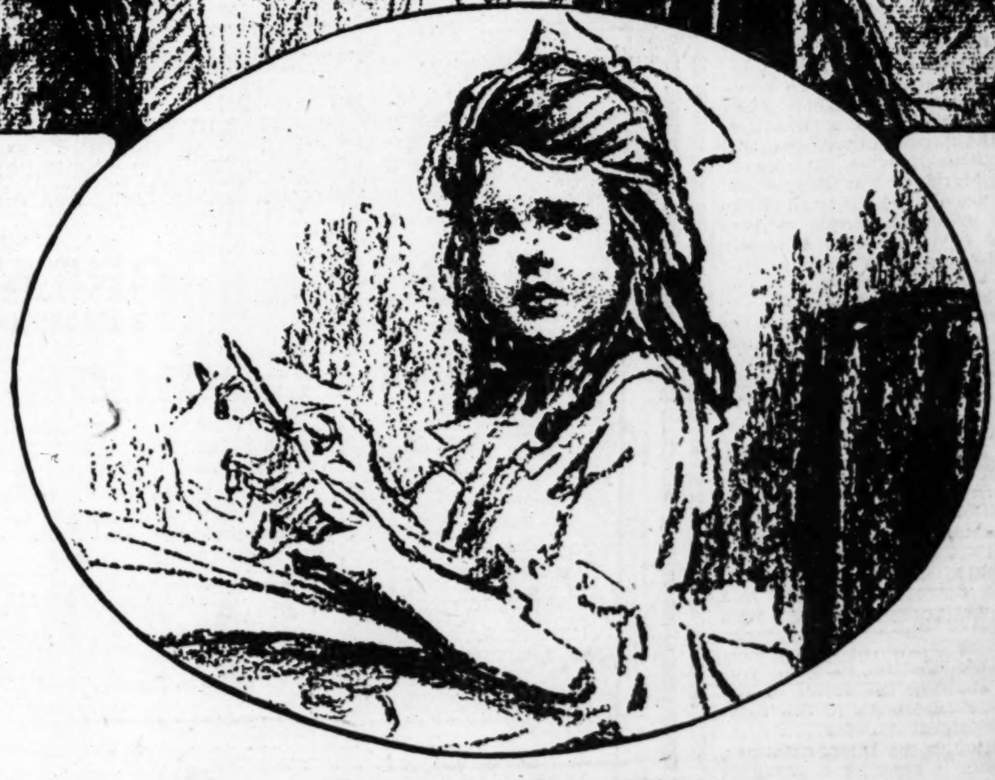
The sandman has been too much for Poppa and the little woman. It happens every evening around 9 or 9:30. By and by, when the little woman's head falls over a bit further than usual, she will come to with a start and say "Why, Poppa, you've been asleep in your chair! Come; you ought to be in your bed by now!"



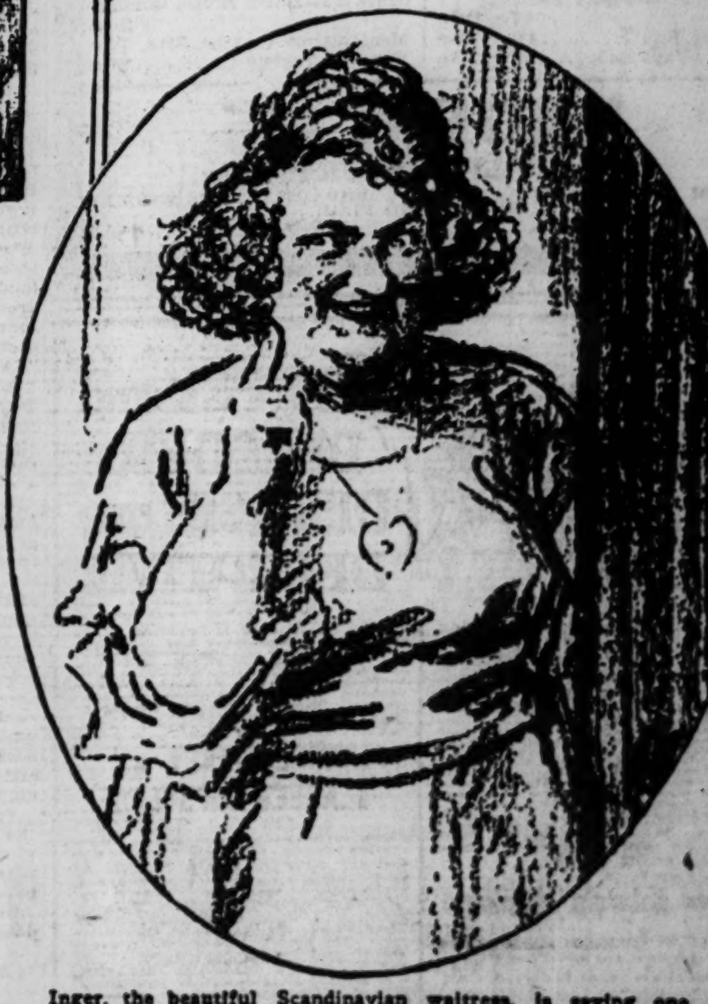
Hospitable lady whose eyes are all but glued together with fatigue, murmuring something in the ear of a departing caller about not going so soon—it being still early. Besides, she and her husband never go to bed till the small hours. Not done very convincingly, however.



Very sleepy wife listening to a late caller discussing old times with friend husband. "Yes, sir," says L. C., "the last time I saw Ed Weldon was out in Cleveland when he was traveling with a tinplate concern," etc., etc. It seems as though he never would go. The very sleepy wife thinking how nice it would be if she could suddenly be transported through the ceiling and dropped on her bed.



The usual nightly argument. "Why, Aunt Ade, they always let me stay up till half past eight and sometimes longer! Please just fifteen minutes more!"



Inger, the beautiful Scandinavian waitress, is saying one last goodby to the plumber's assistant, the latter having chivalrously brought her home from a movie. Inger is making him promise to go straight home and not loiter on the way. Inger's mistress is waiting at the head of the stairs to upbraid Inger for staying out way past her bedtime. But Inger won't mind.

KIDNEY and BLADDER DISEASES are DECEPTIVE.

You may go to work in the morning, perfectly healthy. The world looks good to you. You plan a good time with your family when you return. They are waiting eagerly for you. The children are in the window, looking out. You never felt happier in your life. . . . But, along in the afternoon you feel a sharp, shooting pain in the small of the back. You double over, you bend almost to the ground. You try to straighten up. It feels as if you were stabbed with a knife. You grit your teeth, you force yourself to finish the day's work. You go home, cross, nervous, exhausted. Something is wrong. What is the matter? The chances are, you have failed to heed Nature's Warning.

Heed Nature's Warning

If the first symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are overlooked, or if no measures are taken to correct them, the penalty must be paid; for a slight over-exertion, a little fatigue, a strain on the nervous system, and the trouble long held back, takes on the form of an acute disease. The pains in the back and kidneys become severe. The bladder trouble increases. Sleep is lost. The appetite is impaired. The spirits are depressed. The body becomes weak and emaciated. The nervous system becomes shattered. Soon there is a very sick man or woman—perhaps dangerously ill—all because Nature's Warning was not heeded in time.

HINKLE KIDNEY and BLADDER CAPSULES are a cleansing, strengthening, invigorating remedy. Take them now if you feel any abnormal symptoms. Be on your guard. Hinkle Capsules are a successful physician's prescription. They are compounded from Nature's purest and greatest curative agents. They expel the poisonous impurities from the system. They will prevent kidney and bladder symptoms. PHASES OF FRENCH ART SEEN IN BIXBY EXHIBIT

Works Illustrate Development in Landscape Painting From Seventeenth to Twentieth Century.

The group of paintings from the collection of William K. Bixby, which is being exhibited in the City Art Museum in Forest Park, contains examples illustrating admirably the development of the French School of landscape painting from the conventional Italian style of the seventeenth century to the impressionistic manner of the twentieth century.

The oldest painting shown "The Flight Into Egypt," by Claude Lorrain (1600-1682), a Frenchman who lived a large part of his life in Italy and who has been called the undisputed master of the theatrical and conventional style known as "Italian landscape," in which the landscape background was skillfully manipulated to serve as a setting for historical or mythological events. Bixby's painting depicts the Holy Family journeying along the banks of a romantic stream which flows through an imposing landscape, with houses and castles nestling among stately trees. Though theatrical in conception, it is a scene which impresses the observer with a sense of grandeur by its feeling for spaciousness, light and atmosphere. The figures are mere accessories, the important features of the painting being its dignity of composition and successful handling of atmospheric effects, qualities which were to inspire succeeding generations of French landscape painters.

"The Men of 1830."

The next phase of French landscape art represented in Bixby's collection at the museum is that of the Barbizon school of the Nineteenth century. Of this significant group of artists, "The Men of 1830," whose work has affected the whole course of modern landscape painting, there are examples by J. B. C. Corot, Charles Emile Jacque, Emile Van Marcke and Henri Josef Harpignies. Deriving its name from a little villarge in the Forest of Fontainbleau, where several of its memebrs lived and worked, the Barbizon group infused into landscape painting a hitherto unknown feeling for the poetical qualities of light, atmosphere and color in nature.

Of these painters, J. B. C. Corot (1796-1875) is perhaps the best known for his incomparable renditions of the "freshness of morning and the silvery mists of evening." An example by him in the present exhibit, called simply "Forest," shows admirably his command of poetic atmospheric effects, with its cool, inviting shadows and its tender green foliage illuminated by patches of sunlight filtering through thickly interlaced branches. Another member of the group, Charles Ernie Jacque, who was the neighbor of Rousseau and Millet at Barbizon, is represented in the collection by a canvas called "Flock of Sheep at Edge of Wood." It is a pastoral scene executed with fine feeling for the lyric qualities of the subject, and with a skillful manipulation of the light to focus the interest upon the center of the composition. The majestic trees which form a background for the shepherd and his flock were probably inspired by the stately oaks of Fontainbleau Forest.

Emile Van Marcke (1827-1891), pupil of Constant Troyon, was another of the Barbizon artists who painted animals in landscape settings. In Bixby's example, called "Landscape," the herd of cows is an integral part of the scene. The animals in the foreground stand in brilliant sunshine while those farther back are obscured by the cloud shadows which fall dramatically across the composition. In freedom of handling and manipulation of light, the painting shows its affinity to the work of other members of the Barbizon school.

Two Works by Harpignies.

The collection contains two magnificant examples by Henri Josef Harpignies (1819-1916), a gifted follower of the Barbizon traditions. The larger of these canvases, "Matinee d' Automne, Morlaix," was Harpignies' Salon picture of 1901. It is an idyllic landscape with rich effects in deep green and golden foliage, delicately touched by the light from a pale morning sky. The other painting, "Le Crepuscule," substitutes for the pearly gray light of morning the darker and warmer tones of twilight, with a sky gently suffused with red. In poetry of light and atmosphere these paintings reveal Harpignies as a worthy successor of Corot.

Leon A. L'Hermitte (1844—) belongs to a new order of things, a generation which revels in warm sunshine and clear color, rather than the mysterious, haunting atmosphere of the Barbizon men. The composition, "At the Fountain," by which he is represented in the Bixby collection shows a group of peasants in a colorful out-of-doors scene with fresh, green foliage and cheerful sunlight. In treatment it is almost purely impressionistic, its loose, free handling showing the effect of the artist's long experience in the technique of charcoal drawing.

In addition to the Bixby paintings, the museum is showing a group of 17 portraits by early American artists and a series of five decorative panels in wood, carved and painted with scenes from the life of Jeanne d'Arc, by J. William Fosdick.

Doctor at 82 Finds Mothers Prefer His Formula to New-Fangled Salts And Coal Tar Remedies for Babies

Judgment of 1892 vindicated by world's approval of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a simple vegetable compound for constipation—So safe thousands give it to babes in arms—Now has largest sale in the world.

WHEN a man is in the 83rd year of his age, as I am, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs with pepsin.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL
Founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin
Born Shelbyville, Mo., 1839

Recently new medicines have been brought out for constipation that contain calomel, which is mercury, salts of various kinds, minerals, and coal tar. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products will depress the heart; certain salts give rise to intestinal poisoning, impaction and rupture of the intestines. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with pills and powders and strong drugs, even if disguised in candy? My remedy, too, costs less than most others, only about a cent a dose. A bottle such as you can find in any drug store, will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the babe in arms because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal.

The formula of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is on the cover of every bottle, and the ingredients have the endorsement of the U. S. Pharmacopoeia.

$10,000 Worth of Syrup Pepsin Free

In remembrance of my 83rd birthday I have set aside the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars to be given away in half-ounce bottles of my Syrup Pepsin. Only one Free Trial bottle to a family. All are constipated now and then, and here is an opportunity for you and others to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE. Ask for your free bottle today, simply sending name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Do not postpone this.

Girls Gamble to Decide Operation

Girls Toss Coin to Decide Turn on Operating Table

Though both suffered great physical pain, Leona Gaylord and Lillian Alexander, lifelong chums, stricken with appendicitis agreed to flip a coin to see which should be first to go on the operating table. They were seized with symptoms of appendicitis while making social calls.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

1000 PERSONS SELLING CHRISTMAS SEALS HERE

C. P. Pettus Is in Charge of Campaign to Raise Funds for Tuberculosis Society.

Charles P. Pettus has been appointed director of the fourteenth annual Christmas Seal campaign, which began Thursday under the auspices of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. Pettus, who is treasurer of the society, has organized a corps of about 1000 persons to take care of the selling end of the campaign and a program which will cover the entire city has been arranged.

Arrangements have been made to sell the stickers and holiday buttons in the hotels for a week; in all of the moving picture theaters and otoher theaters; in the schools of the city, public, parochial and private; in the department stores, drug stores, Union Station and office buildings. The sale will extend into the county, and schools and public buildings there will be the centers of sales activity.

"A heavy deficit is staring the society in the face," Pettus said. "This is due to the unexpected drain on the treasury caused largely by the general financial conditions, together with the fact that the Tuberculosis Society had to take on the three municipal nurses which the city was obliged to discharge for lack of funds, to pay their salaries and to do other work which is normally performed by the city and other health agencies. The society carried these expenses because it felt that if any of the work done under them was stopped the winning fight which the city is making against tuberculosis would have a serious setback.

"That tuberculosis is decreasing slowly but surely is an established fact. Five years ago there were 14,000 cases in the city. Now there are only 9500. In 1919 there were 1086 deaths. This year will show approximately 900. The fight is not yet won, but by unremitting efforts we are gradually gaining the objective."

The sale of Christmas seals is the largest source of revenue the society has, and is one of the three means by which it is supported. The other two are the annual ball game and voluntary subscriptions. The work of the society on its present basis costs about $150,000 a year. Normally about two-thirds of this comes from the Christmas Seal sale.

NORTH SIDE "Y" BEGINS SERIES OF ENTERTAINMENTS

"Community Programs" Will Include Lecture, Comedy Films, Music and Magician.

A series of weekly "community programs" for the entertainment of members of the men's and boys' departments and their friends was opened by the North Side department, Young Men's Christian Association, last Friday evening with a Chaplin movie comedy, music and singing. The program was given in the association auditorium, Grand and Sullivan avenues, and was free.

Next Friday evening Prof. D. M. Hazlett of Washington University will give a stereopticon lecture on Rio de Janeiro, some times called "the most beautiful city in the world." A comedy picture and music also will be offered.

The magician Homar will give a performance Thursday evening, Dec. 15. A Christmas program has been arranged for Friday evening, Dec. 23.

Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. August Michael of 3818 Michigan avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Wednesday evening with a dinner party and a reception at their home. They are both native St. Louisans, and have spent their entire lives here. They have two sons and two daughters and four grandchildren.

AID SOUGHT FOR SHIPWRECKED MAN NOW ILL IN CAROLINES

James Howard, Survivor of Bark Horatio, Helpless for Last Year and One-Half.

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 4.—Shipwrecked and a resident for 20 years on one of the Caroline Islands, is the experience of an American, James Howard, sole survivor of the American bark Horatio, which went on the shoals of Kusai Island in 1901. The news of Howard's condition was brought here this week by Dr. William H. Hobbs of the University of Michigan, who has been engaged in seismic research work in the Caroline group.

Dr. Hobbs said Howard was cared for by the natives and finally became agent at Panope for a German trading concern, which place he held until the Japanese took over the islands under the mandate from the League of Nations.

A year and a half ago, a stroke of paralysis made Howard almost helpless and unable to work. Since that time he has been taken care of by Chief Nampei of Roukiti, who has given him food, clothing and medicine.

"Chief Nampei has American blood in him, speaks English well and is a man of sterling integrity," said Dr. Hobbs. Howard's case was laid by Dr. Hobbs before Charles E. Yeater, at that time Acting Governor of the Philippines, who suggested to the War Department that the Japanese be asked to furnish transportation from Panope to Yokohama for Howard, so that he may take passage on an army transport and finally reach his home in Utica, N. Y.

This Phonograph Bargain
Has Set All St. Louis a-Talking!

This astounding offer in a high-class Phonograph—a Phonograph that from a point of appearance, construction, tone and value compares favorably with much higher priced standard make Phonographs—has created the biggest sensation St. Louis has ever before seen! When you stop to consider the high quality embodied in this wonderful Phonograph and the extremely low price at which it is quoted, there is really little wonder why the demand for the $74.85 Console Symphony Console Phonograph is overwhelming. The only difference between much higher-priced Phonographs and the Symphony Console phonograph is the price, the Symphony's price being far less than actual value. Quantity production accounts for this almost unbelievably low figure. The richness of tone, the magnificence of cabinet design and the excellence of construction of this Symphony Console Phonograph can best be appreciated by a demonstration.

Heretofore, people of moderate circumstances desiring a Console Phonograph could not afford one, as the prices asked were beyond their reach, but now that this wonderful new Symphony Console Phonograph can be bought for the low price of only $74.85, this exceptional opportunity is being grasped by everyone. Aside from the lowness of the price, the Symphony possesses exceptional beauty of tone and extremely durable construction—is obtainable in two handsome designs, Queen Anne (as pictured above) or Italian Renaissance. Christmas orders must be placed IMMEDIATELY to insure obtaining one of these wonderful Phonographs! ! !

Out-of-Town Customers!
Can also avail themselves of this wonderful bargain. Upon receipt of check for $15.00 we will ship you either the Queen Anne or the Italian Renaissance, F. O. B. St. Louis, to be paid in monthly installments of $10.00 each. WRITE AT ONCE.

Read These Points of Construction—
The New Symphony Console Phonograph comes in two designs, the Queen Anne and Italian Renaissance. Measures 36 inches in height, 34 inches in length and 21 inches in depth.

Both models are constructed of very thick Prima Vari mahogany with mahogany finish, double doors, silk-lined grille, record compartment with four shelves. Cabinets are fitted with full-length piano hinges and very highest grade "throw-back" tone arm, that will play all disc records.

The motor used in both models is one found only in this and other high priced instruments, specially inclosed and self-lubricating. The gears, governors and springs are completely inclosed in a rigid cast-iron box, which eliminates the possibility of misadjustment and protects the motor from dust and other foreign matter.

The amplifier or tone chamber is made entirely of fine quality violin wood, specially seasoned, and curved in the shape of a horn, starting from the tone arm and ending with the grille.

CORRECT TIME BY WIRELESS

Paris Jewelers Have Device to Catch Eiffel Tower Dispatches.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Fifteen hundred small wireless outfits have been installed in Paris jewelry, watch and clock stores to enable the jewelers to catch the correct Greenwich meridian time as it is sent daily at 10 o'clock by the Eiffel Tower. Formerly the exact time had to be obtained from the observatory by telephone.

The installation is simplicity itself. The outfit, about nine inches in diameter, is hung on a nail in the wall. A copper wire run down to the cellar or along a water or gas pipe serves as a "ground wire," while the removal of the bulb from a nearby electric light and the insertion of a contact plug take the place of antennae. It can be done in five minutes. The outfit can be regulated to hear everything that is sent out from the Eiffel Tower.

"THE DEAD CITY" IS REMINISCENT OF OTHER OPERAS

Korngold's Music Is Mixture of Excellence and Defects, but Is Amazing Performance for Youth.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Readers all over the country will be interested in the plot of "Die Tote Stadt" ("The Dead City"), an opera by the youthful Viennese composer, Erich Korngold, which had its premiere at the Metropolitan on the afternoon of Nov. 20. On that occasion also, Mme. Marie Jeritza, an Austrian prima donna, for whom the opera was written, swept out upon the stage like a blond thunderbolt, and caroled her way stormily into the hearts of the audience.

The libretto, in German, is by Paul Schott, who adapted it from a play, "Le Mirage," by the Belgian poet, Georges Rodenbach. He, in turn, had founded the play on his own novel, "Bruges la Morte."

Stage Action Described.

For the sake of clarity and brevity the action is described as it occurs upon the stage:

Act 1 shows a room in the home of Paul, the hero of the story. He has consecrated this room to the memory of his dead wife, Marie. Here hangs a large picture of her, and in a glass casket a lock of her long, blond hair. Here he often comes to brood over his dead, but today he is radiant. He has met a mysterious woman who is the living counterpart, the reincarnation of his lost Marie.

The woman enters. She is Marietta, a dancer with an itinerant opera troupe. Paul, dazed, and almost believing she is really Marie's reincarnation come back to rejoin him, sinks into a stupor. The stage darkens. An eerie light shines upon Marie's portrait, which, with a shuddering cry, comes to life and speaks to him. This is a false love, she tells him. Look and see. As the curtain falls Marie disappears and a vision of Marietta takes her place, dancing seductively.

Act 2 is Paul's dream. He sees himself waiting at night before Marietta's house. Marietta and her troupe enter, half drunk, and engage in a sacrilegious revel. Paul rushes out. Her companions leave, and he tells her bitterly that all that he has loved in her is her resemblance to Marie. Her vanity hurt by this declaration, Marietta woos him passionately and finally subjugates him. Paul starts for Marietta's house—but no. Her victory must be complete. It is to his, not to Marietta's, house that they will go. They rush out together.

Act 3. Paul's house again. Paul, still in his dream, sees Marietta enter the room the following morning and taunt Marie's picture with her triumph. He enters, wretched. The Corpus Christi procession is heard, approaching. Suddenly the walls of the room become transparent and he sees the whole procession. It disappears and he starts back in horror and remorse, cursing Marietta.

She jeers at his piety and snatching the lock of Marie's hair, dances. Paul, beside himself with fury, seizes her and strangles her with it.

The stage darkens for a moment.

As the lights go up, Paul is seen awaking from his stupor. Marietta comes back for her parasol. She hints that she might stay, but Paul is indifferent, and with a shrug she goes. Frank, his friend, begs Paul to leave Bruges, the dead city of memories and come out into the world with him. Yes, he will go. "There is no resurrection on earth."

Opportunities Offered.

This is a libretto that offers great opportunities for stage effect and for writing vivid emotional and dramatic music. Korngold's setting is a modified version of the leitmotiv system. The stream of orchestral comment is continuous, but embodied in the score are several lyric scenes that could easily be sung as detached solo numbers.

The music itself is a mixture of excellences and defects. In general, the faults of the score are those that would be expected of youth—lack of individuality, overemphasis, bad taste and emotional immaturity. Of Korngold's talent for composition there can be no question. "Die Tote Stadt" is an amazing performance for a boy of 22. He has rhythmic vigor, a sense of color and apt harmonization, and an unerring sense of what will get across in the theater. All that is incomplete is Korngold himself. He is not yet an individual. His score is crammed with reminiscences not only of other men's minds and reactions. He not

INGROWN NAILS

Toe Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen the Skin

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

"THE DEAD CITY" IS REMINISCENT OF OTHER OPERAS

only sounds like Puccini and Mendelssohn and Wagner and Bizet and Liza Lehmann; he IS each of these in turn. Once in a while one hears a new note, a voice as yet halting and almost inarticulate, that offers a promise of eloquence when the speaker shall have grown up. Unimportant as much of this music is, it always has vitality, always demands a hearing. Only, Korngold's voice is changing, spiritually speaking.

Treatment Superficial.

This treatment of the emotional implications of the book is, as might be expected, superficial. He aims to depict, to draw a likeness rather than create a mood. When Marie's picture comes to life the orchestra sounds a chromatic wail in which piccolo and clarinet squeak and gibber gruesomely over dun-colored minor triads. This is all very well, but the being whose mood calls for description here is not the audience, but Paul; Paul, to whom the resuscitation of his dead wife's picture comes as a moment of fearful joy, not of grave-worms and horror. The love music is all melodious, but it is equally pretty and sentimental, regardless of the scene or the characters.

The opening of act 2 is the best music of the piece. Here the external aspects of the scene coincide with its dramatic significance, and the introduction, with its brasses stalking grimly through a wild melee of shrieking strings, organ chords, chimes and stabbingly dissonant wood winds, is a vivid picture of the desolate, wind-ridden, church-strewn streets of the dead city.

Opera Is Overscored.

The opera is greatly overscored. Besides the usual instrumental forces of a full symphony orchestra, Korngold uses a fourth trumpet, a contrabassoon, piano, celesta, organ and a whole hardware store full of percussion instruments. The score is full of "effects" that seem not so much the result of the inevitable demands of the action and the music as of a desire to keep the players from earning their salaries too easily. The celesta, for instance ,is a very pretty instrument, effective in inverse ratio to the number of times it is employed; Korngold keeps this unfortunate instrument tinkling away until it becomes no more impressive than a cash register.

His writing for the voice is generally bad. The vocal parts often sound as if they were afterthoughts fitted into the score just before it was sent to the copyist. As usual with German composers, the soprano part is too high and the tenor part is too low. There are some fine cantilena passages, however, aside from the cruel pitch at which they are written.

Architects and Engineers to Meet.

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

$15,000 GOAL IN POST-DISPATCH 22ND CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

A. M. Roth Re-elected as Chairman of the Executive Committee—Preliminary Plans Are Made.

PROGRAM THIS YEAR ON MONDAY, DEC. 26

Lists for Contributions Will Be Distributed Wednesday—Applications for Baskets May Be Filed Tomorrow.

Festival Fund Has No Solicitors; Lists to Go Out as in Other Years

THE Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund has no collectors of contributions and persons soliciting cash donations are impostors and should be immediately reported to Secretary of the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch, Olive 6600, or Central 6600.

As in former years, subscription lists will be distributed by young women, where that is practical, and elsewhere by mail. These lists are sent out with the request that they be so displayed that anyone wishing to subscribe any sum, large or small, to the fund, may do so. This request will be made by the young women when they distribute the lists, and these helpers will make further visits to see that the opportunity to contribute has not been mislaid or forgotten, but none of the workers is authorized to ask for or to receive money.

When a list has served its purpose it may be returned to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch by mail or messenger, or, if that be not entirely convenient, a telephone request will bring a representative of the Post-Dispatch with written authority to receive and receipt for the list and the money.

Except through subscription lists, donations can be made only in cash or by mail to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. Acknowledgment will be made in the Post-Dispatch of every subscription of whatever size, accompanied by the donor's name, unless a request for an anonymous acknowledgment is made.

Members of Executive Committee of Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association.

Fifteen thousand dollars has been set by leaders of the committees in charge of the plans for the twenty-second annual Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival as the amount necessary to provide Christmas hospitality this year for all members of the St. Louis community family who would otherwise lack holiday cheer. The festival will be given on Monday, Dec. 26, since Christmas day falls on Sunday this year.

The Executive Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association held its first meeting of the year at the Hotel Jefferson last Thursday, following a luncheon at which members of the committee were guests of the Post-Dispatch. A. M. Roth was re-elected chairman of the Executive Committee, which numbers more than a score of prominent business and professional men and women.

Preliminary plans and arrangements for the largest, most elaborate festivities ever given by the association, were discussed, and much of the work already has been begun, so that with the usual liberal support and co-operation of citizens of St. Louis, there should not be a single home in the city this year where poverty will preclude the possibility of Christmas cheer.

Scope of Festival Last Year.

Last year 2125 basket dinners were distributed, as against 1427 the preceding year, and more than 45,000 gifts were given to the 10,000 children who gathered to witness the big entertainment staged by child actors recruited from the municipal playgrounds, at the Coliseum on Christmas morning. Approximately 32,700 persons and business firms contributed to the Christmas Festival Fund in 1920. Taking into account the number of contributors, this represented 48 cents for each contributor. Every station in life assists in the meritorious work and

A Common Sense Christmas Thought

YES, IT WILL BE AN EDISON

The children shall have real music in the home Christmas Day. I shall take advantage of the EDISON special Christmas Offer.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR COMPARISON TO DECIDE WHICH PHONOGRAPH TO BUY FOR XMAS

We place an Edison alongside of any other Phonograph either in your home or in any dealer's establishment or we will allow any dealer to send his talking machine to our establishment, allowing you to make a comparison and be your own judge—

YOU TO DECIDE WHICH SOUNDS THE MOST NATURAL

You will find upon comparison that the New Edison stands for new standards in Home Music

The NEW EDISON

Is the only Phonograph that will sustain a direct comparison with the original singer or instrument, proving that no change has taken place in tone quality. With an Edison in your home, it is equal to having the original singer right there singing for you—comparison has proven there is no difference.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER

We will deliver the New Edison under our special club plan to your Christmas tree. Make a small payment to indicate good faith, pay no more till next year, then we will budget the balance according to your convenience.

$15,000 GOAL IN POST-DISPATCH 22D GHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

enables the Post-Dispatch to carry on this great public function which, as the years have passed, has become an almost city-wide expression of good will and kindness of heart from those who are well off in this world's goods to those who are not so fortunate. During the 21 years of its stewardship the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association has received and disbursed approximately $175,555.90, every penny of which has gone for the purpose for which it was given, since the Post-Dispatch has assumed all administration expenses each year.

Under the direction of Chairman Louis Nolte, the Committee on Food Buying and Distribution has begun its duties and the deserving families who will receive dinners through the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund this year will be well cared for.

This year, as last, the Basket List Committee will receive applications, preferably in writing, until 6 o'clock Thursday evening, Dec. 15. Experienced social workers will investigate all applications received up to this hour, and the number of baskets to be distributed will be definitely known a few days later, when all investigations shall have been completed. In other years it has been found necessary to fix this time limit for the receiving of names, in order to give the workers time to ascertain that the supplies are going to those deserving of the public's hospitality.

All legitimate requests are certain of being cared for, and any person knowing of a family that is in need of a Christmas dinner basket is urged to advise the Post-Dispatch before Dec. 15. No one will be refused consideration. Personal applications will be received, beginning tomorrow morning, at the Information Bureau, first floor, Post-Dispatch Building, where Mrs. Mary I. McDearmon will be in charge.

The consensus of opinion of members of the Executive Committee was that the homeless men of St. Louis are being efficiently cared for through the various missions and municipal lodging houses, and so it virtually was decided to again omit the dinner formerly provided by the Festival Association for homeless men. The last such dinner was given in 1916, at a cost of $1019.

Chairman Robert D. Corlett of the Gift Buying and Distribution Committee probably can lay claim to the distinction of being the buyer of more Christmas presents than any other St. Louisan, since it is his duty to purchase the many thousand gifts which each year are distributed at the Coliseum to the child guests. This year children's hearts will be gladdened, not only by horns and rubber balls, one of which has been provided for each little boy and girl, but also by 6500 toques or hockey caps for distribution among the older children and an ample supply of wooden crickets to enable them to all join in the general din which annually precedes the elaborate entertainment.

No "little mother" will have empty arms on Christmas day, for

It's not too early to consider Christmas Plans

A Good Gift for the Woman Who Likes to Sew—

Martha Washington Sewing Table $16.75

She'll like it because it's appealingly quaint and decorative—a piece of furniture she'll be proud to own and exhibit—and because with its roomy compartments it's mighty convenient, too. It's beautifully finished in mahogany.

And our two stores are ready with many and many a helpful Christmas gift suggestion. Just a few are treated of here, in company with other offerings that Wintry weather makes most timely. A visit to either store will disclose dozens more. And now's the time to begin Christmas buying. The big holiday will be here almost before you know it.

Ninth and Washington HELLRUNG & GRIMM Sixteenth and Cass

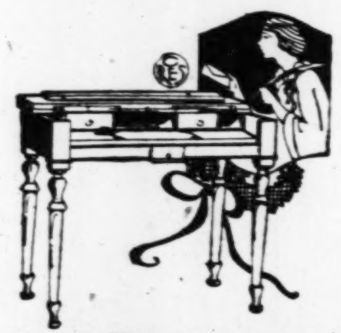
Many a Woman's Gift will be chosen from our stock of

Cedar Chests At $15 to $75

And you could hardly choose a more welcome gift. We have Cedar Chests in a great variety of styles and sizes—both plain and copper-bound models—all made of genuine Tennessee red cedar and highly polished.



Spinet Desk, $24.75

Milady's correspondence can be most pleasantly accomplished at a beauty of a desk like this. It is thirty-two inches wide and is made of built-up mahogany. It's exactly as illustrated, except that instead of two drawers as shown, it has only one—in the center, with an open compartment on either side.

All Coal and Gas Ranges
Combination Ranges
Coal Heating Stoves

And that means your unrestricted choice of our entire stock of Cooking Stoves and Heating Stoves at the above smashing reduction. Detroit Jewel and other well-known makes are included. Buy Stoves this week—and save money.

Offered this week only at 25 Per Cent Off the regular prices.

End Table, $5.75

End Tables are coming very much into use right now, and very effective they are, too, placed at one end of the davenport or davenette. This one at $5.75—a remarkably low price, by the way, is gracefully designed as you can see, sturdily built, and finished in mahogany. Packed ready for shipment.

Sewing Cabinet, $6.50

A convenient thing to have in the sewing room; a handsome piece of furniture, too. Maybe mother has been wanting just such a Cabinet to keep her sewing things in and will appreciate one for Christmas. It's 25 inches high and finished in mahogany.

Doll Cabs at $2.98

Built just like an honest-to-goodness baby carriage—only smaller. And it's not so awfully small at that, for it's 22 inches high to the handle and the body is 19 inches long. Body and hood are both made of fiber in ivory or gray finish. Wheels are rubber-tired. On out-of-town orders $1.00 extra for crating.

Scooter Cars, 98c

Safe enough for the four-year-old. Speedy as any fifteen-year-old could want. And 98c is a mighty low price for strong, smooth-running Scooters like these.

9x12 Royal Wilton Rugs in beautiful designs and color effects	$79.00

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

For Thick Heavy Hair Use Cuticura

TREATMENT: Touch spots of dandruff and itching with Cuticura Ointment on the end of the finger. Next morning shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse with tepid water. When you have made your scalp skin clean, sweet and healthy then will your hair become soft and thick.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. 14G, Malden 48, Mass." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

$15,000 GOAL IN POST-DISPATCH 22D CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

dolls have been purchased to assure that heritage of girlhood to each small feminine guest, and 3500 books are also included in the list of gifts, and each child will receive a generous package of candy.

Plans for a beautiful entertainment at the Coliseum on Monday morning are well under way and the youngsters who assemble there will be royally entertained. Admission tickets no doubt will be distributed through depots or stations in various parts of the city, location of which will be announced later. No Coliseum tickets will be given away at the Post-Dispatch building.

Lists to Be Out Wednesday.

Distribution of the Christmas Festival lists will begin Wednesday. While as many of the larger donations as it is possible to obtain will be needed this year, the Festival Committee is laying special emphasis on the small gifts—the nickels, dimes and quarters, which aided in raising the record fund of last year and enabled more than 32,000 persons to participate in the spreading of Yuletide cheer.

It is the aim of the Subscription List Committee to place a contribution list in every place of business in St. Louis, and about 15,000 new lists of offices and business establishments have been compiled from the newest telephone and business directories.

In each place to which a list is delivered some individual will be asked to take charge of it and of contributions, and when the list is closed to send the money subscribed, with the list, to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. Every contribution, large or small, will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

Organized 21 Years Ago.

In connection with the announcement of its plans for the current season's activities a brief summary of the past history of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival and a statement of its desires and purposes should not be amiss. It was organized 21 years ago and is managed by an Executive Committee comprising well-known citizens and representatives of the leading organized charitable forces of St. Louis. The members of the association are appointed by the executive chairman to preside over various minor committees and each subcommitteeman assumes responsibility for a certain department of the work, choosing as many associates as he deems necessary to effectively administer the details of his particular department.

Hospitality rather than charity is the keynote of the association's efforts and it strongly desires to reach those families in which there are small children, even those whose physical needs are fairly well met on other days, but who on Christmas day, were it not for the Christmas Festival, would not have the little "extras" which mean so much to childhood—the candy and gifts which come to the average youngster as a matter of course.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association is not a part of the regular social service machinery of St. Louis—it is, rather, a one-day institution which has for its object the business of making certain that no person in the entire city, young or old, regardless of race or color, shall lack the means of oblivion for one day at least, of the surroundings and conditions that make for misery and downheartedness. It is a service that can be and should be participated in by every man, woman and child in whose hearts the seed of brotherly love flourishes.

Executives Well Experienced.

The Executive Committee members are all experienced in buying in large quantities the kind of supplies which they purchase for the association, and especially note-

How I Was Wrecking the Lives of My Children

And Suffering Indescribable Tortures Myself Day and Night. A Mother's Terrible Confession

For some time I had noticed that my two children, a boy of seven and a girl of ten, were becoming highly nervous, irritable and very disobedient. I tried various punishments, even whipping, but they kept growing worse. My own nerves were all "on edge" the least thing would put me into a rage.

I was too weak to work or enjoy life, and too nervous and irritable to go anywhere. I often suffered from severe heart palpitation and indigestion. I could not sleep at night; I had an almost constant dull aching pain in the back of my neck and head, and frequently a very disagreeable sense of fullness in the front part of my head. I often had severe pains across my back which made me think I had kidney trouble. I could not begin to describe all the tortures and terrible pains which I endured. Finally I went to a doctor and told him my story. After studying my case, he told me I was the cause of my children's condition. He told me how the system only manufactured so much nerve force and that this vital fluid of life was stored in the nerve cells, much like electricity is stored in a storage battery and is just as quickly exhausted.

He said my own highly nervous condition had been a constant drain on the nerve force of my children, and that the constant nervous strain to which I had subjected them had wrecked their highly sensitive nervous organizations. Later all this I found out to be true because after I regained my own nervous poise, and revitalized my worn out, exhausted nerve centers, and the same was done for my children, I found them to be the nicest, sweetest children in the world—their whole dispositions entirely changed.

The above is a hypothetical case, which a physician says may well illustrate thousands which exist today. Homes are wrecked, children ruined, all through exhausted nerve force. Very few people realize the terrible physical and mental tortures often caused by a depletion of the nervo-vital fluid.

In such cases, what you need is to put more force into your nerves, and more iron into your blood. This is best accomplished by the use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the nerve and brain cells of man.

It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. This form of iron will not blacken or injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It is an entirely different thing from metallic iron which people usually take. Nuxated Iron may therefore be termed both a blood and a nerve food.

Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, and from the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. For sale by all druggists.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Your servants, ready to wait on you at a moment's notice, are Post-Dispatch Wants.

Buying 7% Income Out of Savings

The best out-of-work insurance is ownership of good securities that pay regular interest or dividends and that can always, in case of need, be sold for cash at their real value.

Union Electric has helped thousands of St. Louis district men and women to get this kind of insurance through purchase of its 7% preferred shares. Every business day in the year others are buying this insurance. Most of them buy the shares at the cash price, $100 each, but not all of them.

September 30, 1921, 296 men and women were buying these shares, individually or in joint ownership, on monthly payments. They pay $101 per share—$11 down and $10 per month for nine months. They are credited with 7% interest on their payments. When payments are completed, they get their shares and begin drawing cash dividends of $1.75 per share every three months, payable by check cashable at any bank.

Since Union Electric began financing part of its growth by selling its preferred shares to home folks, in 1917, more than 1,000 men and women have bought and paid for shares on the monthly payment plan. This plan has helped a good many young men and women to learn the value of systematic saving. At the same time it has taught them to invest their savings themselves and get the full earning power of the money for themselves.

If you are spending ten or twenty or thirty dollars a month that you could save if you tried to, here is your chance to start accumulating a fund that will protect you against rainy days, and eventually, as you continue adding to it, make you independent.

$15,000 GOAL IN POST-DISPATCH 22D CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

worthy is the co-operation they annually receive from wholesale dealers and manufacturers of those supplies.

The Audit Committee has made the following report on the Post-Dispatch 1920 Christmas Festival Fund:

"ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 18, 1921.

"To the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund.

"As chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund I submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the festival for the year of 1920:

RECEIPTS.

Balance from last year with interest	$ 4,796 66
Post-Dispatch contribution	500 00
Other contributions	15,182 69

Toys and gifts	8,896 86
Administration expense paid by the Post-Dispatch	2,169 49
Balance on hand	1,271 76
Total	$22,648 84

"I have examined the books and accounts of the treasurer of the fund, Dumont Jones, cashier of the Post-Dispatch, and find them correct. All contributions to the fund were received, entered on the books and acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

"All supplies, labor and other necessaries for the festival were ordered on requisition of the chairman of the committees and ordered by the chairman of the Supply Committee and on the approval of the Executive Committee.

"All bills were approved by the chairman of the committees and paid on vouchers signed for the Executive Committee and the Post-Dispatch by Miss Mabel Denison and George S. Johns.

"Every dollar expended is accounted for by an approved bill and a signed and approved voucher.

"Besides its contribution of $500, the Post-Dispatch paid the expense of the administration, including salaries of office help, solicitors, etc., typewriting, stationery, postage and committee expenses, which amounted to $2169.49. Thus all of the money expended from the fund was applied to the actual necessaries of the several divisions of the Festival.

"It is gratifying to note the efficient system on which the Fstival is conducted and the economy and accuracy with which the fund is administered.

ASTHMA CURED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Famous Druggist Discovers Simple Remedy for Asthma and Makes General FREE TRIAL Offer to Readers.

Thirty years ago Mr. C. Leavengood, a widely known Kansas druggist, discovered a simple, easy to take prescription for Asthma. He gave it to people who had suffered for years, and, to their amazement, they say they were easily cured. These people told their friends, and in this way thousands have found the sure way to cure Asthma. Mr. Leavengood feels so confident that his prescription will cure in all cases that he generously offers to send a big bottle on 10 days' Free Trial to any reader of this paper who will write for it. If it cures pay $1.25, otherwise you owe nothing. Send no money—just write to C. LEAVENGOOD, 1520 S. W. Bl., Rosedale, Kas., and the big bottle will be mailed immediately.

Mason & Hamlin

Highest Priced, Highest Praised Piano of Today

Mason & Hamlin Pianos cost more to build, and are higher in price than any others; but the added science, labor and time that go into their construction produce a result of unequaled beauty of tone and durability worth many times the additional price.

It is this super-excellence that distinguishes Mason & Hamlin from other fine Pianos, and it is this that is paid for, in a small part, by the extra price. Before investing in a new Piano, investigate the Mason & Hamlin "Tension Resonator," and what it accomplishes.

THIS year, as last, the list of persons to whom Christmas dinners will be sent in baskets by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association will be handled and checked by a committee of representatives of leading charitable organiaztions, assisted by a staff of investigators from the Board of Children's Guardians.

Applications for the basket dinners, from either individulas or charitable organizations, should be sent in writing if possible to the Basket List Committee, care of the Post-Dispatch, Twelfth and Olive streets, or given in person at the information desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch building. All applications must be in the hands of the committee by 6 o'clock the evening of Thursday, Dec. 15.

This time limit has been fixed because of the work required to cross-check lists of names to avoid duplication and to see that all deserving families are provided with Christmas cheer.

ENGLISH CHORUS GIRLS QUIT STAGE TO BECOME SERVANTS

Flossie, Formerly Third From End in "Feather Duster" Ballet, Wields Mop Without Music.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Low salaries and poor theatrical business, not only in London but throughout the provinces, are driving chorus girls to take the role of parlor maid and cook.

Flossie, who used to be third from the end in the "feather duster" ballet, is learning to wield the mop without the stimulus of music.

Aside from the necessity of training for her new domestic part, the chorus girl has another strong incentive to take a course of training before setting out to look for a maid's job. Few British housewives would accept a reference from the manager of the last show she was in. But a certificate from one of the increasingly popular training schools amply conceals a theatrical past.

DESERTION CHARGE AGAINST ADOLPH L. SCHLENKER DROPPED

The charge of desertion against Adolph L. Schlenker, a registrant of the local board for Division No. 13, St. Louis, has been set aside.

Draft records show that this registrant was directed to report to the Adjutant-General of Missouri for military duty not later than June 15, 1918, and that because he failed to report as ordered he was subsequently certified as a deserter. Records of those who served during the world war show that he enlisted in the Marine Corps on Aug. 29, 1917, and was discharged on May 13, 1919. The charge of desertion has been set aside, therefore, and his name has been removed by the War Department from the published list of alleged draft deserters.

"Cure Your Rupture Like I Cured Mine"

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

"Fellow Men and Women, You Don't Have To Be Cut Up, and You Don't Have To Be Tortured By Trusses."

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method; it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. The book and medicine are FREE. They will be sent prepaid to any rupture sufferer who will fill out the below coupon. But send it right away—now—before you put down this paper.

Better Jobs Than Making Guns, Says Munition Maker

Manufacturer, Advocating Abolition of Private Industry in War Goods, Pressing Idea at Washington.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The man who has put it up to the arms conference to abolish private manufacture of war materials was, until the armistice, one of the world's greatest private manufacturers of munitions.

He is Edgar Park, organizer and first president of the Marlin-Rockwell Corporation, makers of machine guns, aerial guns, automatic rifles, aerial bombs and torpedoes and small arms, which during the war not only developed a machine gun manufacturing capacity equal to 65 per cent of the world's output but at the time of the armistice was on the way to producing 900 machine guns a day.

Park has retired as president of the Marlin-Rockwell Corporation, but he is a director in the concern and its largest stockholder.

For International Control.

Park's New York office is at 366 Madison avenue. There a Post-Dispatch reporter found him a few minutes before he was to board a train back to Washington to further his plan to wipe out private arms manufacture forever and substitute a system of munitions making under international control not only as to manufacture but also allotment and use.

"My suggestion as presented to the Committee on Land Armament of the conference through Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird," said Park, "speaks for itself. I believe the private manufacture of war materials, like all other systems and customs opposed to the advance of civilization, must go. And I might add that there is no more justification in the argument that the abolition of private munition plants will rob workmen of their jobs than there was in the argument that prohibition would throw bartenders and brewery workers out of employment or that the abolition of gambling would embarrass the gambling house workers. There will be better jobs for the workmen now employed in munition plants, just as there are better jobs for those who depended on the liquor business."

Organized the Corporation.

Park organized the Marlin-Rockwell corporation in 1915 and first manufactured, under British contract, 18,000 machine guns for Russia. On our entrance into the war it made machine guns for the training camps and then devised a new type of machine gun for airplanes, synchronized to shoot through the propeller blades. Of these the concern produced 38,000.

After the armistice it produced 18,000 Browning automatic rifles, then withdrew from manufacture of military arms. Its plants were scattered all over the country, it having built, bought or taken over three factories in New Haven, Conn.; three in Philadelphia and one each in Boston, Pittsburg, New York, Norwich, Conn., and Southern Delaware.

MANY LOSS AWARDS IN IRELAND, BUT NO MONEY TO PAY THEM

For Great Mass of Sufferers During Fighting There Is No Prospect of Relief.

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—Recorders and judges are daily awarding thousands of pounds as compensation to people who have suffered loss or injury during the fighting with the British forces, but few of these awards seem likely to materialize in hard cash. There is no money with which to pay them.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, Secretary of State for Ireland, answering an inquiry in the British House of Commons, put the total amount of awards to Sept. 30 last at £8,000,000; but the amount involved in the 26 southern counties is at least £10,000,000, while another £2,000,000 has to be added for the area in Ulster. Some of the claimants are Sinn Feiners and others are business men who took no part in politics.

When an award is made the local authority is supposed to levy a special tax for the purpose; but since Sinn Fein assumed political control of the country no local authority in Southern Ireland has imposed such a tax. For the great mass of sufferers there is no prospect of relief, and how the thousands of claims already granted are to be met puzzles everybody, including the claimants.

Red Cross Survey of Webster.

The Red Cross survey of Webster Groves, which was begun in September by Miss Bessie McClennahan, a service worker, has been completed. The information has been gone over by the Service Committee and will be presented at a community meeting next Saturday night at the High School auditorium.

GERMANS PROTEST AGAINST "SELLING OUT" OF COUNTRY

Foreign Speculators Pouring In on Every Train to Purchase Goods Since Mark Began Decline.

MANY STORES STRIPPED OF STOCKS

Articles of American Manufacture Are on Sale at Prices Much Lower Than in U. S.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Germany, Nov. 15.—German newspapers for weeks have been waging a campaign of protest against what is termed the "selling out of Germany" to foreigners who have invaded the country to purchase goods since the mark began its sharp decline early in October.

The mark has fallen in value much faster than the prices advanced and, as a consequence, thousands of speculators have been attracted to Germany to take advantage of the situation.

In the occupied area the influx of foreigners became so great within a few days that the allied authorities soon decided that some concerted action was necessary to protect the residents.

The president of the Rhineland province, acting under direction of the Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission, isssued a decree prohibiting purchase of merchandise by foreigners not actually residing within the territory of occupation. This order does not affect members of the allied military forces, the Rhineland Commission, nor other foreigners who were in the occupied area on legitimate business.

Officials deemed that this step toward trade regulation was necessary to prevent retailers from selling all their stocks to foreigners taking advantage of the low rate of exchange on foreign currencies at a time when the price on goods in the German stores had not been advanced, or at least not marked up in comparison with the depreciation of the German money.

For days, buyers poured into the Rhineland on every train and by automobile from Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, France and other nearby countries and business in the stores of Coblenz, Cologne and Aix-la-Chappelle flourished as it never had before. The foreigners bought everything on sale and in whatever quantity could be arranged with the retailer. This abnormal demand for goods continued for days and reached such a stage at times that storekeepers found it necessary to close their doors because of the crowds or because the shelves were empty. Clerks worked 16 and 18 hours a day trying to keep up with the demand.

Many articles of American manufacture are on sale in Coblenz stores at retail prices much lower than in the United States, taking into consideration the rate of exchange. It is explained here that these goods came from surplus army stocks in France which at various times since the armistice have been disposed of by the United States Liquidation Commission to Germans and merchants of various other countries.

"DEEMSTERS" ON ISLE OF MAN SWORN IN BY ANCIENT OATH

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, Nov. 14.—The appointment of two new "deemsters," or members of the legislative council of this island, has just called attention to the peculiarities of the ancient oath they take on the Bible when assuming office. It reads:

"By this book, and by the holy contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God hath miraculously wrought in heaven above and in earth beneath in six days and seven nights, I do swear that I will execute the laws of this island justly between our sovereign Lord the King and his subjects within this isle, and betwixt party and party, as indifferently as the herring backbone doth lie in the middle of the fish."

The Isle of Man, which is well known as a pleasure resort and is situated in the Irish Sea, has its own legislature and is not bound by any acts of Parliament, unless it is specifically mentioned in them.

MME. NILSSON HAD HER OWN ROULETTE SYSTEM

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTE CARLO, Dec. 3.—Mme. Christine Nilsson (or Countess de Casa-Miranda as she became), the great singer who died recently at the age of 78, was for 30 years a regular habitue of the Casino at Monte Carlo. She played roulette for substantial but not extravagant stakes by a system of her own.

But she never played unless she got a particular seat at a particular table, and always from 4 to 7 o'clock in the evening.

She sent her prim-looking, elderly maid to reserve the same chair every afternoon.

Mme. Nilsson was a typical Scandinavian blonde with handsome, pale, hard features and in later life the stony intensity of her light blue eyes, combined with her tight-lipped mouth and firm chin made her resemble one of the Fates. Although she was Patti's most formidable rival, she never gained equal popularity.

MODERN TENDENCIES TOWARD LOVE AND MARRIAGE IN JAPAN

New and Romantic Ideal Has Resulted in Elopements, Suicides and Family Dissensions.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 3.—A series of articles on love and marriage is appearing in Japanese newspapers and magazines, as a sign of the modern tendencies of the new Japanese mentality. Professors in psychology, school teachers and writers of note are prominent in this discussion of the reforming of the old matrimonial system, all advocating more freedom for personal choice.

According to the old custom, the parents chose bride and bridegroom and the marriage was performed without the interested parties having known each other. Marriage was considered a duty toward country and family, the religion of ancestor worship being its principle. The young couples lived with the parents and the bride owed complete obedience to her mother-in-law.

The custom is now prevalent for the young people to meet long before the marriage takes place so that they may know each other, and to live apart from the family is no longer considered undutiful. Yet, of late, the tendency appeared to marry for love's sake and out of personal choice. This new and romantic ideal is so strong that all means are tried to obtain it, entailing elopements, suicides, notorious family dissensions. Hence the discussion for greater liberty and more social life which are quite opposed to the old social system of Confucius, that men and women should keep apart and marry for duty's sake and not for love.

"SKULL CUP" USED BY BYRON TO BE OFFERED AT AUCTION

Relic Used in Ceremonies of Order Founded by Poet Soon to Be Sold.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—An interesting Byron relic will soon be offered for sale at auction. This is the famous half of a human skull, discovered 20 years ago, finished with a silver band inscribed "skull drinking cup used by Lord Byron at Newstead Abbey."

While living at the abbey, Byron found a human skull of peculiar whiteness which he concluded had belonged to a friar. He sent the skull to London with orders to cut it in half and to have one half elegantly mounted.

On the return of the cup Byron instituted a new order at the abbey and constituted himself "Abbot of the Skull." Members of the order were provided with black gowns and when a chapter was held the "skull cup" was filled with claret and handed round to the members of the order.

MAN TO GO TO PRISON FOR KILLING ANOTHER IN 1912

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—After almost 10 years of freedom, Donald McIntosh is facing a term of from two to 10 years in the State penitentiary for killing James Blair Staley on Central street, on April 5, 1912. The jury returned a verdict of guilty of voluntary manslaughter and McIntosh was sentenced to the penitentiary. Jealousy was the cause of the tragedy, according to the testimony. Staley is alleged to have followed two women to the rear of the establishment then conducted by McIntosh. In the resulting quarrel Staley lost his life.

ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY "FIRST TIME" WORKS

New Symphonic Poem by Chicago Composer—Mme. Lashanska's Recital.

The principal musical events of the week will be the Symphony Orchestra's popular concert this afternoon at the Odeon, introducing Louis Cornell, pianist, a faculty member at the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston; Mme. Hulda Lashanska's song recital Tuesday night at the Odeon; a concert to be given Thursday afternoon, beginning at 4:15 o'clock, at Central High School by Mme. Ida Delledonne, harpist, John F. Kiburz, flutist, and Ellis Levy, violinist; and the regular symphony concerts of Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, at which, for the second time in the youthful season, there will be no soloist.

Rubinstein's B Minor concerto is the work chosen by Cornell for his St. Louis debut. He has played with several symphony orchestras and made successful appearances in recital. The program, which follows, includes the rhapsody, "Negro Carnival," by Carl Busch, which was played by the orchestra at its children's matinee in Kansas City:

Overture to Mignon..........Thomas
Second Movement, Andante cantabile, from Symphony in in E Minor, No. 5, Op. 64—Tschaikowsky
Concerto in B Minor, Op. 70—Rubinstein
1. Moderato assai.
2. Andante.
3. Allegro.
Rhapsody, Negro Carnival.....Busch
Selections from ballet suite from Sylvia..........Delibes
(a) Valse lento.
(b) Pizzicati.
March from Sigurd Jolsafar....Grieg

Will Sing Group of Lieder.

Mme. Lashanska, pleasantly remembered from a previous recital here and a successful appearance last season as a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, will give a group of lieder in German for the first time in St. Louis since the war, with the exception of the program of Strauss songs sung at the Odeon recently by Elizabeth Schumann. Mme. Lashanska was a pupil of Marcella Sembrich. Her program is announced as follows:

I.
Spiagge amate..........Gluck

New Work by Borowski.

Two "first time" numbers figure on this week's regular symphony concerts. They are a symphonic poem, "Le Printemps Passionne," by Felix Borowski of Chicago, after a verse of Verlaine; and the famous Theme and Variations from Schubert's string quartet in D Minor, based on his mastersong, "Tod und das Maedchen." The latter will be heard in an arrangement for the string instruments of the orchestra. The complete program follows:

Overture to Coriolanus, Op. 62—Beethoven
Symphony in E Minor, No. 5, Op. 95, From the New World..........Dvorak
(1) Adagio; Allegro molto.
(2) Largo.
(3) Scherzo: Molto vivace.
(4) Finale: Allegro con fuoco.
Theme and Variations from String Quartet in D Minor..........Schubert
(First time.)
Symphonic poem, The Passionate Spring..........Borowski
(First time.)
Capriccio Italien.......Tschaikowsky

Flute, Piano and Harp.

Mme. Delledonne, Kiburz and Levy are members of the Symphony Orchestra. Their numbers will include Frommer's "Serenade," for flute, violin and harp; Wormser's "Madrigal," for flute and harp; a Gavotte, by Domenico Delledonne, and a Minuet, by Boccherini, both for the three instruments; Lorenzi's "Gondoliera," for harp; the Adagio from Beethoven's sonata No. 14, for flute, violin and harp; the Prelude from Bach's sixth sonata, for solo violin; and Massenet's "Crepuscule" and Mozart's "Rondo alla Turca," both arranged for flute, harp and violin.

Next week's symphony concerts will present as soloist Bronislaw Hubermann, violinist, who will play Tschaikowsky's familiar Concerto in D Major.

PETROGRAD RENTS INCREASED

Wages Also Greatly Advanced Under New Economical Policy.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

REVAL, Esthonia, Nov. 11.—By official decree, according to a radio dispatch from Moscow, Petrograd rents have been increased by 2000 times the amount paid on Oct. 1.

Previous to last summer, no rents at all were paid under the Bolshevik regime. In accordance with the new economic policy, nominal rents were instituted, several months ago, persons paying perhaps 2000 rubles monthly for a large apartment. This sum, in American money, represented about two cents monthly, but was perhaps, one-fifth of the tenant's monthly income. The increase in rents was simultaneous with the institution of a new scale of greatly increased wages, some salaries being increased 500 or 1000 times.

And all he could say, was—"Well, good-bye, Jim—take keer of yourself"

Health First
POSTUM

THE POET, Riley, has told the story beautifully and well—how the old-fashioned father sent the boy out into the world. A heart full of affection and hope spoke only these words: "Well, good-bye, Jim; take keer of yourself."

Enough to say, enough to hope for, enough to do—take care of yourself—and there's the foundation of safety, the promise of success.

And how easy a thing to fail in! For instance, the common practice of coffee or tea-drinking administers to the system a dosing of drug whose harm has been pointed out repeatedly by medical men, sometimes in alarming terms—and whose effect is very commonly found in over-excited nerves, sleeplessness, irritability, indigestion, high blood pressure—loss of efficiency; failure to "get on."

The drug, caffeine in coffee and thein in tea, acts as a whip upon the nerves. Over-whipped nerves may run away, or break down,—like an over-whipped horse.

Thousands of people have found for themselves that they cannot safely drink coffee or tea. Some have had the news broken to them by their physicians, and many are complaining about symtoms of nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of alertness during business hours, and wondering what the cause may be—when the cause probably is tea or coffee. A great many people who know they cannot safely drink coffee at night still hope they can go on with it at other times, and dodge the damage.

How easy it is to fail to take care—and how hard the consequences usually are!

A quarter of a century ago Postum brought to the world's dining table that kindest wish of friendship and good will: "Take care of yourself." Cheerfully, pleasantly, happily, Postum has brought the message and shown the way to increasing thousands in every land—"Take care of yourself."

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, a cup of kindness from Nature's smiling grain fields—a table drink of charm without harm.

There's no drug in Postum—but plenty of satisfaction and comfort. Postum can be enjoyed by every member of the family—no need to draw the danger line and warn away the children as is usually thought necessary with coffee and tea. And no need to fear that Postum with the evening meal will rob the night of sleep—not Postum!

Postum is a friendly drink; always. And it fully satisfies. Those who have tried Postum as a relief from the ills of coffee and tea have kept on with Postum for itself. They have found better sleep, better feeling, better fitness—better health—and they do enjoy the taste of this splendid mealtime drink!

If you are not yet one of the great army of Postum users, you can make the experiment now, without a bit of trouble, and with no sacrifice to taste or comfort. Order Postum from your grocer today, or tell your waiter at the hotel or restaurant to serve it to you. You can get Postum wherever good food and drink are sold or served.

Have Postum prepared according to directions, make the test of its use for ten days; compare your feeling with the old experience—and see whether you want to turn back.

Postum points the way along the sunrise road—away from the risks—and gives you the message in which most of the good wishes of life are summed up—"Take care of yourself."

POSTUM comes in two forms: INSTANT POSTUM (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. POSTUM CEREAL (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

PRODUCTION INCREASED BY JORDAN FACTORY

Announcement of the new Jordan car, including a new and exclusive motor, has resulted in doubling the production of the Jordan factory at the season of the year when production usually falls off.

The Jordan company is regulating production in accordance with sales reported week by week by distributers. The production for October and November will exceed by 30 per cent the total production of the third quarter of the year.

ST. LOUIS TO CHICAGO BY AUTO IN 10½ HOURS

A trip from St. Louis to Chicago in 10½ hours' running time in a Dorris car last week is reported by J. T. Rumble, sales manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co., who made the trip accompanied by Mrs. Rumble, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Myer and Edward Ruge. The trip was made in a 6-80, 7-passenger Dorris touring car. The route taken was over the new concrete highway following the Lincoln highway to Marshall and then north over the Dixie highway to Chicago.

BYRNE APPOINTED MANAGER FOR PACKARD

Richard B. Mann, general manager of the Packard Motor Car Co. of Missouri, a direct branch of the Packard factory of Detroit, announced that Thomas H. Byrne, a pioneer in the automobile business in St. Louis, had been appointed manager of the passenger car department to succeed J. E. Hoyt, who has joined the Lincoln Housing Trust Co. as representative for Ohio.

Canadian Autos Carry Millions.

Four hundred and twenty thousand automobiles in Canada covered a road mileage in 1920 which exceeded 1,680,000,000 and registered a pasesnger mileage of not less than 6,920,000,000. The steam and electric railroads of the Dominion combined carried but 629,121,000, according to S. L. Squire of the Canadian Good Roads Association, as quoted in Canadian Motorist. The number of passengers carried is 252,000,000 annually.

GOOD ROADS ASSURED WITH FEDERAL AID

Now that Federal aid to the extent of $75,000,000 has been extended to the states for the building of roads, it is expected that there will be inaugurated within the near future a great highway-building program which will make American highways the peer of any in the world. Furthermore, under the provisions of the grant of Federal aid to the states, a certain portion of this fund is to be set aside for maintenance. Thus we shall have not only new roads and better roads, but we are assured that they will be maintained by the co-operation of State and Federal governments.

Commenting on the passage of the law authorizing the $75,000,000 grant to the states for building roads, R. C. Frampton, president of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, said: "There has been no more mportant step taken in recent years than this. We should have the finest system of highways in the world—and now such a system is assured. Good roads are vital in the internal economy of the nation because now, more than ever before, our economic life revolves around transportation.

"Good roads will bring communities closer together, tie up the producing and distributing centers with their markets, enlarge the opportunities for business, recreation, social life and contribute to the welfare of every citizen of every state. Another fact that cannot be overlooked or overestimated is that the present unemployment situation will be materially helped by the road-building program."

W. C. "FUZZY" ANDERSON ORGANIZES COMPANY

W. C. "Fuzzy" Anderson, veteran Ford branch manager at Chicago and St. Louis, who, several months ago, resigned as foreign sales executive of the Ford Motor Co., with headquarters in Paris and London, has re-established residence in St. Louis where he has organized the Anderson Sales Co. with offices in the New Market Bank Building, Olive and Sara streets.

The company will market Brevard light, a farm lighting installation of a standardized type to be produced in such quantities as to make possible its sade at an exceedingly low price.

Associated with Mr. Anderson as secretary of the company is Thomas G. May, also a well-known figure in the Ford sales organization, with an Eastern acquaintance and experience comparable to Mr. Anderson's in the central West.

An interesting feature of the Brevard Light installation is its similarity in some details with the motor and electrical equipment of a Ford car. This has been so followed out that service on any installation can be rendered by any competent Ford mechanic. Machines are being built in Detroit under the direction of William S. Knudson, former Ford production manager.

GENERAL MOTORS INCREASES PRODUCTION

General Motors' relative production, according to recent report, has forged ahead each quarter. In the September period corporation plants shipped 32 per cent of all passenger automobiles above the Ford class. Excluding Fords, there were 11,000 more passenger cars sold the third than the second 1921 quarter, and General Motors was responsible for 9000 of these. General Motors' sales the first quarter were 28 per cent of the total; 30 per cent the second quarter and 32 per cent the third.

Buick sold more than 31,000 cars the third quarter, about half the corporation's total.

Cadillac, the other best known unit, slumped in the third period from more than 3000 to slightly under 2000 cars. Chevrolet sales the second and third quarter quadrupled the first three months' total of 5000. The Scripps-Booth plant, which is being disposed of, sold less than 9000 cars last year, against 36,000 for Oakland and 25,000 for Olds.

Automatically opens after the radiator temperature has passed 130° F.

Shuts out the cold and holds the warmth.

A WINTERFRONT reduces the use of the choke and formation of carbon.

Increases mileage on gasoline and conserves lubricating oil.

Maximum driving power is quickly attained and Winter driving made more comfortable by the use of the WINTERFRONT.

Keeps your radiator and cooling system at proper temperature for most efficient operation of motor. Does not allow water to get hot enough to evaporate anti-freeze. Improves lubrication of engine by keeping oil at proper temperature and prevents unburned fuel from getting into crank-case. The motor kept warm by the WINTERFRONT is easily started, eliminating strain on the battery.

The WINTERFRONT can be had for practically all makes of automobiles having a flat front radiator. Can be attached by anyone in less than five minutes.

New Case-Hardened Crankshaft
Triples Previous Bearing Life

CASE-HARDENED CRANKSHAFT! This is only one of a score of improvements in the Franklin of today, but an important one, not only to the Franklin, but to the industry as a whole. The Franklin crankshaft will now outlast three ordinary shafts.

It has always run more smoothly and lasted longer—it has seven main bearings, instead of the usual three. But now—triple the usual distance before taking up bearings! This source of trouble, delay and expense almost eliminated! Once again the Franklin is first—no other car possesses this valuable feature.

Elsewhere, too, endurance and efficiency have been increased. Simplified ignition system. Adjustable spring pivot bolts. Larger drive shaft, universal joints and important bearings. Automatic lubrication of valves and steering yoke pins. Drop-forged load-carrying parts—strength in every fibre.

Starting has been made easier by improved electric vaporizer and new starter with strong turning power. Perfected silent chain starter drive, together with the new patented Long-type aluminum pistons—a real advance, insures quiet operation.

Rear springs have been lengthened. Service brake is the most efficient yet designed.

Come and see today's Franklin. These recent advances again lead the motoring world. Any Franklin dealer will explain them and the other points. A few minutes' study of these improvements will be valuable to you later on in selecting your next car.

HAYNES ENGINEERS DEVELOP VOLATILIZER

Haynes engineers have just announced an improvement in the Haynes engine through the development of the Haynes volatilizer, which results in a decided increase in motive power with much greater economy in fuel consumption.

The volatilizer was produced especially for the newly developed Haynes 75 motor.

Through the operation of the volatilizer the liquid fuel is broken up into atoms, which thoroughly mix with the air charge, thus making a gas which is highly volatile and which gives maximum explosive force when ignited. The motor exhaust is led around the intake manifold to produce a higher temperature where the gas from the carburetor enters the inlet manifold, thus producing a fuel condition which is ideal for instant ignition and results in the attainment of extraordinary explosive force.

AUTO MAKES AN IDEAL XMAS GIFT

People are paying less attention to design and more to construction in the selection of a motor car.

The wave of economy which is running over the nation is reflected not so much in less buying as in a more intelligent analysis of the things for which the money is spent.

The car buyer is realizing that when he buys a car he is actually buying miles instead of a machine, and he wants more evidence on performance than on any other point.

This situation is emphasizing the value of dealer responsibility, for no matter what car it is, the local dealer is the one locally responsible for its behavior.

It is a good sign for car owners and dealers who are in business to stay.

More than ever this year will automobiles be given as Yuletide gifts.

A good many people have been waiting for Christmas to buy a car. A good many others after a little Christmas shopping in other directions are buying one gift for the whole family.

It's a fact that one can buy a fine motor car today for the price of a lady's good fur coat and there are quite a few ladies who figure that they won't need a new coat if they have a sedan.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY HOLDING ITS OWN

Sales of parts and equipment by approximately 300 representative manufacturers selling to the principal car and truck makers fell 5 per cent during October. At the same time the total amount of notes outstanding dropped a little less than 6 per cent.

These are the two main features of the official monthly survey made public today by the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' Association.

Credit managers and financial executives who contributed the figures and reports from which this monthly chart of conditions is plotted commented on the fact that in view of the normal seasonal conditions during October the figures are not at all surprising.

The concensus of opinion seems to be that the improvement will be steady, fundamental and, hence, somewhat gradual. Although no sharp spurt is expected overnight, most students of conditions in the automotive industry look for a substantial upward trend immediately after the automobile shows in New York and Chicago next January.

We Announce a New Tire Branch
Lindell and Locust Streets

Twelve years ago—after fourteen years of fine-rubber experience—Miller started to build a super-grade tire. In five years they were building what was then considered a very remarkable tire.

In the next seven years, they more than doubled their annual mileage. Since 1914, they have cut the cost per mile in two. Miller growth has been steady and substantial with no unnatural forcing of the market. Today Miller stands among the first. Comparison resulting in favor of Millers is solely responsible for this growth.

The Miller originated uniformity in tires. It is the tire with the toughest tread, a light, flexible, uniform casing. Tire after tire wears alike. Inspectors with years of experience select the finest fabrics. Only long staple cotton is passed. Experts buy only the highest grade rubber. Then every batch is tested. Varying types are selected to exactly meet requirements. Chemists test every mixture.

Uniform construction is secured by a system of factory inspection and penalties. Both maker and inspector sign every tire. Both are penalized if one comes back.

Now ten times more are used than in 1914. Today you can expect a Miller under like conditions to outrun any other tire.

Users who want Miller results will find there is only one way to get them—specify the

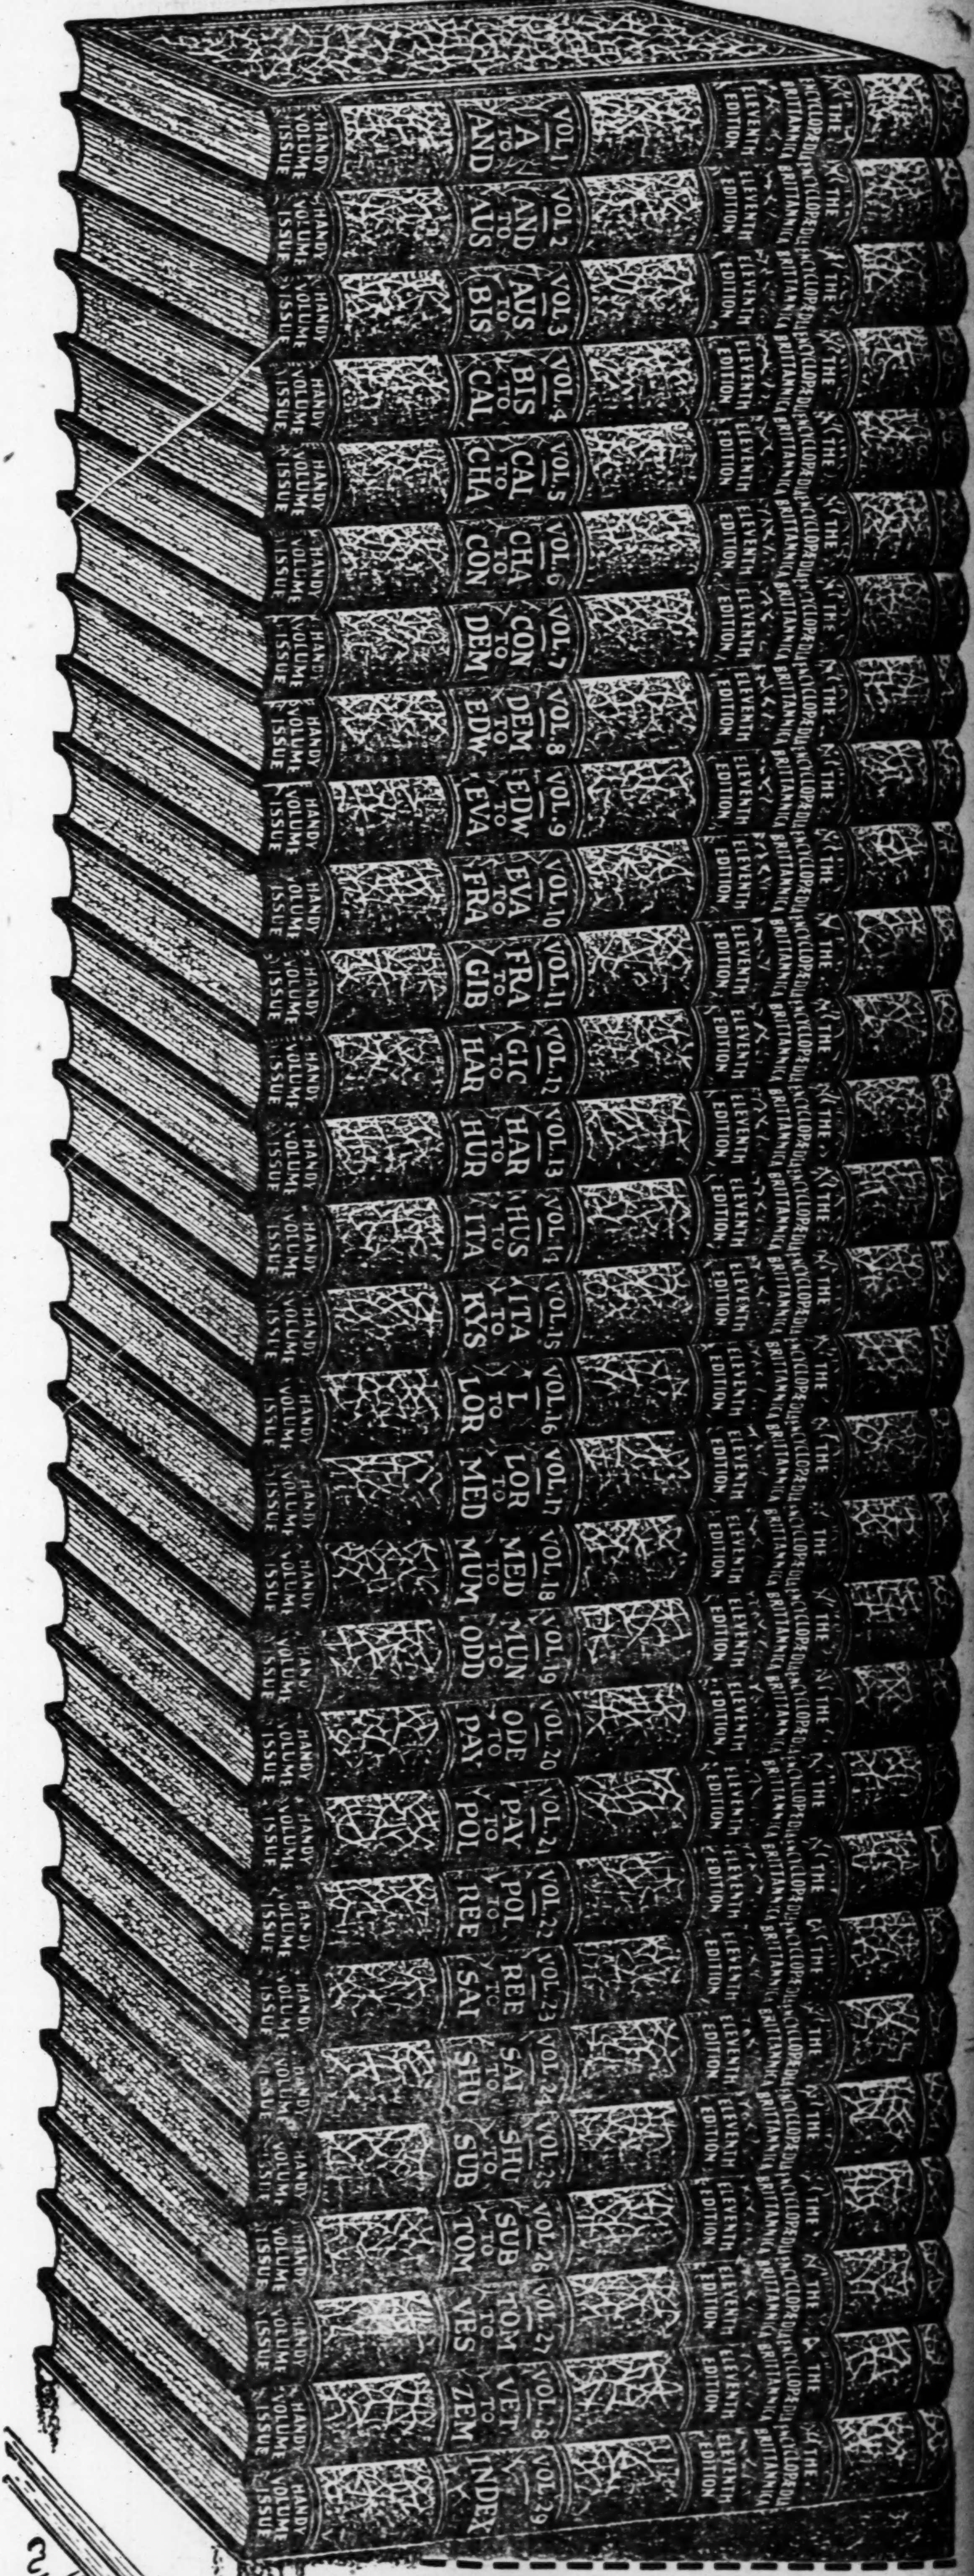
THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

WHAT has been the lasting heritage of the war? In brief, a nation of keener thinking, knowledge-demanding people. The war had a profound effect on the 100,000,000 inhabitants of this country. It carried their interests from the town or city in which they live across the water into foreign countries, to every part of the world. They became no longer content to know only their neighbor across the street, but they wanted to learn of their neighbors in all nations of the earth. The war created in the people a thirst for knowledge, world wide in compass. The war instilled in the people the habit of thinking broadly in world wide terms, of wanting information on subjects they never dreamed of before, of thinking more deeply on the problems of the day. Over the two and a half years since the war, during the political, social, economic adjustment in this country, this habit of the people has grown stronger and stronger until today there has never been manifest such eagerness among the people for knowledge—knowledge on every conceivable subject under the sun.



The Britannica Goes Hand in Hand With the Awakened World

Where can people find the means to satisfy this demand for knowledge? The greatest reservoir of knowledge in existence—authoritative and comprehensive—is the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the most widely known, the most reverenced—the resource of thousands of men and women, seekers of knowledge in every generation for a century and a half. It is the book of the hour to satisfy the increased demand for knowledge by the awakened people of today.

Are You Keeping Abreast of the Times?

Today as never before the man and woman needs every ounce of knowledge he or she can obtain in order to cope with the present business, political, social and economic readjustment. Business particularly has been facing new and strange conditions, endeavoring to get back to a normal basis. In this tremendous readjustment it has been the men with the broad foundation of knowledge who, as executives and workers in our industries, have been able to take the responsibility and have risen speedily to positions of greater power and greater remuneration. To the business man, manufacturer, the worker in the industries, the Britannica will furnish information of practical, helpful and comprehensive character, and furnish a knowledge which will give to the man broader insight into his work and the problems of today.

The man who holds his job today during this readjustment period is he who is particularly fitted for his work, the man who knows more than his fellows. Knowledge is always above par in the market and the easiest commodity in the world to sell, as an employer will gladly pay your price if you have the knowledge to deliver. An investment in the Britannica will pay you many times over in dividends of knowledge, pleasure and satisfaction.

The Most Authoritative Work in the World

The Britannica has had a long and enviable career, and has grown in authority and esteem from generation to generation until it occupies the position today as the great reference book, ahead of any other in any country or in any language. It has had as its contributors a host of the greatest experts in the entire world throughout the 150 years of its existence. When you read an article in the Britannica, therefore, you feel confident that the information is reliable and authoritative, for the Britannica is the product of the wisest minds of the day, each a great specialist in the particular subject on which he is furnishing an article in the Britannica.

The Britannica discusses in a way that you can understand every branch of science, industry, literature, art, religion, inventions and engineering, history and race development, architecture, astronomy, chemistry, sociology, education, steam, electricity, geology and geography, biography, law and physics. You and your family will find in the Britannica a liberal education.

A Means of Self Development—A Home University

In placing the Eleventh Edition before the public, the Press of the University of Cambridge announced: "The Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is now offered to the public by the University of Cambridge in the hope and belief that it will be found to be a trustworthy guide to sound learning, and an instrument of culture of world wide influence." Seldom has a hope been so quickly and completely realized. Thousands of owners have found the Britannica an indispensable means of self education. An instructor at Princeton has written that the Britannica has become the "collection of books" which Carlyle might term "the true university;" a teacher in a business college that "by its purchase I have secured access to a university education;" the president of an insurance company that "universally possessed it ought to educate the race. It is the people's university."

What Is to Come?

How shall America readjust her industrial conditions? Is the present League of Nations likely to succeed? Will the cost of living fall abruptly? Will wages continue high? Is the fall of the Bolshevist regime in Russia imminent? Will Germany fulfill its treaty obligations?

By means of the extraordinary articles in the Encyclopaedia Britannica on economics, industries, politics, government, labor and capital you will be able to obtain a clear insight into the problems of today.

What the Britannica Will Do for You

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study—a teacher who is master of his subject and tells what he knows in clear, simple language—a teacher who is always at your command.

It will give you the answers to the thousand and one questions that the morning paper, sermons and books prompt in every active mind. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

It will give you the history of every country in the world, every race, every city and the lives of all the men and women who have left their mark upon the world.

It will tell you more about every city, town, mountain range, lake, sea, desert, river, and every other place of interest than you would learn by visiting them.

FORD AND EDISON GET OVATION IN ALABAMA

Newspaper Men Are Told Former's Interest in Muscle Shoals Is Not Commercial.

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Ala., Dec. 3.—Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, and Thomas A. Edison late today inspected the skeleton of the great Wilson dam, around which the former proposes to build an industrial plant.

On arrival here, Ford and Edison proceeded to Wilson Dam, driving through the streets, where they received an ovation. En route to Florence, Ford talked freely to newspaper men and emphasized that he had not changed his original bid for the Muscle Shoals project and that his visit was principally to allow Edison to visualize the project in its entirety and to verify the original figures submitted by Ford's engineers.

The main point of difference between him and the Government, Ford said, lay in the cost of completion of the Wilson Dam. The estimates of the army engineers, he explained, range from $42,000,000 to $55,000,000, whereas he contends that his original figure of $20,000,000 is ample. The automobile manufacturer declared that his interest in Muscle Shoals was not commercial.

"We want Muscle Shoals," he said, "because we want a job—and we want to help provide cheap fertilizer for the farmers of the nation."

When asked what he knew about nitrates, Ford said, "I don't know a thing about nitrates. Mr. Edison is here to take care of that. We might make aluminum. We might make cloth, we might make steel or we might make automobile parts—we won't need nearly all the power we will have to make nitrates.

"I am down here at the request of Secretary Weeks," Ford added. "I am figuring for the Government and I know that if this dam is completed it will confer a great benefit on the whole South. We want to build the dam. We know that we can do it cheaper than the Government could and the Government knows it, too. We can get all the labor we need on the spot. It may be necessary to bring in skilled labor as our industries are developed and our plans take shape."

"I will make the only report made on the inspection of Mr. Edison and myself to the Government," he said.

Asked if he expected any trouble in getting the approval of Congress, Ford flashed:

"Yes, I do—the trusts and the international Jews will oppose me."

Newspaper men who accompanied Ford on his trip from Nashville to Florence, said thousands greeted the two at every center of population, and each little cross road shouted a greeting.

The Ford party comprises Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, and Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford. They plan to leave the Muscle Shoals district Monday afternoon and to stop over in Nashville for a short time, to inspect the Old Hickory powder plant.

U. S. Courts Close 10 Chicago Bars.

By the Associated Press.

MRS. GEORGE JAY GOULD LEFT $9000 TO THREE EMPLOYES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The loyalty even in death of Mrs. George Jay Gould to the faithful servants who for so long have been in the service of the Gould family is evidenced in the terms of her will, which were made known today.

To George Philip Langford, "my faithful employe at my New York home," Mrs. Gould bequeathed $5000 outright. To her personal maid, Margaret Meicher, she left $2000. And to William Bishop, "my faithful employe at my Lakewood home," she gave $2000.

The bulk of the estate goes to her husband. Her daughters, Mrs. Anthony Drexel Jr. of Philadelphia, Lady Decies, formerly Helen Vivien Gould; Mrs. Carroll L. Wainwright, formerly Edith C. Gould, and Gloria Gould are to divide with little Edith Kingdon Drexel, Mrs. Gould's granddaughter, the Gould jewelry, up to a value of $10,000 each.

The will was probated at the Ocean County Courthouse at Tom River, N. J., Friday afternoon, by Surrogate Grant. George Jay Gould, her husband; Jay Gould, one of her sons, and Charles Prentice Noyes, a friend, are designated as executors of the estate.

The will was drawn more than a year ago. Among the most interesting features of the will is the gift of two Messonier paintings by Mrs. Gould to Julius W. Noyes, who had been a close friend. Property, including the Gould home on Fifth avenue, goes to her husband.

Two trust funds are created, one of $25,000 and the other of $50,000, and the remainder of the estate is left to her children collectively.

900 DOUGHBOYS FROM RHINE FORCES DEPART FROM COBLENZ

Ship That Sails for U. S. With Men Today Also Will Carry 500 Soldiers' Bodies.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Dec. 3.—To the tune of "Stolzenfels on the Rhine," an old German waltz, played by a lone cornetist, a troop train with 900 Americans homeward bound, left here today for Antwerp, where the men will sail Sunday. The famous Stolzenfels Castle, near Coblenz, has been one of the nearby resorts popular with the soldiers.

The vessel on which the Americans will sail will carry the bodies of 500 Americans from France, and several carloads of Christmas presents from soldiers who remain with the American army of occupation to relatives and friends at home.

Eight hundred of the soldiers are returning as casuals. They are accompanied by 10 officers. Fifteen genera, prisoners are with the party, while a number of soldiers, who missed last week's train, are under guard. The passenger list also will include 15 soldiers' wives, who married the Americans in the Rhineland, and seven ex-service men who have been in France.

Just before the train departed a flutter of excitement was caused when the German police chased 100 frauleins out of the railroad yards, denying them the privilege of saying good-bye and delivering bouquets, cakes and various packages to the departing soldiers.

The next consignment of 800 soldiers will sail from Antwerp about Dec. 20 on the American steamer Crook, which will go to San Francisco by way of Manila.

VAN DRIVERS REJECT WAGE CUT

The Furniture and Van Drivers' and Helpers' Union, members of which have been asked to accept a 25 per cent reduction in wages by the moving and storage companies, met yesterday and rejected the proposal but agreed to remain at work pending further conferences of their wage committee and representatives of the employing companies this week.

About 200 men are affected in the negotiations. Their contract expired Oct. 28, when the employers requested that the men accept reduced wages. Several conferences since have failed to result in an agreemnt and some of the men yesterday called for a strike vote. This was averted by Thomas Coyne, leader of the men, who expressed the opinion that further conferences would result in an amicable adjustment of the situation.

LOTTERY SCHEME OF CHICAGO PAPERS STOPPED BY HAYS

"Smiling" Campaign, in Which Large Sums of Money Were Given Away, Halted by Postoffice Order

PRIZES AWARDED AFTER DRAWINGS

Coupons, Carrying Numbers, Distributed Throughout City, Leading to Heavy Purchases of the Papers.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Donation of $300,000 to holders of "lucky" "cheer" and "smile" coupons by two Chicago morning newspapers was halted today upon request of Will Hays, Postmaster-General, and Charles F. Clyne, Federal District Attorney.

Clyne asserted that while he did not know Federal laws had been violated, each paper was in imminent danger of running afoul the lottery section. The papers had steered clear of the Federal law against lotteries by keeping out of the mails all papers containing references to the drawings for prizes and the scheme had increased the circulation of the two papers by approximately 500,000 in less than one month's time, it was claimed.

The first newspaper to start the enterprise offered to give away $25,000 to induce Chicagoans to smile. Serial numbers were issued, four on each coupon, and distributed broadcast and the winners were determined by drawings. Federal, State and city officers were among those announced as drawers of winning numbers. All that was required of the holders of "lucky" numbers was that they call at the newspaper office, receive their money, and smile.

Smiling Becomes Popular.

The "smile" campaign grew so in popularity that in less than two weeks the newspaper announced that $100,000 would be distributed. Circulation mounted by leaps and bounds because those who sought to profit by luck bought the papers containing announcement of the winning numbers.

Then the second newspaper took a hand. Virtually admitting that its competitor's "smiles" were no joke, it announced in effect that so long as the enterprise was countenanced by Federal authorities, the people might as well have something worth while to be cheerful about, and doubled the amount, offering to coupon holders $200,000 in a "Christmas cheer" campaign organized along the same lines as the "smile" enterprise.

So, for the last two weeks, the newspapers have been vieing with one another in giving money away. Sums ranging from $5 to $5000 have been handed out to lucky holders of "Smile" and "Christmas Cheer" coupons while single prizes as high as $10,000 were offered the unlikely holders of coupons with two winning numbers on them. Hundreds of numbers were drawn each day, sometimes by Indians, and again by Chinese, or even children around which a story could be built.

New Plan is Prevented.

Meanwhile, evening contemporaries were becoming worried. One evening newspaper today solved the problem by printing the winning numbers drawn by both morning papers and advising the public to get the winning numbers without buying two papers. This scheme to snatch away the fruits of the chance promoters was nipped before it could bear results by the order of Clyne.

Coupons were supplied free to business houses and by them given away with tobacco, razors, sewing machines and even were being wrapped with loaves of bread. Practically every time a Chicagoan entered a restaurant, barber shop, a store or a club, he was handed a coupon. Many had gathered hundreds and the task of comparing the numbers with the winning lists had become real work.

So it is that District Attorney Clyne's order, which tomorrow will take the place of the list of lucky numbers in morning newspapers will cause the smile to vanish and the yuletide cheer to fade from the faces of countless coupon-hoarding Chicagoans.

12,000

Our population of almost 12,000 is made up largely of successful St. Louis business men, who have discovered in Webster Groves the ideal environment in which to raise their family. We have four splendid modern grade schools with an enrollment of about 1600 pupils and a modern high school building with an enrollment of approximately 500 pupils—all up to the minute in personnel and equipment. No pool rooms, no loafing places. Our Legion of Honor, boy scouts, public library and reading room, church brotherhoods and various other organizations see that the child and growing boy is kept busy and interested in clean and honest activities.

PASTOR BARS SHORT SKIRTS AND LOW NECKS AT WEDDINGS

Rules at Chattanooga Church Say Brides Must Not "Expose the Calf, Much Less the Knee."

By the Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 3.—The Rev. W. C. Robertson of Christ Episcopal Church of this city, today issued rules governing the attire of brides and wedding attendants, which, among other things, say that "skirts must not be higher than where the spring of the calf of the leg begins and be wide enough to allow of genuflecting before the blessed sacrament * * *, without exposing the calf, much less the knee."

The pastor intimated that anyone violating the rules would not be allowed to take part in a wedding ceremony in the church. Following are the five regulations promulgated and which will be sent to prospective brides and their maids:

"1. No dress called technically an 'evening dress' will be allowed—that is, no extra lowness in the neck, but generally what women now wear upon the street—a modern 'V,' round or square neck with a complete back and front.

"2. Skirts must not be higher than where the spring of the calf of the leg begins and be wide enough to allow of genuflecting before the blessed sacrament, which is the custom of this church, without exposing the calf, much less the knee.

"3. Sleeves must not be shorter than the elbows.

"4. A real covering of hat or veil must be left for the head.

"5. If transparent or semitransparent material is used, sufficient lining must be used."

MEMORIAL TO STANFORD WHITE AT LIBRARY OF UNIVERSITY

Doors Designed by Son of Man Killed by Harry Thaw to Be Unveiled Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—A pair of bronze doors, presented as a memorial to Stanford White, the architect who was shot by Harry K. Thaw, will be unveiled at Gould Memorial Library, New York University, next Saturday, it was announced tonight.

The doors, which will grace one of the finest examples of White's architectural genius, were designed by his son, Laurence Grant White, and contain 48 separately molded panels, done in Italian renaissance style. They are presented by a committee of prominent architects, artists and business men.

Unveiling of the door is in line with the plan to create in Gould Memorial Library an appropriate memorial to American artists, sculptors and architects. An "architect's corner" has been established in the lower hallway, while provision is made in the main reading room for 16 busts of painters and sculptors.

DR. LORENZ MAY CALL OFF PROPOSED TRIP TO CHICAGO

Surgeon Refuses to Comment on Refusal of Hospitals to Invite Him to Clinics.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the Vienna surgeon who has been performing bloodless operations on crippled children in this city, may be compelled to cancel his visit to Chicago, on account of ill health, his secretary, Dr. Walter I. Galland, stated tonight. The surgeon was said to be suffering from nervous indigestion, and his condition, it was announced, has necessitated postponement of clinics which were to have been held next week at the hospital for joint diseases.

Dr. Lorenz refused today to comment on the reported action of several Chicago hospitals in declining to invite him to their clinics.

"His plans are upset now," Dr. Galland said, "and he is unable to say whether the proposed visit to Chicago will be canceled or not. Much depends on the state of his health."

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Twelve orthopedic surgeons issued a joint statement today declaring they would not co-operate in receiving Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the Vienna surgeon, who is expected to visit Chicago soon. It was announced unofficially that a number of Chicago hospitals had decided not to invite Dr. Lorenz to their clinics.

The statement said that the American medical profession looked with disfavor on newspaper publicity of the type of Dr. Lorenz has received.

The Hospital Committee of the County Board of Commissioners will decide Monday on a request from friends here of Dr. Lorenz that he be permitted to conduct a clinic at the Cook County Hospital during his Chicago visit.

PULITZER RACES FOR DETROIT

Airplane Contest Probably Will Be Held Along With Regatta.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 3.—The Pulitzer trophy airplane races probably will be held here next September along with the power boat regatta and the Harmsworth trophy race, Col. Sidney D. Waldon, president of the Detroit Aviation Society, announced today. Col. Waldon said he had been assured by Caleb Bragg of New York, chairman of the contest committee of the Aero Club of America, that the Pulitzer event would be awarded to Detroit.

The 1922 air race meet, it was said, would include the Curtiss-Marine trophy event, to be raced on a triangular course over Lake St. Clair.

Man Held Up in Webster Groves.

MICHIGAN U. CUP FOR HIGH SCHOOL TROPHY

Will Be Presented by Michigan Alumni for Basketball Championship Winner.

A silver cup, given by the University of Michigan Alumni Association of St. Louis, to be a trophy in basket ball, will be presented to the High School League in exercises at five high schools tomorrow and Tuesday.

The exercises at Central High School will be tomorrow morning, beginning at 9:05; at Yeatman High School, begining at 10:10; at Cleveland High School from 12:55 to 1:40 p. m., and at McKinley High School from 2:15 to 3 p. m. At Soldan High School the exercises will begin at 9 a. m. Tuesday.

The exercises at each school, lasting 45 or 50 minutes, will consist of talks on the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, which claims a larger number of alumni than any other American university. Two hundred and thirty members are enrolled in the St. Louis alumni organization. Three high school principals, Douglas of Central, Miller of McKinley and Slater of Cleveland, are former students of the University of Michigan.

William R. Schneider, president of the local alumni organization, John Lavan of the St. Louis Cardinals, and H. F. Pratt of Central High School will be among the speakers. The Michigan song, "Yellow and Blue," will be sung by the students at each school, followed by the school song, and the Michigan yell will be given.

The cup is inscribed with the figures of basket ball players, and its reverse side has a space for the name of the school which shall win it in this school year. The school which first wins the cup five times will retain it. Similar trophies have been provided to the high schools by the Yale University Alumni for football and by those of Cornell University for track athletics.

John A. Skiff Succumbs to Heart Attack in New Orleans.

Telegraphic advices from New Orleans yesterday announced the death of John A. Skiff, 46 years old, manufacturer's agent of 5849 Etzel avenue, who fell dead in the St. Charles Hotel there. Heart disease is said to have caused his death. The family, consisting of the widow, Mrs. Angie L. Skiff, and a 17-year-old son, Kirby, had received no details of his death last night.

Kirby Skiff said his father left St. Louis Nov. 15 for a southern trip in behalf of his concern, the Geuder, Paeschke & Frey Co., of Milwaukee. Skiff maintained an office in the Odd Fellows building and at intervals left the city to see his customers. Skiff came to St. Louis 18 years ago from Covington, Ky.

HEARST-BRISBANE FIGHT AGAINST DISARMAMENT BECOMES MORE VIOLENT

Opposition Increases in Newspapers They Control as Association of Nations Plan Develops.

From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The attitude of the Hearst papers, all of which supported President Harding in the campaign, toward the arms conference seems to differ in degree of hostility as the talk for an association of nations becomes more or less confident. From the beginning this group of papers, under the guidance of Arthur Brisbane and William R. Hearst, has been in opposition to any conference with any nation of Europe or any agreement that would lessen the military power of the United States. But when it began to look as though Secretary Hughes intended to try to organize an association of nations which would ultimately absorb the League of Nations, the Brisbane-Hearst opposition became more violent and Mr. Brisbane, in his "Today" editorial featured daily on the first page of the American and numerous other papers throughout the country who buy the column, began to admonish the President that his great majority in the last election was solely a protest against the League of Nations and this country would not have that under any circumstances.

"Spread-Eagle" Editorial.

At the beginning of the conference Hearst wrote a "spread-eagle" editorial, signing it "Americus," which was sent out as a letter of instructions to his editors and printed and commented upon in all of his papers. This editorial protested against any alliance of any kind with any other nation of the world, with "decaying Europe" or "decayed Asia."

The opposition is carried on more by quiet insinuations against the good faith of England and Japan, especially, but of all the other nations when the cartoonists take a hand in it. It is not nearly so virulent, however, as the fight against the League of Nations.

Phillip Francis, the Hearst editorial writer credited with most of the anti-British editorials in the Hearst papers, is at Washington as an editorial correspondent and the tone of his dispatch has always questioned the good faith of both England and Japan.

In his dispatch printed Thursaay morning Francis made the surprising statement that the British library of information at 44 Whitehall street, this city, was merely a headquarters for British propaganda in this country, and that its director, Cuthbert Hicks, had by mistake sent to him a letter intended for L. F. Rushbrook Williams, who is with the Prince of Wales in India.

Williams' duty, Francis avers, is to manufacture propaganda showing the beneficence of British rule in India. In the Williams note, sent by mistake to Francis, the latter states, Hicks was informing Williams that he (Hicks) had sent Francis a sarcastic note, accompanied by one of the Williams articles on India. The letter then went on, Francis avers, and instructed Williams to search carefully in India for evidence of Japanese activity in stirring up the Indians against England. Francis used the incident to support a claim that England is seeking one of three objectives: First, an alliance with the United States to wipe Japan off the map; second, a triple agreement between the United States, England and Japan for the control of the East, or, as a last alternative, a tighter alliance with Japan in the hope that together they could whip the United States and have the East to themselves.

Editorial in American.

This is an excerpt from the American's editorial Saturday:

"What has the armament conference accomplished? One thing, and one thing only—it has committed the United States to the reduction of its naval forces. It has obtained from the United States a pledge to reduce the power of the American navy, to forego any opportunity for naval supremacy, to accept for 10 years this country's naval inferiority to its naval rivals in the Pacific.

"Only that and nothing more. It is represented from Washington as a diplomatic victory. Another such victory and this country will be sunk below the level of a second rate Power."

Quotations From Hearst Newspapers Cause Disturbances in Japan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOKIO, Dec. 3.—Cables printed in Japanese newspapers quoting Hearst newspapers and other journals in the United States that seek to defeat the plans of the Arms Limitation Conference, have caused considerable political disturbance in Japan. These cables create the impression in some quarters that most Americans are anti-Japanese and have resulted in some loud demands in the Japanese press that the delegates from Tokio insist on the acceptance of Japan's naval program.

Amherst Professor Makes Address.

Dr. Edwin A. Grosvenor, professor of government and international law at Amherst College, last night addressed the St. Louis Amherst Alumni Association at the University Club on "The college man and his opportunity for service during present business conditions and reconstruction period."

U. S. CONFIDENT OF TOKIO'S APPROVAL OF NAVY PROPOSAL

Several Days Required for Recommendation of Delegation in Washington to Be Acted Upon.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Absolute confidence prevails among the highest officials of the United States Government that the Japanese Cabinet at Tokio will approve the American naval program as recommended by the Japanese delegation following the conference between Secretary Hughes, Arthur Balfour and Baron

The situation will remain unchanged for at least three or four days while the lengthy cablegrams sent by the Japanese delegation early today journey to Tokio over the slow cable routes of the Pacific.

Those who have been unable to understand the apparent slowness of the negotiations at Washington need only make inquiries concerning the exact time that it takes to get a reply from Tokio by cable in these days of congested communication. In the first place, the Japanese put their messages in code. To put a cablegram of ordinary length in code takes several hours. To encipher a message describing in detail so important a conference as that which Messrs. Balfour, Hughes and Kato had on Friday, probably took most of Friday night. The cable experts say that in ordinary times it takes at least 36 hours for a reply to be obtained to a message sent to Tokio. While Japanese Government messages are given preference, the chances are it will take at least 36 hours for all the Japanese cablegrams to reach Tokio, when another delay is encountered, for the messages have then to be decoded and placed before the Japanese Cabinet for consideration.

Not Completed in Haste.

Matters of such moment as the naval ratio that shall exist for the next 10 years between the United States, Japan and Great Britain are not disposed of quickly and the chances are that all of Monday and probably Tuesday will be consumed in Cabinet council at Tokio. Then the decision must be put in code and be sent over the long Pacific cables, which have relays at two or three stations en route from Japan to the United States. On arrival here, the important reply must be decoded and carefully examined.

Sometimes a garbled cable has to be, in part, repeated.

In any event, it is not expected that any decisive development on the naval ratio program will be known before the middle of next week, when a plenary session may be held to announce to the public the conclusions that have been reached.

Meanwhile the Japanese delegation here is powerless to act. The impression prevails that Baron Kato has recommended to his Government that the American naval ratio be accepted. This statement is based upon the optimistic manner of Secretary Hughes after his meeting with the heads of the British and Japanese delegations and also upon certain intimations given in official quarters that matters were proceeding favorably. Those who have heard Secretary Hughes explain the American position on naval ratios and who know what he has said in the private conferences feel confident that any favorable tone given to the situation at this time can only be based upon the fact that the American delegation has "stood pat" and insisted upon an unqualified "yes" or "no" before going much further in the discussion of naval matters.

Just how much of a part the question of fortifications or the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance played in the meeting between Baron Kato, Secretary Hughes and Arthur Balfour, is difficult to conjecture, but unofficial information is to the effect that neither of these problems was taken up in detail. Hughes would never discuss fortifications in detail without referring the matter to the committee on naval experts.

It is quite possible that Baron Kato did ask Hughes several questions, particularly as to what America's intentions in general were with respect to the building up of present fortifications in the Pacific. Such a question Secretary Hughes could readily answer with the statement that of course the United States in reducing her naval strength was not planning to build up naval fortifications greater than those she already possessed.

This could be seized upon with gratification by the Japanese delegates as an informal assurance warranting Japanese in accepting the American naval ratio in entirey. Hughes would not hesitate to remove any apprehensions the Japanese may have had if it led to a clearing of the air.

But of one thing this correspondent has been assured. The United States delegation has not felt it advisable to depart in any sense from the fundamentals laid down in the original Hughes program and anything said since then which might be construed as an assurance is simply an explanation of the American Government's intentions.

Calculations of Experts.

Some experts have gone so for as to calculate that a pledge from the United States not to build up present fortifications is as good to the Japanese as geting the 10-10-7 ratio which they have been seeking. If this is true, the Japanese are attaching far more importance to fortifications than the American naval experts, who admit that the present fortifications in the Far East are hardly effective even for a navy such as America was planning before she proposed the conference plan of reduction of naval armament.

ILLINOIS.—The buyer of property at a tax sale in Illinois may obtain a tax deed after two years from the County Clerk. If the original owner did not redeem it within two years of the first sale, the redemption is void. In that case the first purchaser can redeem it within two years of the second sale.

ANXIOUS TEACHER.—(1) If you die without making a will your estate will be divided according to the provisions of the Missouri State law which is too long to quote here. (2) Your life insurance would be divided the same as the other property. (3) We think that if it is one of the rules of the School Board to keep a certain per cent of the salaries of the teachers, it is binding, in view of the provisions in the contract. (4) A person living in another state may not be appointed the executor of your will in Missouri.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

SUNDAY READER.—You need local examination and treatment. Repeat your question and enclose a stamped addressed envelope.

BUDDY.—Pyorrhoea is claimed by many first-class dentists to be incurable; some claim it is curable. Local treatment is always necessary and most dentists combine this with internal medication.

DISCOURAGED.—Any one of a number of abnormal conditions can exist in the gland you mention. It is not by any means always an infection which causes it to enlarge. It is difficult to imagine how an odor could come from the gland, situated as it is, although the secretions from it, when massaged out, may be offensive. The cure, of course, would depend on the condition existing, and not knowing this condition we cannot express an opinion.

A SUBSCRIBER.—The use of the ointment for infection of the skin is of no use unless every direction is carefully followed. Itch is a parasitic infection of the skin by the itch mite. It is as a rule, readily amendable to treatment carefully and conscientiously carried out, with care as to the prevention of reinfection, which readily occurs. Proceed as follows: (1) Provide clean underclothing, clean bedclothing and clean night clothing which is to be used and not changed, until the completion of the treatment. Then all of the above mentioned clothing must be again replaced by clean clothing. That used during the treatment must be removed and well boiled, to prevent reinfection, and the outer clothing ironed by a very hot iron, especially about the neck and the ends of the sleeves. (2) Take a hot bath of soap and water, using and rubbing well with a coarse rag, to break down any lesions on the skin in which the itch might be lodged. No other bath is to be taken until the completion of the treatment. (3) Rub thoroughly into every inch of the skin below the chin night and morning for five consecutive days the following ointment, which should be well made and smooth: 4 drachms of washed sulphur, 4 drachms of balsam of Peru, 2 ounces of vaseline made into smooth ointment. (4) The night or morning following the fifth rubbing take a hot soap and water bath, after which all clean clothing should be used. It should be born in mind that the ointment may for a few days occasion an itching and time should be allowed for this to pass. If a cure has not been effected the treatment should be repeated.

MAN comes into this world with "nothing on him." In a short time "everybody" has something on him. We've got it on the world for selling "clothes at the rock-bottom prices. We have scored a regular knockout" on our 1921 overcoats and suits; $15, $20 and $25 will buy a wonderful all-wool garment, a "drummer sample;" save $10 to $15. "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you:" these fine garments are made by manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for salesmen; they are made better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our buying. This policy enables us to save you money. All we ask is to "go shopping around," first and come here last. We will certainly get your "dough." Buy more, pay less. Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau, all lines transfer to our door. "Abrams, the Place to Buy Clothes," 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau av.

WE are glad to report that we have a few pieces of enamelware from our last week's large shipment of slightly defective plumbing supplies, which we are still selling at 50 per cent below regular prices. There is still an opportunity for you to get in on the very low prices on plumbing supplies.

REBUILT DODGE BROS. CARS

From Us

Their goodness was proven by these results. Goodness was REBUILT into them with these results in mind, not simply made to run, but made to run so good, and so lasting, that our three months' guarantee is necessary only to assure those who are not familiar with our honorable methods of conducting our used car business,

We have a few coupes and sedans, 1920 and 1921 models, which have been REBUILT in such a thorough manner that you would hardly know they were not new. Your friends need never know. A new car could drive no better.

We also have roadsters and touring cars in various models, from which the element of uncertainty has been entirely removed.

We want to show you our cars and tell you more about them. A card or phone call will bring us and a car to your door.

BRITISH 'WHITE PAPER' ON EGYPTIAN SITUATION

Government Proposals as to Relations and Nile Delegates' Objections Are Given.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A British Government "white paper" issued tonight regarding the recent negotiations with an Egyptian delegation on the abandonment of the British protectorate over Egypt, shows, as had been previously indicated, that the Egyptians rejected the proposals of Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary, chiefly owing to the military provisions.

The reply of the Egyptian delegation stated that the proposals reserved to Great Britain the right to maintain her military forces at all times throughout Egypt and to control communication, which "constitutes occupation pure and simple, destroys every idea of independence and supresses even internal sovereignty."

The reply also said the British proposals regarding Sudan were also unacceptable as they failed to guarantee to Egypt the sovereignty of Sudan and the control of the Nile.

"We have hoped," the reply states, "to conclude a treaty of alliance, which, while truly establishing the independence of Egypt, would have safeguarded British interests; and Egypt, as an ally of Great Britain, would have held it as a point of honor to fulfill scrupulously the obligations incumbent upon her."

Government's Proposals.

The main features of the Government's proposals, as outlined to Adly Yeghen Pasha, head of the Egyptian delegation, are as follows:

First, in the future British troops would be confined to Port Said and the eastern zone of the Suez Canal; second, a British controller of the public debt would be appointed; third, Egypt would have the right of diplomatic representation abroad and, in all treaties, save commercial agreements, the British Government would have the right to be consulted; fourth, Alexandria would be a British naval base, with an international police force; fifth, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan would remain as at present, with the enjoyment of equal rights by both countries, and the safety of the Egyptian water supply would be guaranteed.

The "white paper" contained a communication from Gen. Allenby to the Egyptian Sultan, in which the former regretted Egypt's rejection of the proposals. "Neither the present condition in the world nor the course of events in Egypt since the armistice," says Gen. Allenby's communication, "permits a modification in the disposition of the British forces. Egypt is a part of the empire's communications."

Gen. Allenby's Letter.

Gen. Allenby's letter says England does not intend to keep Egypt under her tutelage, but, "on the contrary, to fortify the constructive elements in Egyptian nationalism, to give them scope and to bring Egypt nearer to the fullfillment of her national ideal. But we must insist on effective rights and powers to safeguard both Egypt's interests and our own until the Egyptian people have shown the capacity themselves to preserve their country from internal disorder and from intervention by foreign Powers."

PLANT EMPLOYMENT SITUATION

Our employes through plant assembly, consisting of an equal unmber of representatives elected by the employes and appointed by the management, thoroughly considered a readjustment of wage rates.

More than seventy-five per cent of the elected employee representatives at all plants voted either favorably upon the readjustment or to leave the matter to the management.

Union officials, however, representing only a small minority of our employes, have called a strike.

Applicants for vacancies which may occur on Monday, December 5th, should apply to our local plant employment office.

Europe's Most Beautiful Singer Coming Here

The Pathetic End of a Prisoner of Grief

SOLITUDE, DECAY AND $250,000 IN THE HOUSE

Alone, amid vestiges of what had been splendor, Mrs. Margaret Eastman was found dead in big, shabby dwelling which contained no medicine or food—But there were pieces of jewelry and bank books showing huge deposits—Florence, a debutante daughter, died in 1877, after which the mansion witnessed no more scenes of gayety, but the aged woman kept the dainty gowns in repair and pressed her dead husband's clothing :: :: :: ::

A TALE so strange, so bizarre, that one promptly says it could not have happened. The novelist who used such a situation nowadays would be called a cheap trickster, purveying morbid impossibilities. But it did happen. It is true, even in this bustling, practical, money-grabbing age.

There is nobody left alive to tell the story at first hand, but it comes dramatically enough from a few faded letters, some moldy old books, the poignant arrangement of various ancient articles in a big, tumble-down house in Brooklyn, Long Island.

Just the other day death knocked at a door which had long been barred to all other visitors, and revealed a tragedy of the past, a forlorn and touching vigil, a forgotten fortune in jewelry and bank deposits. It is like nothing so much as an old wives' tale, in romantic times of long ago.

At 90 Putnam avenue stands a three-story frame house that wears the shabbiness of age and long neglect, but also the lines and ornament of pretentious architecture. The street in that part is a grimy one, lined with flats of poor folk and some negroes. A passerby with an eye for New York and its changes would recognize in the ancient structure a survivor from days when the neighborhood belonged to the houses of money and pride. The other day the last inhabitant of that faded mansion died.

She was an old woman and she died as she had lived, alone. For seven years she had not stepped past her own threshold, and for seven years no visitor, either, had crossed it. The wives of the surrounding dwellings sometimes had watched the recluse at her lower windows, a gray figure of age and desolation, garbed in the mode of other seasons and but coldly responsive to the gossip from window to window. The heavy German grocer across the street had seen her at intervals of half a week, when he brought rolls and milk and thrust them to her through a half-opened window.

Never, in anyone's memory, had a light shone in the upper stories of the house, but sometimes a candle had been noticed burning through the night in the basement, as though the dismal hermit were keeping some strange nocturnal tryst.

Who was she? Her name was Mrs. Margaret Eastman. In 1914 her husband died, and it was out of this grief that she had secluded herself, but even before that the old house had stood solitary, a gloomy abode of the lonely and cloistered. No more than this was known in the Putnam avenue neighborhood, though it was told, as a memory descended from mouth to mouth, how the broken mansion one day had gleamed proud with the lights of mirth and feasting, and how the sunken old woman had queened it, young and beautiful, among the fashionables of the time.

Three weeks before her death, Mrs. Eastman had complained that she was ailing, and had sent for a physician. He came, and she admitted him to the basement of the house. He gave her a prescription, but on several succeeding visits she seemed worse, and he prescribed for her again. Then for a week nothing had been seen or heard of her. The grocer, with his milk and rolls, had tapped at the window, but had received no response. Finally he became alarmed and broke through the window. In a chair of her basement sitting room Mrs. Eastman lay dead.

She had died during the night, sitting in her chair, where she had mused away so much time in her lonely years. On a table near lay the physician's prescriptions. She had not troubled herself to have them filled. No food was in the house, and she could not have eaten anything for a week. She had said not long before that her old home was falling to ruins about her and it was time she died.

The physician came to go through his somber formalities and a few neighboring women called to look at the dead. The Public Administrator was summoned to take account of the house and its contents, and in his task no sensations were to have been expected. Mrs. Eastman had seemed in the grimmest penury, and her possessions could have promised little more than tattered relics of happier days.

Over all the house the dust of years lay heavy, half an inch of it on massive antique tables, chairs and mantelpieces, and a subtle calculator could have reckoned that half a century had passed since broom and dust cloth had been used by maids in those stately rooms. The once splendid furnishings were faded and falling to tatters, and the heavy odor of age and decay filled the melancholy spaces. It was to be seen that the opulent home had been suffered to settle into the slow ruin of time.

But the flash of gold shone in the greyness of dust. In a table drawer the searchers found a heap of weighty antique jewelry valued at many thousands of dollars in metal and diamonds, and near it a sheaf of bank books showing credits of more than a quarter of a million dollars. This fortune consisted of old deposits, none of them touched for 50 years.

With such revelations, the fallen mansion ascended out of the merely quaint and pathetic and into the fascinating category of hidden treasure. The Putnam avenue neighborhood rose astir, and the newspapers found space for long accounts of the dead hermit of the Eastman home. What was her story? The only answer came silently from a set of objects that, in moody, broken paragraphs, told a tragical romance.

On the walls of library and drawing room rested several pictures of Italian renaissance style, dark with grime but still striking in their beautiful execution. They had been brought from Florence. Now, this name of Florence occurs with almost symbolical meanings in the old house of desolation.

The husband of the recluse had been James M. Eastman, many years ago a secretary of one of the New York life insurance companies. Little was told of him in the papers found in trunks and caskets, but this much was learned: In his youth he lived in Florence.

They found a trunkful of girl's belongings among the relics, and learned that the Eastmans had had two children. One died in infancy, but the other had grown to womanhood, beauty and the idolship of her parents. Her frocks and debutante's gowns lay folded, and her schoolbooks were stacked in careful neatness. In some of them the name of the girl was scribbled in a childish hand. The name was Florence.

She had been named, it seems, from that Italian city which captures all that enter it, the city in which the father had spent his youth. While Florence lived the mansion on Putnam street was a house of mirth, an abode of gay fashion, a center of festivity of the Long Island aristocracy. Then in 1877 the girl died, and from that day the desolation of the Eastman home began.

The parents no more were seen at dances and parties, no more were seen laughing. They drew shrinking into solitude, and made their lives a mournful vigil in the silence of their home. In apathy they saw their pretentious neighborhood decay and give place to the shabby habitations of the poor, and in apathy they saw their home grow dusty and mildewed about them. Finally, the husband died. In the musty closets of the house is a man's clothing of archaic cut. The garments are carefully pressed and brushed, as though waiting for their master to come and dress for dinner. In some strange mechanism of mind, the old recluse had kept them ready for her husband who had died, seeming to expect him to return home any hour.

In the closets, too, hang her own gowns, the fineries of her joyous young matronhood, and her wedding dress, all neat and ready for wear. She had been seen once a year clad in antique crinoline and sitting at her window. She was in her wedding dress and waiting for someone, for her husband, for the days when her daughter Florence lived, for her long vanished happiness—for what?

Thus she had lived in her solitary hermitage, brushing and pressing a dead man's clothes, mooning crazily over the finery of a girl gone from the earth for more than forty years, arraying herself in her own bridal gown and waiting. Her spirit had died with her daughter back in 1877, but she remained on earth till almost her eightieth year.

Among the papers in the house was found a letter sent to Mrs. Eastman by a niece a dozen years ago. A hunt discovered this niece and another. They had almost forgotten their aunt. They had written to her, but she did not reply. They had visited her, but she rebuffed them and refused to let her solitude be disturbed. They never anticipated any fortune, such as has accumulated from the money left undisturbed in banks for half a century. They have laid claim to the quarter of a million, as heirs of the old recluse.

Mention already has been made of the meager diet upon which the lonely old woman subsisted during the last seven years of her life. Mostly it was milk and rolls, brought by a grocer who assuredly would have brought anything else she wanted. And with all that money lying idle in the bank there was no question of expense.

Why didn't Mrs. Eastman make herself comfortable in her old age? Why, for example, didn't she abandon the ramshackle old house for a new, modern place in a good neighborhood? Or if sentiment forbade such a step, why didn't she have the old dwelling put in repair, engage servants and live more as others would with such riches?

These are some of the questions which suggest themselves, in considering this singular affair. There are others, too, such as the reason for her voluntary seclusion. If she did not like the people who had moved into the vicinity as property values dropped and rents became small, there was a whole great city to choose from, in getting friends.

And why did she repulse the efforts of her nieces when they wanted to exchange letters and visits?

The answer to all these points must be contained in just one word—grief—which held her a willing prisoner in the house where happiness had been.

banks for half a century. They have laid claim to the quarter of a million, as heirs of the old recluse.

Mention already has been made of the meager diet upon which the lonely old woman subsisted during the last seven years of her life. Mostly it was milk and rolls, brought by a grocer who assuredly would have brought anything else she wanted. And with all that money lying idle in the bank there was no question of expense.

Why didn't Mrs. Eastman make herself comfortable in her old age? Why, for example, didn't she abandon the ramshackle old house for a new, modern place in a good neighborhood? Or if sentiment forbade such a step, why didn't she have the old dwelling put in repair, engage servants and live more as others would with such riches?

These are some of the questions which suggest themselves, in considering this singular affair. There are others, too, such as the reason for her voluntary seclusion. If she did not like the people who had moved into the vicinity as property values dropped and rents became small, there was a whole great city to choose from, in getting friends.

And why did she repulse the efforts of her nieces, when they wanted to exchange letters and visits?

The answer to all these points must be contained in just one word—grief—which held her a willing prisoner in the house where happiness had been.

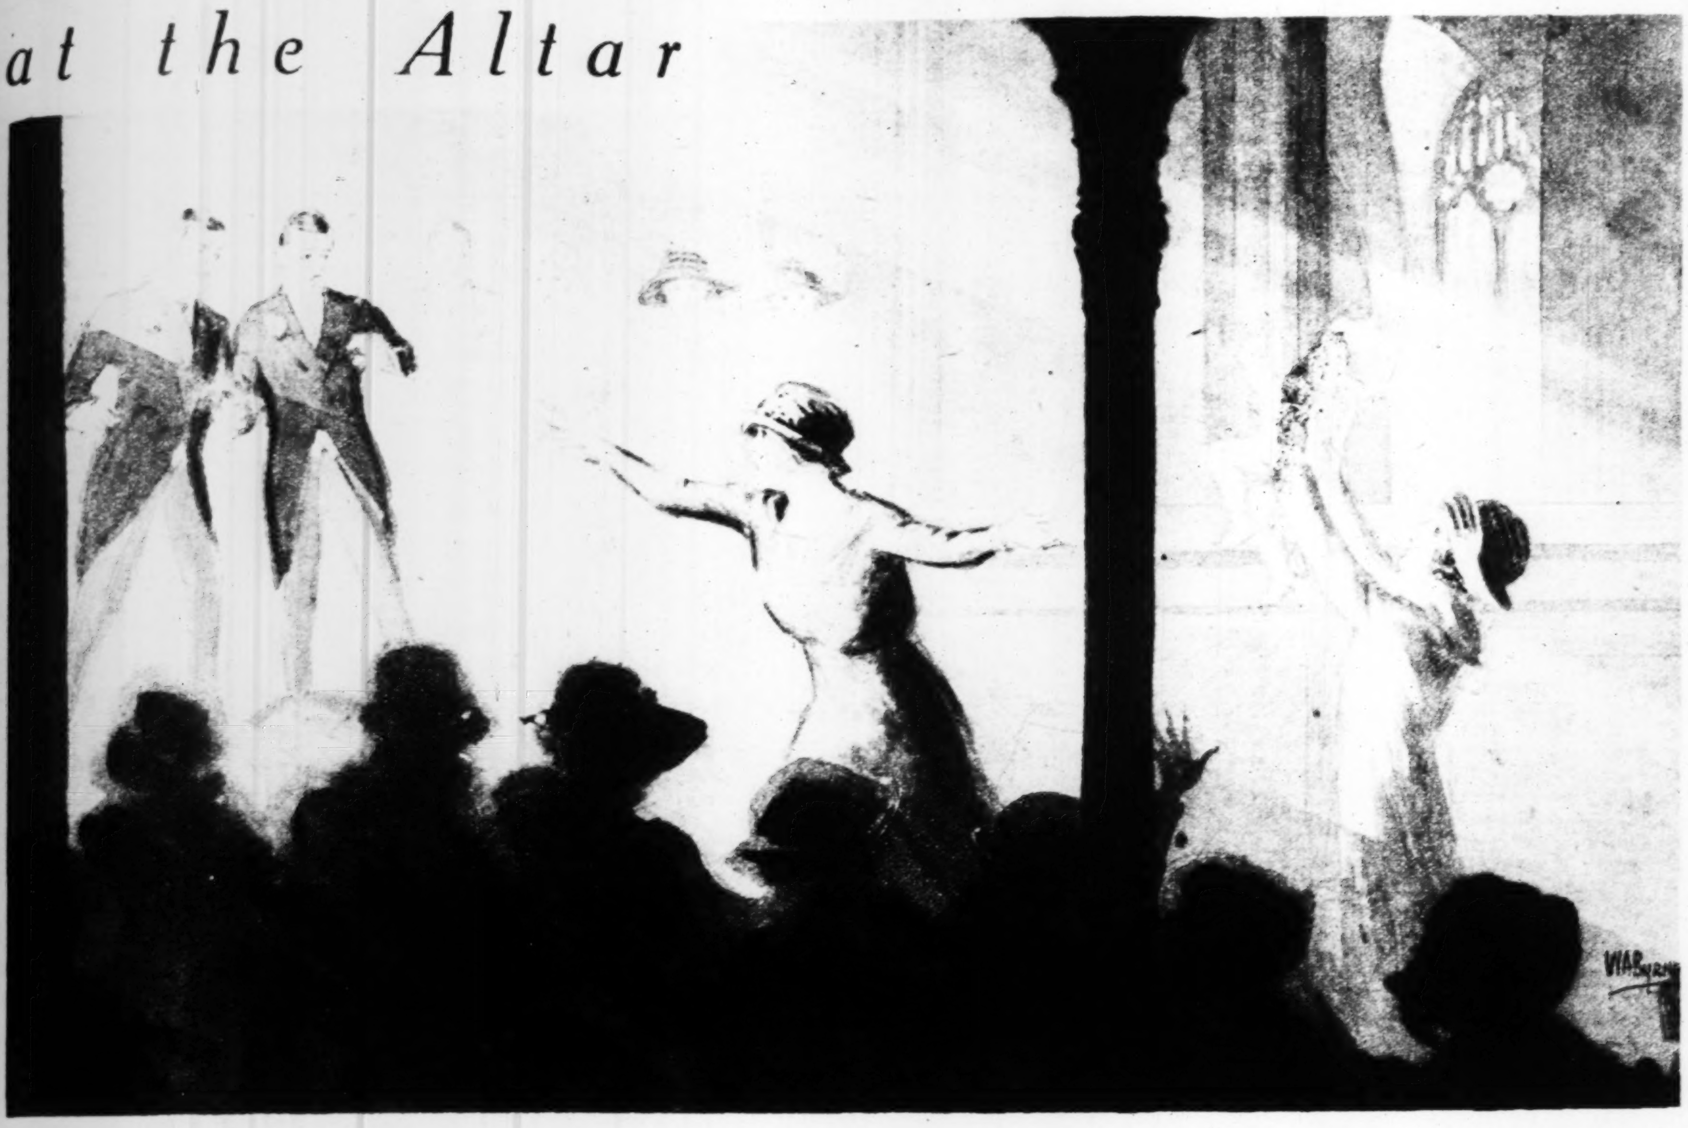
Wedding of Millionaire's Son Halted at the Altar



When Edward J. Farrington and Miss Margaret Hodson of prominent families at Waterbury, Conn., were about to be pronounced man and wife, the command, "Stop!" came from the middle-aged mother of Loretta Rodden—Then Mrs. Rodden pointed at bridegroom and accused him before 2000 guests at church ceremony of being the father of Loretta's baby boy—After the intruders had left church building, the marriage was completed ::

ARISTOCRATIC society circles of staid Connecticut received the shock of a lifetime recently. A situation from the movies, and one familiar in melodrama, was enacted before their very eyes, in the hushed precincts of a church and at one of the most solemn of events, namely, a wedding.

A scene which is always possible at a wedding but which occurs very seldom—the challenge of the right of one of the contracting parties to marry the other one—was the sensational interruption which amazed some 2000 guests.

The daughter and the son of two millionaire families were being united in the bonds of matrimony, the service was about half completed, a tense silence reigned in the beautifully decorated church—when something happened!

A middle-aged woman who had been sitting in one of the front pews suddenly arose, pointed her finger at the bridegroom and in a shrill voice said:

"Stop! I have something to say before this wedding ceremony is performed. This man" (here she shook her finger at the startled bridegroom) "is the father of that child"——

And with a tragic gesture she pointed toward a 22-months-old baby boy in the arms of a younger woman who had arisen in the same pew and was standing there motionless as a statue.

Such was the accusation hurled at Edward J. Farrington, Yale University man, former Lieutenant in the army and son of Daniel T. Farrington, who is rated as one of the wealthiest men in Connecticut. The bride was Miss Margaret Hodson of Waterbury, whose family possesses the same degree of wealth and social distinction.

For a moment after this dramatic command to stop the ceremony there was absolute silence in the church. Then a murmur of excitement broke forth, notwithstanding the setting and the solemnity of the occasion. "Who is she?" whispered some of the women among the guests. "Isn't this terrible?" whispered others. And the soft mutter of questions and answers, the creaking of pews as curious persons shifted their position to obtain a better view, the rustling of gowns, grew rather than diminished.

Meanwhile, what of the principals? The bridegroom, looking much surprised and embarrassed, leaned on the arm of the best man. The bride, after turning to glance at the woman who had interrupted and at the young mother and baby, abruptly turned back and faced the clergyman. People who were there commented on the bride's courage at a trying moment, and said she seemed to be "the coolest person in the church."

The sudden interruption and accusation had created a little flurry among the four clergymen who officiated at this, the most elaborate wedding ever planned in Waterbury. One of the ushers stepped up to the woman who had spoken (she was Mrs. Mary Rodden, grandmother of the baby boy), and attempted to lead her away. Other people, coming to the assistance of the usher, tried to force Mrs. Rodden and daughter through the throng in the center aisle. By this time the whole church was in an uproar.

Six detectives who had been on watch at the main entrance, to prevent Mrs. Rodden and her daughter, Loretta, mother of little Edward, from entering the church, saw that they had been outwitted by the women. They worked their way through the crowd, as fast as they could, to the excited group in the front of the church. They may have thought that they would at least have the satisfaction of putting the intruders out, although they had not been able to keep them out.

But by the time the detectives reached the group around Mrs. Rodden and Miss Rodden, the latter still clasping little Edward tightly, the women had announced their intention of leaving quietly. But to the vestry room and out by the side door, they would not go.

"We will leave as we entered, under the canopy and through the front door," shouted Mrs. Rodden. And as she and her daughter walked slowly down the center aisle and out the big front door, with all the honors of war, as one might say, she explained her action to those who accompanied her.

"I have accomplished what I set out to do," she said. "I have exposed Edward Farrington. He is the father of my daughter's child—and I trust that all of the guests know it now."

Then the two uninvited and unwelcome guests went quietly away, little Edward placidly unaware that he had been the occasion for the stirring scene.

In the church the excitement gradually subsided. The guests, who included not only Waterbury people but also friends from New Haven, Bridgeport, New York, Pittsburg and Washington, sank back in their seats and watched the conclusion of the ceremony.

The chief clergyman, who had been deeply distressed at the interruption and accusation, went on with the marriage ceremony from the point where it had been halted, and Farrington and Miss Hodson were pronounced man and wife.

Then the bridal party and special guests got into waiting automobiles and went to the handsome home of the bride's parents for a wedding breakfast, after which the young pair departed on a honeymoon trip to Canada. But bravely as the new Mrs. Farrington had faced the cruel ordeal in church, her friends believe there is little doubt that it contributed to her subsequent illness.

Just a few days after the wedding, she was brought home suffering from pneumonia. She became ill on the journey and the couple had to stop off at a small town in Vermont, where her mother was hastily summoned and the return to Waterbury followed as soon as she could travel.

Of course, it was only a few hours until rumors of the sensational scene at the wedding had begun to circulate through Waterbury. The number of guests present and the prominence of the families involved made anything else impossible. There were various versions, for a story often does not lose anything in the telling. Newspaper men could not get statements from the families of either the bride or the bridegroom, but Mrs. Rodden and Loretta gave their version of the affair, which will be repeated below.

The former Miss Hodson is the daughter of Frank J. Hodson, hotel proprietor and millionaire. The bridegroom is the son of Daniel T. Farrington, reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in Connecticut. He is 24 years old.

For several days prior to the wedding, there had been vague rumors in Waterbury that some sort of a disturbance might occur at the big Hodson-Farrington wedding. Just what it might be nobody seemed to know, but this possibility, as well as the elaborate floral decorations carried into the church, the specially engaged choir, the canopy and heavy carpeting which extended from the big door down the steps to the curb, the social eminence of the families—all these factors caused a large crowd to gather outside the church. More than 2000 guests had been invited to the ceremony.

Probably it was the large number of people congregating on the scene which gave Mrs. Rodden and Loretta their chance to slip unobserved into the build-

Nine Centenarians, and All Are - Feeling Fine, Thank You! -

From John H. Chrisman, who is only 100, to J. A. Russell, who is 108, they are cheerful, happy and more active than one might expect — Work, contentment, temperate habits and plenty of fresh air: these things seem to be the recipe for longevity :: :: ::

THE second hundred years is the hardest The world tries to solve problems which confront babies, children, young men, young women, middle-aged and those who have reached 60, but it ignores the problems of persons who reach the age of 100 years. Centenarians must solve their own difficulties. Not that the world means to be, or is, unkindly to people of 100 years, but just takes it for granted that when anyone has reached such an age his worries have ceased. All that a centenarian has to do is to sit in a comfortable rocker and tell callers how he attained such an age.

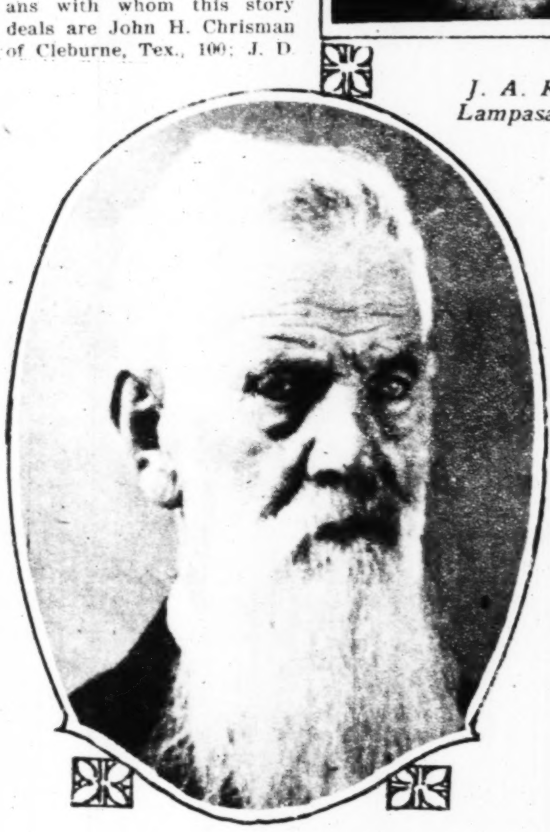
But to many who have passed the century mark civilization moves in mysterious ways its wonders to perform, with its 50-story buildings, million-dollar prize fights, pampered Pekinese dogs, lounge lizards, movie vamps, votes for women, 16-cent milk, 70-cent ice, $75 suits, $20 shoes, summer furs, irreducible minimum in women's dress, bandolined pompadours, the bunny hug dance, initialed cigarettes for girls, a six-hour day, profiteers and a Volsteadian desert.

They do not "get" these inventions of civilization.

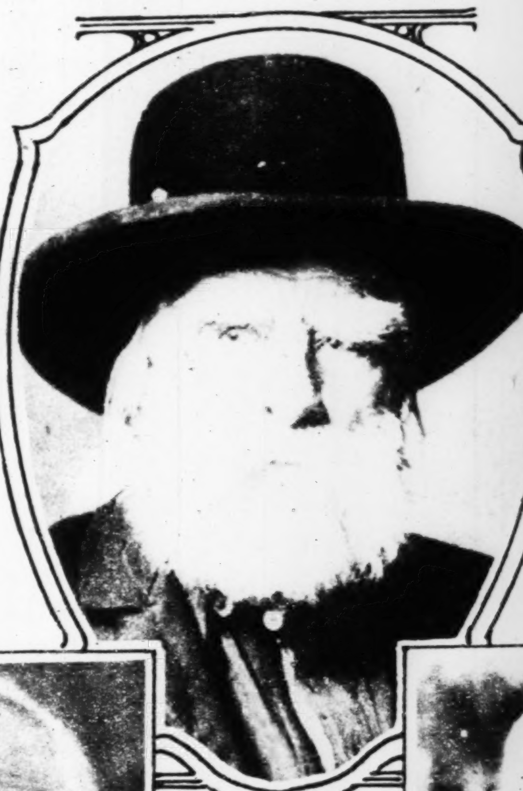
The nine lively centenarians with whom this story deals are John H. Chrisman of Cleburne, Tex., 100; J. D. Banner of Comanche, Tex., 101; Mrs. Elizabeth Pulliam of Callisburg, Tex., 101; Joseph Biggs of Anson, Tex., 105; J. A. Russell of Lampasas, Tex., 108; S. S. McCathern of Elk City, Ok., 100; J. S. Halstead of Breckenridge, Mo., 103; Mrs. Mary H. Sharp of Montgomery City., Mo., 101; Mrs. Ann Sisson of Mansfield, England, 102.

All of them are up and around every day in the year, are able to walk to town and back, do little odd jobs around their homes, read the papers and magazines.

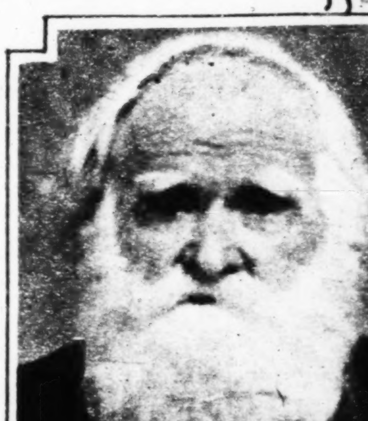
Oddly enough, Chrisman, the Cleburne centenarian, lives in the same block with Charles Warren, 95 years old, and George Stephens, 92 years old. Chrisman lives in a tent at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. J. Logan, for he wants all the sunshine and fresh air he can get. He spends most of the day in his tent and sleeps there at night, rain or shine, summer and winter. The yard is well shaded, has abundant flowers and a garden and the home is located on a quiet street.



John D. Banner, Comanche, Tex.



Joseph Biggs, Anson, Tex.



J. A. Russell, Lampasas, Tex.

John H. Chrisman, Cleburne, Tex.

When visitors call upon him they usually find him reading a farm journal and he always rises promptly to greet them. Talking tire him? No, indeed. Fire away! Visitors find him another Roosevelt as far as opinions on a great variety of subjects are concerned.

"I have lived in this tent for the last five years," explained Chrisman. "You see, I like the outdoors, as I spent most of my life outdoors. I not only fought through the Civil War, but fought against the Indians as well. Do I believe in prohibition? Yes, I do. I believe the saloons would have ruined this country. I never have smoked, but I chewed tobacco some when younger, but quit 25 years ago. I drank a little, but not much.

"The trouble with the world now is that it is given over too much to frills. For that reason I do not believe that the world is as good as it used to be, but there is hope. The movies are a great invention, but they, too, are mostly frills; and as to jazz music, it ought to be outlawed. I have ridden in automobiles, but they make me nervous. I am a spiritualist, and the only thing I do not like about Cleburne is the fact that there are few, if any, here. I would like to talk with them. Have I ever talked with spirits of the other world? Certainly. Indeed, I have seen them as closely as I do you right now. I saw my dead wife face to face.

"The only thing worth recalling that these spirits said to me is that they are happy. If I owe my longevity to any one factor, it is to the fact that I never have overeaten. I always am the first up from the table and am a vegetarian. I usually go to bed at 7 o'clock and wake up at 4. No use of my stirring around then, as others want to sleep. I wish I had been young enough to have engaged in the World War, but anyway I am proud of having had a grandson in it."

Both Chrisman and Warren are former Justices of the Peace and Warren also is a veteran of the Confederate army. Chrisman enlisted at 41. He went to Texas in 1854 and settled in Coryell County, where he lived until the beginning of the Civil War. He was the first Justice of the Peace in Coryell County, and also carried the first mail from Coryell to Belton County. At one time he owned practically all of the land in the city limits at Coryell, but gradually disposed of the tract. In 1893 he moved to Cleburne.

John D. Banner of Comanche was born in Russell County, Va., June 12, 1820, and grew to manhood in that State. He married in 1843 and eight children were born to the couple. In 1870 they traded their Virginia estate for a tract in Collin County, Tex., and in 1872 they moved to Comanche County.

Ten years later Banner moved to Coleman County, and by this time he became so restless that he went to Indian Territory; later to Florida and to New Mexico. Since 1890 he has made his home in Comanche. A powerful man in his prime, Banner is still erect and when 99 was regarded as a wonder on account of his activity. In the last year he has become somewhat feeble.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pulliam, 101 years old, is a native of Georgia, but went to Texas in 1869, locating near her present home. She has lived in her present residence for 43 years. When she celebrated her hundredth anniversary a year ago, all of her six children, 24 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren attended the reunion.

Joseph Biggs of Anson was born in Tennessee, May 15, 1816. When a boy he moved to Missouri and remained there for many years. He removed to Texas in 1864, first settling in Blanco County, where for about 12 years he was engaged in stock raising. Biggs experienced many thrilling escapes from Indians in Texas.

With reference to Indian depredations, Biggs said: "We could always tell when Indians were preparing for a raid on our cattle and horses, a raid always being staged as near the full of the moon as possible.

"They would be discovered dressing down their mounts and gathering up relays, or extra horses, this work commencing about three days before the raid. I always kept a close watch on their maneuvers, and when they would begin to carry out their plans, I, too, schemed, and, getting reinforcements, usually managed to prevent them from stealing my horses."

In later years Biggs bought a ranch eight miles from Anson, but this year transferred the property to his children and moved to the city to live. Up until two years ago Biggs was able to perform hard manual labor and never used a cane nor eyeglasses. But at last he "retired" and spends most of his time walking about the city or his yard, unassisted, except that he uses a cane.

J. A. Russell, 108 years old and dean of the Texas centenarians, simply refuses to let advancing age quash the activity of youth. Until he was 102 years old he had never taken any medicine; for the last 10 years he has been excavating for gold and thus has something to live for, for he hasn't found it yet; and at 104 he led before the altar Mrs. Mary Bowers, 50 years old, and said, in a firm voice, "I do so promise," as spryly as a June bridegroom of 25.

S. S. McCathern, Elk City, Okla.

When 100 years old Russell was a marvel of physique, powerful and broad-shouldered, and his strength has but slightly diminished. He probably is the strongest man of 100 years or more in the whole world. Russell was born in 1813, at Asheville, N. C., and is of Scotch-Irish descent. When 19 years old he assisted in transporting Indians to Indian Territory and in 1845 enlisted under Gen. John Fagg for service in the Mexican War.

When the conflict closed he returned to North Carolina and helped build the first railroad in that State. He first married Miss Mary Brown of North Carolina in 1849, and to them were born 14 children, six of whom are still living. Russell was in the Southern army during the Civil War, enlisting as a private and coming out as a Major. In 1867 he went to Clarksville, Tex.

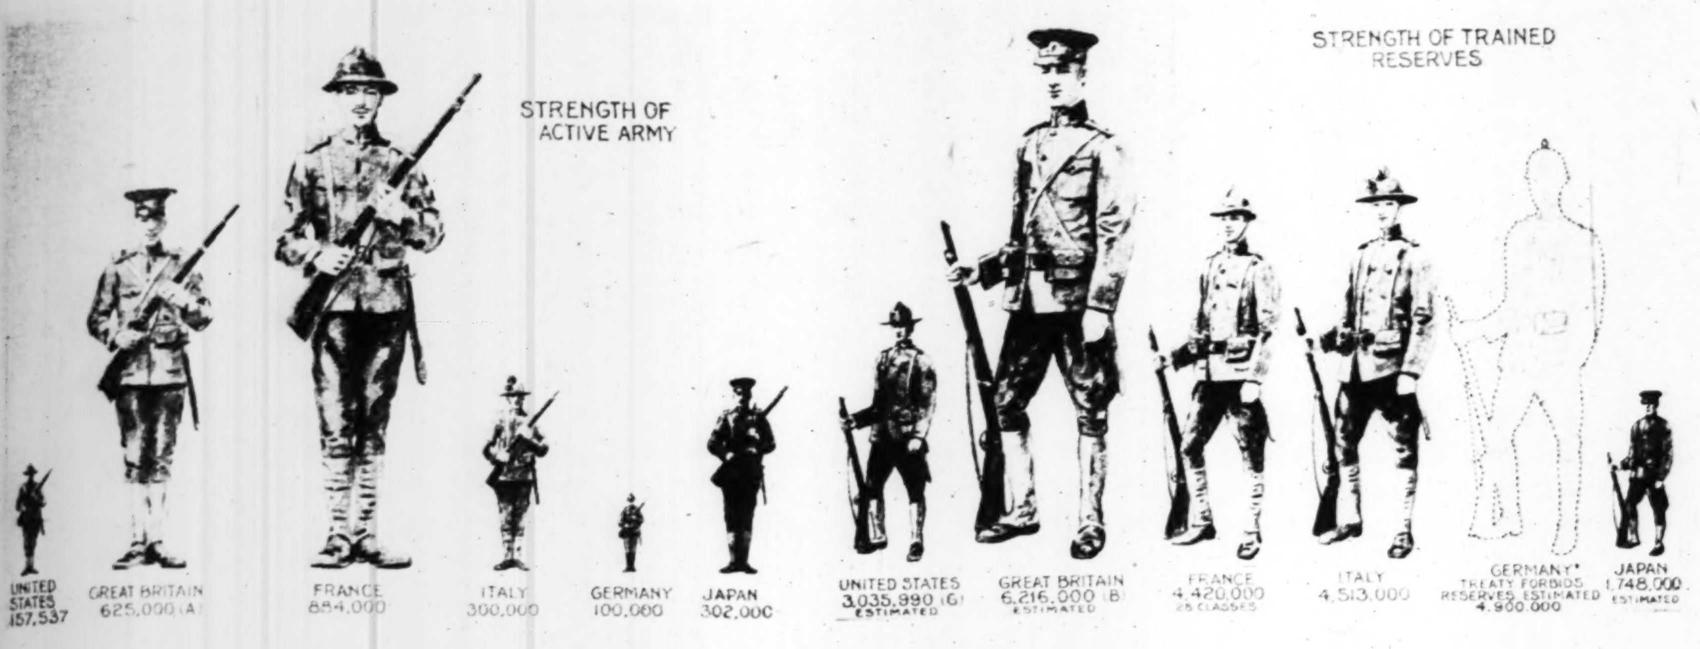
SMALLER NAVIES, OF COURSE -- HOW ABOUT ARMIES? --



—Copyright by Scientific American

AT THE Washington conference on limitation of armaments, Secretary of State Hughes "brought the world to its feet" with a definite program presented by the United States, under which the great Powers would discard many of their warships, including some vessels under construction and some already afloat.

While that program did not propose a similar curtailment of the nations' armies, the matter is one which goes along naturally with the naval reduction. Hence a survey of the existing establishments is a subject of vital and timely interest.

The following comparison of the active armies, trained reserves, available man power and field artillery of the five leading Powers has been prepared by The Scientific American. It is based on the latest and most authentic information.

IT IS a rather formidable task to attempt to make a reliable comparison of the strength of the various military Powers—this for the reason that the late war, and the reduction of forces since the war, have made so great a difference in the strength and composition of armies, as compared with pre-war times, that only to the officers of our Military Intelligence are the facts known with any close degree of approximation. The table which is herewith published is made up from their statistics and represents the very latest figures that are obtainable as we go to press. The totals are given for the strength of the active army, the strength of the trained reserves, the total available man power of military age and the total number of field guns with the active army.

The strength of the active army of the United States, as recently fixed by law, is 157,537 officers and men. This body is provided with a total of 300 field guns. By field guns must be understood mobile artillery, up to and including that of six-inch caliber. The heavier artillery, whether caterpillar-mounted or on railroad mounts, or designed to be transported to the front and fired from fixed emplacements, is not included in these 300 guns. This reservation applies to the totals of the guns of all armies included in this table. It will be seen that the strength of our trained reserves is 3,035,990. This figure includes about 188,950 reserves, consisting of the National Guard and the officers' reserve corps. At present there is no enlisted force in the reserve corps. In addition to these, there are 2,847,000 (estimated) nonenlisted veterans of the World War. The total available man power of military age in the United States is estimated by Army Intelligence as 15,700,000.

It will be noticed that Great Britain is credited with an active army of 625,000; but it should be understood that this includes 274,000 white troops of the United Kingdom, of which 200,000 are serving at home and 74,000 are serving in India and are paid for by the Indian Government. The rest of the British total, or 351,000 of the active army, are in various places. The 6,216,000 trained reserves of Great Britain include an estimated total of 6,000,000 veterans of the World War and 216,000 men of the regular army reserve, the special reserve and the territorial army. The total of field guns of the British army, up to six-inch caliber, is estimated at 864 guns with the British army in the United Kingdom only. The number of guns outside of the United Kingdom is not known. To be added to this are 346 guns in the hands of British artillery units serving in India with the Indian army, the two items together giving the grand total shown in our table. The enormous total available man power of military age of 25,000,000 given for Great Britain is to be explained by the large extent of British colonies: but mostly it is due to the teeming millions of India. These figures are estimated by our Army Intelligence, and to arrive at a total there was taken 5 per cent of the total population in India, 20 per cent in New Zealand, 12 per cent in the United Kingdom and 15 per cent in Canada, Australia and South Africa. All these percentages impress one as entirely reasonable.

Great Britain	625,000(a)	6,216,000(b) estimated	25,000,000(h)	1,210(c)(d)

(a) This includes the 200,000 white troops serving in the United Kingdom and 74,000 serving in India and paid for by the Indian Government. The remaining 351,000 are in India and on the Rhine, in Mesopotamia, Silesia, Palestine and elsewhere.

(b) Includes 6,000,000 (estimated) nonenlisted veterans of the World War and 216,000 regular army reserve, special reserve and territorial army.

(c) 864 guns with British army (United Kingdom only—others not known).

(d) 346 guns in hands of British artillery units serving in India with Indian army.

(e) No organized reserves allowed Germany by peace treaty, but there are estimated to be 4,900,000 men who were in her former army.

(f) All guns are not manned, due to skeletonized organizations.

(g) Includes 188,990 trained reserves (consisting of the National Guard and officers' reserve corps, at present no enlisted force in reserve corps), and 2,847,000 (estimated) nonenlisted veterans of World War.

(h) Estimated.
Of total population in India, 5 per cent has been taken for this estimate, in New Zealand, 20 per cent; in United Kingdom, 12 per cent; in Canada, 15 per cent; in Australia, 15 per cent; in South Africa, 15 per cent.

The active French army has a strength of 884,000; and the strength of the trained reserves included in 28 classes is 4,420,000. The total available man power of military age is 5,304,000; and the total number of guns with the active army is 3840. It should be understood with regard to this artillery that, due to skeletonized organizations, all of the guns are not manned. The large proportion of trained reserves of France and Italy to the total man power of military age is very significant and speaks eloquently of the supreme effort made by those gallant countries in the recent war.

The strength of the active army of Italy is 300,000; and behind it is a trained reserve of 4,513,000, slightly larger than that of France. The total available man power is over 5,000,000, and the total number of field guns is 2160. As in the case of France, only a part of these guns are manned, dut to skeletonized organizations.

Germany, as we all know, was required under the treaty of Versailles to reduce her huge army to an active strength of 100,000; and this has now been done. Under the head of trained reserves, in our table, there is a blank which is to be explained by the fact that no organized reserves are allowed to Germany by the peace treaty. On the other hand, it is estimated by our Government that there are in Germany today 4,900,000 trained reserves, out of a total available man power of 6,000,000. The total field guns in Germany today are 288. This small figure shows how Germany has carried out the provisions of the treaty, which called either for the surrender or destruction of its artillery. According to figures given out by the Disarmament Commission, Germany has destroyed 32,000 guns.

The strength of the Japanese active army is 302,000; and the estimated strength of her reserves is 1,748,000 out of an estimated available man power of 6,519,000. In this matter of trained reserves, then, it is evident that Japan does not stand in nearly so favorable a position as France, Italy or Great Britain. The total number of field guns with the active army is 1172.

Although they are not included in our table of the five leading nations, figures for Belgium, Holland and Portugal will be of interest. They are as follows: Belgium has an active army of 120,073, a trained reserve of 250,000, an available man power of 1,125,000 and [illegible] field guns, not all of which are manned. Holland has 40,000 in her active army, including 20,000 organized militia. She has 360,000 trained reserves, a total available man power of 1,000,000 and 171 field guns. The Newest Form of Land Swindle

STARTS WITH A LOTTERY, BUT THERE IS NO CHANCE ABOUT IT

A NEW form of land swindle has been invented in New York. It has not yet appeared in the Middle West, but the Eastern promoters and their imitators are making such a killing, among the most pitiable dupes in the community, too, that only publicity will prevent the swindle from spreading to other parts of the country.

It is the old, familiar lot shark, operating under a brand-new scheme. At present there are in New York and vicinity not fewer than 20, and possibly 40, building lot concerns working this new form of swindle.

Of course, the chief reason for the existence and prosperity of these concerns is the abundant number of credulous to be found everywhere. But that fact makes their crime no less, nor the plight of their plundered and disappointed victims less unhappy.

There are also, as a matter of course, a great many honest companies engaged in providing suburban home sites for people of limited means. They will be pleased when they read this article, for they also suffer materially from the misdeeds of the sharks and would like nothing better than to see them all sent to prison. The honest men may occupy offices in the same buildings with the crooks and sell land in about the same localities, but how is the prospective victim to know the difference? It takes an experienced eye and a trained mind to distinguish one from the other.

The result is that thousands of poor and innocent people in the great, sophisticated city of New York are being done out of their savings and gouged further into poverty.

A young salesman, who has recently been employed by several of these fraudulent building lot concerns, has quit his work in disgust, after coming to understand the full foulness of the business, and he has supplied this writer with the facts which will be set down here. He pretends to give a full expose of the tricks and methods of fraud used by these concerns, some of whose promoters are under indictment. The purpose is to warn the otherwise defenseless public. If you have been approached or if you plan to buy suburban lots and build a home, it will pay you to read and remember.

Six months ago this young salesman, being out of work and moneyless, replied to an advertisement of one of the lot companies. The sales manager received him and explained the work and the whole plan of selling, with obvious reservations.

"What's the pay?" demanded the salesman, whom I shall call Praxiteles McGann, because that happens not to be his name.

"Straight commission," said the sales manager.

"No drawing account?"

"No. But this is a sure-fire proposition. We furnish the leads and any man that can sell anything can sell this. If you need it we'll give you a small advance for expenses till you make your first sale."

McGann accepted. He'd been looking for work too long to be particular. The first day he made more than $60 for himself. He cleaned up $200 the first week. The second week he did still better. Once he earned nearly $500 in seven days. (Sunday was his busiest day, as will be seen.) His employers made a clear profit equal to that of the salesman on all his transactions and postponed payments due from the dupes ran their total up very much higher. They had 25 salesmen going at the same time and boasted that they were cleaning up $5000 a week. This was conservative.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jones, of the tenement district, and Tony Romagnoli, with seven children and a light purse, are among the "winners" of what the promoter calls "prize lots" in a drawing—They have to pay $48.50 for "expenses of transfer," then they inspect the property and decide to buy better parcels because agent will allow them $400 for the lottery prizes—So they sign up for payments of $350 to $500 each on several lots really worth $2.50 or $3.00 apiece :: :: ::

The method of selling the lots, one of the most ingenious devised in a long time, was not without its elements of drama.

The land company employed a dozen young girls, either on weekly salary or by the piece. These were called lead girls. They were, in fact, canvassers. Their business, as the term indicates, was to get leads. They went into certain districts of the great city, always those inhabited by the poorer people, often those where certain foreign populations are quartered. Here they went from door to door, especially in the tenements, and rang the bells. When someone answered they asked for the "lady of the house." She was told that the Marvel Home Builders, Inc. (to use again a fictitious name), were gathering the names of several hundred persons in the neighborhood for the purpose of holding a lot raffle. No money was required. The woman was asked merely to sign her name and address on the card. Perhaps she would be one of the lucky few. If not, she was nothing out. The simple women complied.

These names and addresses were the leads on which the salesmen then worked.

McGann followed in the wake of the lead girls. A list of names gathered in a certain block was allowed to rest for a week or 10 days. Then McGann and other salesmen like him fared forth. Some of them were young and prepossessing women. It was found that these girls could handle certain types of dupes much better than men.

McGann understood the whole nature and psychology of the scheme after the first week, but he was then intoxicated with the success and profits of the game and it was not for months afterward that he felt the first prickings of conscience. He threw himself into the work with characteristic intelligence and a certain gift for drama. When he went to break the news to one of the dupes he managed to make an entrance, to strike wonder and delight and cupidity into the hearts of his victims, to put it over.

For instance, late one morning he found himself in a cheap quarter of Harlem with his first handful of lead cards running through his fingers. He saw that Mrs. Mary Jones, who had signed one of them, lived in the nearest building. He rang her bell. She answered.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jones," said McGann, with his most sunny smile. "I'm Praxiteles McGann of the Marvel Home Builders. May I come in? I have news for you."

Mrs. Jones, who had read warnings about admitting burglars and bandits into the house, nevertheless melted under the McGann urbanity and bade him come in. He laid down his hat and stripped off his overcoat like an old acquaintance.

"Mrs. Jones," he began again, sententiously. "I have good news for you."

She looked at him with that sad expectancy of women to whom good news is rare and incredible.

"Very good news," he went on, stopping again for an effective suspense. "You signed this card, did you not?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Jones, flatly.

"You were told what it was for?"

"The girl said it was a land lottery. I didn't pay much attention."

"That's where you were wrong, very wrong, Mrs. Jones," said the unctuous salesman. "You might have passed up the great opportunity of your life if you'd failed to sign it. Don't you know that?"

Mrs. Jones was fidgeting. She was very ignorant, very suspicious, deeply timid. What did this young man want with his good news and his many words?

"Mrs. Jones, haven't you always wanted to own your own home, somewhere out of town a little ways—a nice place, with lots of ground and flowers and chickens and all that?"

Mrs. Jones admitted the soft impeachment.

"Well," said McGann, striking a statuesque posture and clearing his throat; "it's come true, Mrs. Jones. I have come to tell you that you are the lucky winner of one of our $400 lots!"

Mrs. Jones gasped. She said nothing. After a moment she dropped her heavy body abruptly into a chair and looked mournfully at McGann, who continued merely to smile.

"Ain't that nice," she said, finally. "Henry will be glad. He always wanted chickens."

"Well, here's your chance to get started," blurted McGann, hauling out his map of the Marvel Home Builders' property at Nowhere, N. J. "Here's the lot, right here. Beautiful piece of property. When can you come out to see it?"

"Sunday," said Mrs. Jones.

"Fine, splendid, wonderful!" gushed the salesman. "We'll take you over, drive you out to the place in our private automobile, show you the lot and all the wonderful homes that are going up. We'll treat you right. Just as if you'd bought the lot and paid cash for it. That's the way we do business."

He paused. Mrs. Jones was smiling for the first time and taking on a little of his excitement in spite of herself and her habit.

"Of course, you want the title transferred and the deed made out at once. You've got to do that before the lot is really yours. That's the only part of this that costs you a cent, Mrs. Jones. You see that's cash and doesn't go to us. You can hardly expect us to pay that in addition to giving you the $400 lot free. Can you, now?"

Mr. McGann spouted words emphatically and Mrs. Jones succumbed to his cogency.

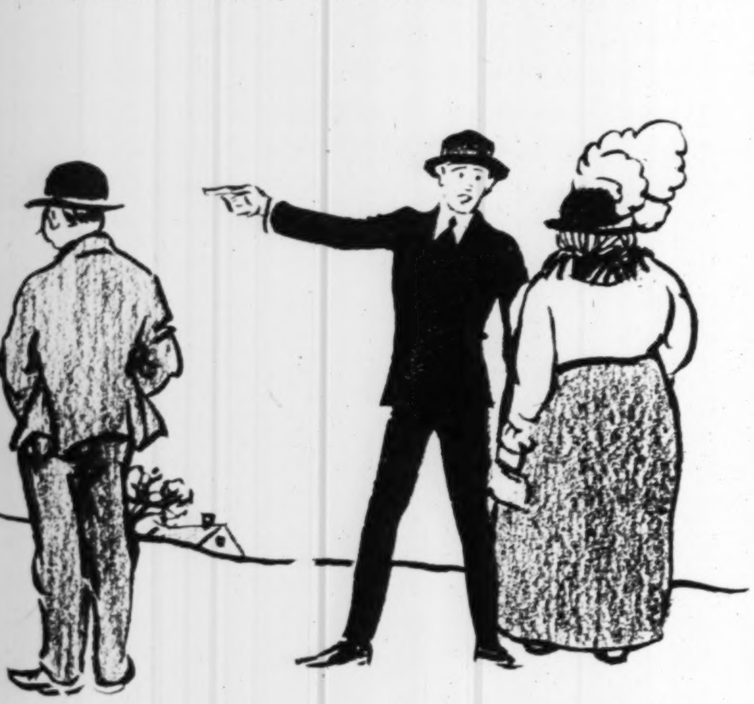
"You understand, of course," he went on, "that the deed and transfer are legal papers that have to be drawn. If you went to a lawyer he'd charge you at least $80 for it. We charge only $48.50. Have you that amount in the house?"

After some more argument and explaining Mrs. Jones admitted that she hadn't so much in her purse and couldn't get it till her husband got paid at the end of the week. But, after the smooth-spoken McGann had explained that he would not take less than two-thirds and that she would lose the wonderful $400 lot unless that amount were paid then and there, the poor woman skirmished around, robbed her little son's bank, made a loan from a neighbor and finally produced $35.

McGann gave her full directions for meeting him on the following Sunday at one of the Hudson River ferry slips. She was to bring her husband and be taken to the site of the prize lot. With that the artful lot vender went out into the hall, climbed the stairs to the home of Antonio Romagnoli and did the same thing over again. He worked six families in the same house and landed two of them. Then he went down the block and landed an old Irishman, who was so badly crippled with rheumatism that he moved about in a wheel chair and his pain-twisted face looked like a gargoyle's. A few squares north he almost threw a negress into hysterics by his dramatic announcement of the easily won lot. Then he called it a day's work. He had taken in $120 and half of it was his by the terms of his agreement with the company. He had contracted to get 50 per cent of the initial deposits, or deed money, as it was called—$48.50 in each case. On this first morning McGann had arranged with all his dupes to pay the balance of the deed money on Sunday, when they came to see their lots. Thus his four victorious interviews really stood to bring him $97 for one day's work. But he didn't count unhatched chickens. He had the $60 for himself and the $60 for his employers in his pocket. That was sure. As it turned out, he got the rest also, and much more. It was a good game.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock McGann and various other salesmen, accompanied by G. Richquick, the promoter of this wonderful enterprise, waited for a whole company of simpletons at the ferry slip, took their lot winners across to Jersey, loaded them into a train and rode them out to one of the prosperous North Jersey cities. Here the entire company was loaded into the station cabs and started on a tour of the locality, a salesman accompanying each carload and lecturing on the beauty, prosperity and promise of the city he was exhibiting.

Finally, after this motley array of tourists had seen the public library, the First Methodist Church, the city hall and firehouse, the nut and bolt works and the barbed-wire foundry, the cabs headed for the open country and did a swift three miles along a dusty road to the McElroy farm, now suddenly become a suburb of the Jersey city and called by some grandiose name. I shall continue to call it Nowhere.



That empty corner, a hundred yards away, had been bought up by Thomas Grubb, the steel man.

G. Richquick had bought the 20-acre pasture from old McElroy for $55 an acre, because nothing but a certain kind of rank grass would grow on the place. Richquick had staked it off in lots measuring 20 by 100 feet. He had marked off the streets of the future with tall stakes bearing signs, which read:

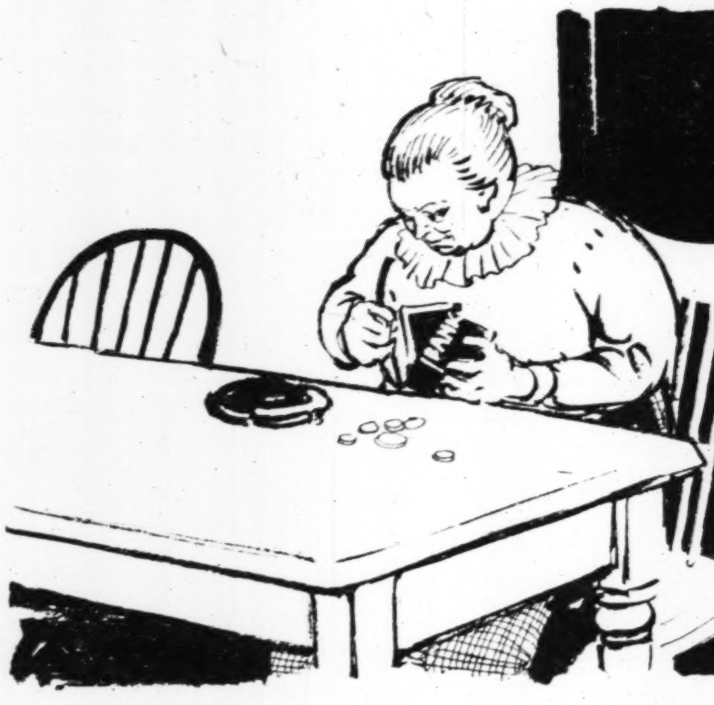
Richquick avenue.

Abraham parkway.

Mendelssohn place.

Harding boulevard.

The oily promoter had a nice conceit in such matters and a sense of humor. One street was named after his favorite stenographer and another after his office boy. The entrepreneur overlooked no bets. He realized that his scheme was going to be a howling success and that 20 acres might be all too little ground, so he got himself an option on much of the contiguous terrain from Farmer McElroy and others.



The poor woman robbed her little son's bank.

He had, in his own words, a grand layout.

To this noble expanse of sterile land, now suddenly sprouted in golden grain, G. Richquick led his procession of the selling and the sold. There were some pathetic figures and some comic groups in this entourage. There was the timid Mrs. Jones and her sad-eyed husband, Henry, who could see his chicken netting stretched to all the corners of Richquick's property. There was the poor Irishman, so crippled that he could not leave the taxicab and had to observe the wonders of the lot he had won from some little distance. Tony Romagnoli had brought his mother-in-law, wife, cousin and seven children. Another man of Sicily was exhibiting a family of 11. There was also Mrs. Minninger, a woman who ran a lace shop and considered herself a business woman sans pareil. She asked a thousand suspicious questions, on the theory that no one could possibly be clever enough to have invented satisfactory answers to them all. In the end she was worse bitten than anyone else, for she was greedy and loved a bargain, which was duly provided for her.

McGann immediately led Mr. and Mrs. Jones to a narrow, low-lying lot and pointed it out to them as their $400 prize. Their jaws fell. How could one have a home and garden and chickens on a lot 20 feet wide, and in such a location? Weren't there any better lots, higher, wider? McGann showed them what they sought with all alacrity. Here were two high and lovely lots, right at a street corner, sure to increase in value. But, of course, they were higher in price. As a special inducement he would let them go for $1100 and he would give them credit for $400, the price of the lot they had won, so their two fine lots would cost them only $700. It was a terrific bargain. Why, right over there, where you could see some sort of house between the trees, was the home of John Sparks, the millionaire. That empty corner, a hundred yards away, had been bought up by Thomas Grubb, the steel man. They knew of the rich Thomas Grubb, to be sure. Yes. He was going to build himself a villa on that corner, and right over there, half a mile away, he was going to build model homes for his old employes, so he could have them near him in their old age. Nice idea, wasn't it? Fine man, this Grubb. Man with a heart. Loved his business and the people that worked for him.

Henry Jones' heart sank through his diaphragm when he heard the price of those two lots. How could he ever pay $700? They were just getting along as it was. McGann was there to explain that. Henry could pay for the lots at $15 a month. When he got them paid for the Marvel Home Builders would put up his house for him, one of the new patent houses, all cut to order. It was very cheap, and he could pay for that, too, on the installment plan. Much cheaper than the rent he was paying. Yes, they'd build him model chicken coops, too. Henry sighed and signed.

Tony Romagnoli signed for $800, in addition to the $400 he had supposedly won. He did it in spite of his seven children and the eternal struggle with an empty purse. And the clever Mrs. Minninger was shown two slightly inferior lots for $1500. She was allowed $400 for the lot she'd won and $100 more to satisfy her love of a bargain, so that she paid only $1000 for a bit of such land as cost the poor Jones' $700.

By 2 o'clock the Sunday's work was done, and the happy sold and selling went back to New York. G. Richquick left them at the pier to step into his $6000 car. He waved an oily hand at them as he was whirled away, emitting cigar smoke and a dense, if impalpable, cloud of garlic breath and sachet. Business was good, he told the girl out of the Follies when he met her for tea at 4. He gave her some of Henry Jones' and Tony Romagnoli's money. She needed new garter buckles.

Praxiteles McGann was himself in a gay mood. By selling to the Joneses and Romagnoli he had brought a prospective $1500 into the firm. That meant $375 for him, for he was to get one-fourth of all payments as further commission. Every month when these poor fellows paid their installments he would receive one-fourth. He calculated that if he could make two or three such sales a week over a period of a few months, he'd soon have a fat regular income, all clear and no longer to be worked for. He went to the bootlegger's and paid $30 for two bottles of doubtful Scotch. During the evening he drank himself gayly drunk. He felt himself entitled to a spree.

After McGann's prosperity had endured a few months there came a sudden activity on the part of the District Attorney. Some indictments followed. McGann woke up to the danger and enormity of his doing and promptly resigned. After he left his first concern he took employment with a second, whose manager assured him that his company was "on the level." McGann soon found that the scheme of the Marvel Home Builders had been altered just enough to fool further boobs. Instead of asking $48.50 to perfect the title and get the deed, this new concern simply offered a $400 lot for $47.50 to the lucky winners. Instead of making the affair a straight lottery the new concern has its agents tell the new dupes that they are being given the $400 lot so cheaply because their names are wanted for purposes of advertising in the neighborhood. This scheme is said to work even better than the first. At least a score of concerns are operating this low form of confidence game.

The cheat is not absolute, but it is so nearly so that there is no moral and probably no legal difference. Lots which have been sold for from $250 to $500 each have been cut from land worth not more than $50 to $60 per acre. The true value of these lots was, at this rate, $2.50 to $3 each. The poor dupe pays his enormous price for them and it takes him five to seven years to do it. At the end of that time he owns a bit of the open country. No streets are laid, no sewage system has been installed, no water or gas or light provided. For all this he must still pay, provided there are enough of his fellow victims to start a settlement. The probabilities are that his land simply lies there. His dream of a home takes wing. He has put his years' hoardings into this sad devil's acre.

The men who promote these things are bland and sometimes defiant. They say that there is no fraud committed and no crime. They do sell something for a great deal more than it's worth. Free to admit it. So does every merchant. Who can establish definitely what profit is legitimate? The United States Supreme Court has decided that it can't be done. (Opinion on the Lever act.) Buying very low and selling very high is honest and straight. Such is the defense of these gentlemen. What they do, they say, is just business.

Well—perhaps it is.

The famous "river of doubt," which was explored by Col. Roosevelt, was named in his honor Rio Theodoro. By a decision of the Geographical Society of Rio de Janeiro its name has just been changed to Rio Roosevelt.

Skull of prehistoric man discovered in Rhodesia said to resemble that of Pithecanthropus, the ape-man, and may throw light on origin of human race—Some of the remarkable developments in evolution idea since Darwin's time—The romance of the five anthropoid brothers, as related by a descendant of one of them

MAN is too busy making history to give much attention to the history of the remote past. Otherwise, a discovery reported a few days ago from South Africa might have created a profound impression upon the world. This was the finding of a skull which may prove to be the oldest known relic of man on this planet.

"It was found in Rhodesia," says a special cable, "60 feet below water level, under a tangle of fossilized bones of animals. The skull resembles that dug up by Prof. Dubois in Java, in 1894. Unlike that specimen, the entire facial region came out intact. Some of the general bones of the skeleton also were found."

These facts may not seem highly important to the general reader, but to men engaged in reconstructing the history of man from the fragments which have come out of the past, they are of mighty and portentous significance.

The Javanese specimen referred to is nothing less than the famous "Pithecanthropus Erectus," which, until this time, has remained the oldest known relic of prehistoric man, and, consequently, the most valuable. If the experts find that the new discovery justifies the foregoing claims, it undoubtedly will take rank beside Pithecanthropus in its value for shedding light upon the evolutionary history of the human race.

In a bantering lecture delivered in St. Louis last March, G. K. Chesterton, famous British author and wit, remarked that "about the only thing people don't seem to know about the 'missing link' is that it is missing." Upon which the comment later was made that the most important element missing from Chesterton's witticism was that of truth.

While attending a meeting of scientific men in this city last year, Prof. Ales Hrdlicka, chief anthropologist of the National Museum at Washington, made this statement: "The so-called 'missing link' hasn't been missing for a good many years. Pithecanthropus is precisely midway between man and the chimpanzee."

Unfortunately for knowledge, the fossilized remains of man thus far found are extremely scarce, of which an explanation will be given later. The most important relics, and the approximate ages calculated for them by scientists, are listed as follows:

Pithecanthropus—500,000 years.
Heidelberg Man—350,000 years.
Neanderthal Man—150,000 years.
Piltdown Man—100,000 years.
Cro-Magnon Man—50,000 years.

The means by which these ages are calculated are various. The most important element usually is the geological strata. It is possible to determine, approximately, the time at which certain important changes occurred on the earth's surface. The results of these changes are marked by the strata of the earth. When bones are found in recognized strata, the calculation is comparatively easy.

As pointed out by the London Times, the fact that the bones recently discovered were 60 feet below the sea level, and were under a layer of fossilized animal remains, is a strong evidence of their antiquity. But there are numerous other tests which will be applied to determine their approximate age.

Not since the Piltdown skull was resurrected in Surrey, England, in 1912, has the scientific world received such a promising object of study as the Rhodesia skull. Moreover, if it is found that the skull is actually contemporary with, or antedates, Pithecanthropus, the importance of the discovery far overshadows the Piltdown find, which had been the most recent of the epochal discoveries.

Pithecanthropus, "the ape-man," was found in Trinil, Java, on the Solo River. The skull was characterized by its limited capacity—about two-thirds that of man, and by the low, flat forehead and beetling brows. The brain was not only limited in total size, but especially so in the frontal lobes, which are the seat of the higher intellectual faculties.

From the contour it was deduced that touch, taste and vision were well developed, but that there was a limited capacity for profiting from experience and tradition. From the length of the thigh bone it was calculated that the height was approximately 5 feet 7 inches. The teeth were apelike, but the human mode of mastication, which is different from that of apes, had been acquired.

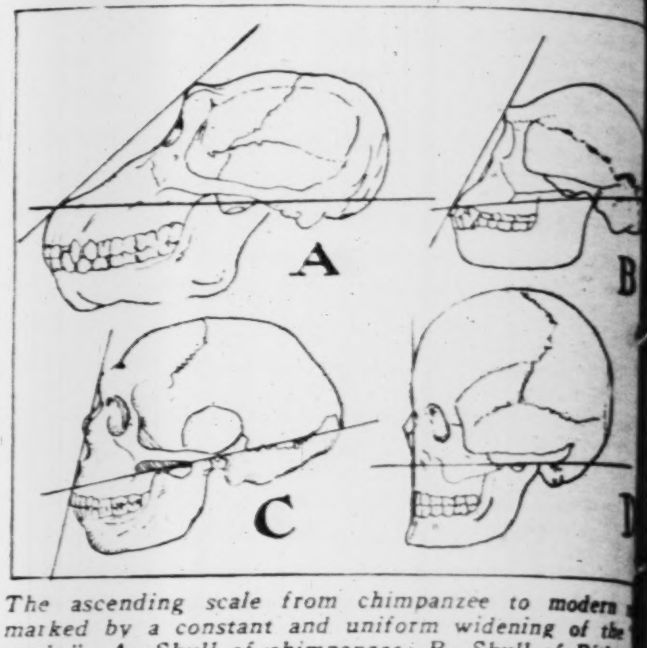
Anthropologists do not believe that Pithecanthropus was in the direct line of human descent, but a transition type between ape and man; in other words, that he is not the direct ancestor of man, but, in fact, is exactly what Dr. Hrdlicka called him—"the missing link that is no longer missing." Some scientists have argued that he was more ape than man, others that he was more man than ape; but the majority have concluded that he was no more one than the other; hence the term "ape-man" is not imaginative, but literal.

In the Heidelberg Man the experts present the oldest authentic relic over whose species there is no dispute. They are practically unanimous that he was a man. The fragment, that of a jawbone, was taken from 79 feet below the sands of a river near Heidelberg, Germany, in 1907.

The jaw showed a combination of features never found in any fossilized or recent man. The protrusion of the lower jaw which forms the chin in man was entirely lacking. "Had the teeth been absent," said Prof. Schoetensack, who discovered it, "it would have been impossible to diagnose it as a man. The absolute certainty that it is human is based on the teeth—molars, premolars, canines and incisors being essentially human."

Of the next group, the Neanderthaloid, there are several specimens extant. The first was found in a limestone cavern near Dusseldorf, Germany, in 1857. It was seriously injured by its finders, and for many years was without honor, even so great a genius as Virchow attributing its "deformities" to disease. Not until several other specimens were found near Spy, Belgium, was its significance realized and stated by Thomas Huxley. Subsequently, Neanderthal men were found in France, Croatia and Gibraltar.

Of their characteristics, Huxley said: "The anatomical characters of the skeletons bear out conclusions which are not flattering to the appearance of the owners. They were short of stature, but powerfully built, with strong, curiously curved thigh bones, the lower ends of which are so fashioned that they must have walked with a bend at the knees. Their long, depressed skulls had very strong brow ridges; their jaws, of brutal depth and solidity, sloped aw the teeth, downward and backward, in conseq the absence of chins."



The ascending scale from chimpanzee to modern marked by a constant and uniform widening of the angle." A—Skull of chimpanzee; B—Skull of Pithec pus; C—Neanderthal Man; D—Man of today.

The abundance of specimens—nearly all take caves—made possible a far more complete study Neanderthal man than of his predecessors, many conclusions were drawn. For examp while the brain was much larger than that of thropoid ape, its general characteristics were those of ape than man. The average stature of specimens was 5 feet 3 inches, ranging from inches to 5 feet 5 inches.

"He seems," says Prof. Richard Swann Lull University, "to have been an actual lineal the man of Heidelberg, but was, throughout career, an unprogressive, static race. One of remarkable features in connection with this ever, was the very reverent way in which the buried, with an abundance of ornaments and worked flints. Neanderthal race existed on earth for a long time, the period being estimated at something like 100,000 years.

Their extinction may have been a natural development, or it may have been due to the appearance of a far superior race—the Cro-Magnon, to which we now come. The original finds of these specimens were made in Wales and in France. In the latter place 17 skeletons were taken from a cave, but, before science could intervene, the local authorities had interred them in a village cemetery, and they were lost.

Later, however, five other skeletons were found at Cro-Magnon, France, and thus was the race established. These specimens consisted of an old man, two young men, a woman and a child. It was a truly magnificent race. The stature of the old man was 6 feet 4 1-2 inches, the average for the male being over 6 feet 1 inch. The lower segments of the limbs were long, thus proving that the men of Cro-Magnon were fleet of foot, compared to the clumsy Neanderthal men. Not only was the brain of very high type, but, in volume, that of the woman exceeded the average male's of today.

It is certain that the latter part of the period of the Neanderthal men overlapped the earlier period of the Cro-Magnon race, and, as they lived in the same locality, the Cro-Magnons are under suspicion of having exterminated their more primitive brethren. Prof. Lull declares that survivors of the Cro-Magnon strain may be seen today at Garonne, in Southern France, and at Dordogne, in Brittany, although the ages of the skeletons are estimated at 25,000 to 50,000 years.

Because of its real or seeming conflict with other deep-seated beliefs, the doctrine of evolution has had a rough-and-tumble existence at the hands of the public. Its reception by scientific men has been less difficult. "Nevertheless," remarks an authority on the subject, "when we consider the amazing light which it throws on pre-human existence, it is astonishing that so little is known—or, rather, that so much is 'known' that isn't true."

Evolution is regarded by some as a doctrine which Darwin advanced, and which remains much as he left it. Others have been told that it has been discredited among scientific men. The latest standard book on the subject, published only a few weeks ago, is by Prof. Horatio Hackett Newman of the University of Chicago, who has this to say:

"Charles Darwin is without question the foremost figure in the development of the evolution idea, and probably in the development of science in general. The publication of his book, 'The Origin of the Species,' was the most important event in the history of biology. * * * He was the first to furnish a really adequate proof of the fact of evolution, and his * * * theory was supported by a mass of systematically arranged data such as has been paralleled neither before nor since. He was the first to employ the * * * method of everywhere seeking facts first, and then devising theories to fit the facts. He never allowed speculation to outstrip observation."

Prof. Hrdlicka, when in St. Louis, said: "No scientific man of any standing would dream of questioning the evolution doctrine now. Darwin gave it the first great impetus, but since his time the evidence has multiplied a hundred times. The proof lies not in one science, but in several."

Nevertheless, Darwin was by no means the first to speculate on the possibility that man was descended from a lower order of creatures. Anaximander, a Greek, who lived 611-547 B. C., has been called the prophet of evolution. Says Prof. Newman: "He conceived the idea of a gradual evolution from a formless or chaotic condition to one of organic coherence. He saw vaguely the idea of transformation of aquatic species into terrestrial, even deriving man from aquatic, fishlike men, who were able to emerge from the water only after they had undergone the necessary changes required for land life. This idea involves that of adaptation, one of the corner stones of the modern evolutionary structure."

Other of the ancient Greeks speculated along the same line, and from time to time the question arose until the time of Lamarck, who immediately preceded Darwin. Since the latter, the greatest contributions have been made by August Weismann, who died in 1914. Weismann's course of injuiry was in the domain of life cells and germ cells, and some of his conclusions differ in important particulars from those of Darwin, although not, of course, departing from the main evolution idea itself. Throughout the world hundreds of scientists have contributed, in bits larger or smaller, to the now gigantic structure of evolutionary knowledge.

Of the more recent observations, highly important are those of Dr. Lull of Yale, published in 1917. He presents this outline: That a certain animal, probably a sort of hybrid between a lemur and a mongoose, gave rise to five distinct strains of anthropoids. All five are living now, he says, and they are: the gibbon, orang, chimpanzee, gorilla and Hominidae. Specimens of the first four may be seen in large zoos; specimens of the fifth may be seen in any mirror.

He is "disposed to think of the hybrid ancestor as * * * rather catholic in its tastes, living partly among and partly in the trees, with sharp nose, bright eyes and a shrewd little brain behind them, looking out from a perch among the branches, upon a world that was to be singularly kind to it and its descendants."

Certainly, if the hypothesis be true, strange things have transpired since that little hybrid's five sons set out to make their way in the world. It has been a struggle lasting millions of years. And the result? If we accept the theory, the result can be nothing less than this: That four of the brothers are still roaming the jungle or occupying cages, while the fifth writes articles about them and observes their antics.

Well, if we must talk about each other, here goes: The gibbon is the smallest one of the family in every respect but his arms, which are of enormous length, a direct result of his means of aerial locomotion, which consists of swinging from one bough to another. A gibbon has been known to toss himself 40 feet through the air in this manner.

The orang is the loafer of the outfit. He builds a platform in a tree, and sleeps on it except when moving around to get food or escape danger. This is not such an inhuman characteristic, either.

The chimpanzee, with one exception, is the most intelligent member of the family. It is almost as agile as the gibbon, and is larger. The resemblance to the fifth brother is more strongly marked in him than in any of the others.

The fifth brother. The symbolism of Rodin's great statue, "The Thinker," represents the difference between this one and the others There was something just a little different about his brain—and now he writes articles about the others, and builds cages for them.

The gorilla, who bullies all his brothers save one.

The chimpanzee, in some respects the best behaved of the five, who doubtless is ashamed of the whole lot at times.

Jack Frost Not as Bad as He's Painted

Cold weather does not retard plant growth but stimulates it, according to scientists who have conducted interesting experiments — Dormant period evidently is a seasonal matter, and normal budding does not occur except after period of chilling temperature—Latest theory is that cold weakens the plant cells, turns part of the starch to sugar and thus stimulates growth — This explains how nature protects vegetation from the brief warmth of "Indian summer"

By ROBERT H MOULTON

THE scientists are upsetting many of our popular notions nowadays. The latest theory they have exploded has to do with the effect of cold upon plant life in our Northern states. We have always believed that Jack Frost was the arch enemy of plant life, and that if it were not for him we would have flowers and fruits and grasses perhaps all the year round.

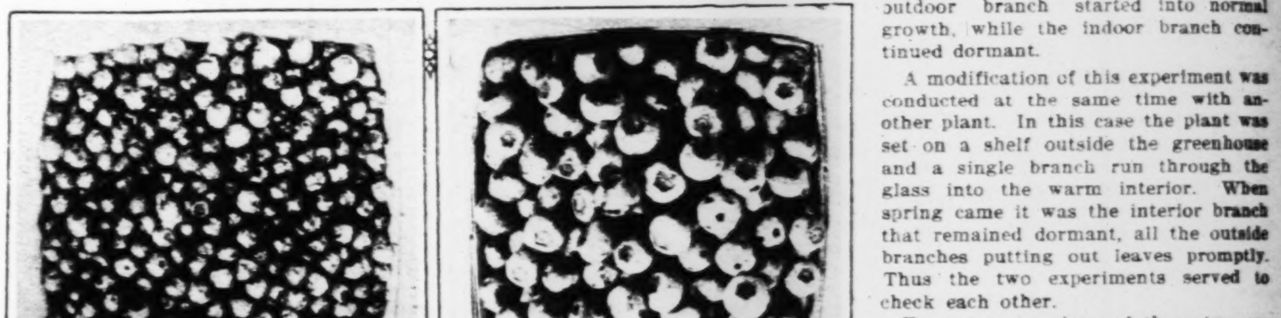
The scientists now tell us that Jack is in the main a beneficent old fellow. They admit that if he comes too early or stays too late his visit is likely to prove embarrassing. Yet if he did not come at all, which means if we did not have any cold weather, the majority of plants in our northern latitudes would show little if any growth in the spring.

It is hard to believe that the effect of cold is to stimulate rather than retard plant growth, but that is what we are now informed actually happpens. Experts of the Department of Agriculture are responsible for this revolutionary theory. They back up the theory with the results of numerous experiments.

Trailing arbutus which flowered sparingly because it had not passed through period of chilling

Trailing arbutus which flowered in normal fashion after usual period of chilling.

One fact stands clear in these experiments: the dormant condition of certain plants in winter is not the result of cold and freezing; on the other hand, cold stimulates the revival of life in the plant when spring comes. Such an explanation of the effect of cold is new to the everyday reader, who is used to looking upon winter air as detrimental to plant life, forcing the shrub into a dormant state scarcely better than death. But healthy, husky blueberries which were in a Government greenhouse "went to sleep" just the same, despite the fact that the air was kept at a growing temperature.



At left, blueberries of ordinary size, before Government experts started improving the fruit. At right, much larger and finer blueberries, produced as result of understanding principle of chilling.

The shrubs, it is true, did not go to bed so early as they did when Jack Frost used to hurry them off, but go to sleep they did. Their leaves dropped off, and in the warm greenhouse the plants went into a dormant condition exactly like that of the others outside in the cold and snow. Moreover, they were late in waking when spring came. Some, indeed, slept through the whole year. The inference is that the plant's period of dormancy is a seasonal matter not induced by the cold, but that the early and luxuriant growth cannot occur unless the plant has been through a period of chill temperature.

Two interesting experiments were conducted with blueberry plants as proof of this. In the middle of February a blueberry plant which had shed its leaves and become dormant in a warm greenhouse maintained at a temperature of 70 degrees was repotted and set in the south end of the greenhouse. A small opening was made in the glass, and through this opening one of the two stems of the plant was thrust, the open space about the stem where it passed through the glass being carefully plugged.

During the rest of the winter the plant remained in the same position, the pot and one stem continuing in the warm temperature of the greenhouse, while the other stem, projecting through the glass, was exposed to the rigors of winter, with its alternate freezing and thawing. About the middle of April the outdoor branch started into normal growth, while the indoor branch continued dormant.

A modification of this experiment was conducted at the same time with another plant. In this case the plant was set on a shelf outside the greenhouse and a single branch run through the glass into the warm interior. When spring came it was the interior branch that remained dormant, all the outside branches putting out leaves promptly. Thus the two experiments served to check each other.

From a comparison of these two experiments it is evident that the difference in behavior of the indoor and outdoor branches could not have been caused by any special action of the root system, for in one experiment the roots were inside and in the other out. It is clear that the causes that stimulated growth in the exposed stems operated in the stem itself, not in the roots. The theory is that the cold weakens the plant cells, and by destruction in part turns the starch to sugar, thus assuring new growth. This event, it is asserted, cannot take place if the plants are protected from frost and cellular injury.

A little consideration will show how important the principle of chilling is to those species of trees and shrubs which are subjected each year to several months of freezing weather. If they are so constituted as to start into growth as easily in the warm days of late fall as they do in the warm days of early spring, many species would come into flower and leaf in those warm autumn spells that we call Indian summer, and the stored food that the plant required for its normal vigorous growth in the following spring would be wasted in a burst of new autumn growth, which would be killed by the first heavy freezes and would be followed by a winter of weakness and probable death.

But when two or three months of chilling are necessary before a newly dormant plant will respond to the usual effect of warmth, such plants are protected against the dangers of growth in Indian summer. It is probable that all our native trees and shrubs are thus protected.

Anyone may make a simple and instructive experiment in the fall and winter with such early spring blooming plants as alder, hazelnut, pussy willow, yellow bush jasmine, forsythia, Japanese quince, peach and plum. In midautumn bring into your living room and set in water freshly-cut, dormant, leafless branches of these plants. They will not bloom. At intervals of a few weeks during the late autumn and winter try the same experiment again. It will be found that the branches cut at later dates will come into bloom under this treatment. They will not do so, however, until the expiration of the chilling period appropriate to the various kinds of plants included in the experiment.

It might be argued that in the tropics there is no chilling weather, yet that trees and shrubs spring into growth after the dormant period of the dry season just as they do in temperate climes after the dormant period of winter. The critical scientific man will there-ing, carrying little Edward. The elder woman, who says she had tried in vain to make young Farrington marry Loretta, had threatened to create a disturbance at the wedding between Farrington and Miss Hodson, although without any ill-feeling whatever toward the prospective bride.

Indeed, in interviews after the wedding and its sensational interruption had occurred, both Mrs. Rodden and her daughter expressed regret that their denunciation of Farrington had had to cause embarrassment to the bride, also.

Warned by Mrs. Rodden's threats, the families of the bridal pair had stationed six detectives at the main entrance of the church, to watch for Mrs. Rodden and her daughter and keep them from entering the edifice. Enter they did, however, and by the time the bridal party arrived at the church the mother and daughter, with baby Edward, were sitting in one of the front pews, distinctly a strategic position.

Mrs. Edward J. Farrington, bride who underwent unusual ordeal at marriage ceremony.

The innocent cause of it all, who was present at dramatic scene in church but did not know what it was all about.

Edward J. Farrington, the bridegroom who was denounced in church.

They had an unimpeded view of the bride entering on the arm of her father, the bridegroom and best man, the bridesmaids, flower girl and four clergymen. The familiar strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" had died away, the marriage ritual had been read, the bride and bridegroom had clasped hands, their responses had been made and the officiating clergyman was in the act of pronouncing them man and wife, when the moment of unexpected drama came.

Only a few paid any attention or even noticed when Mrs. Rodden and Loretta stood up in their pew, but at the older woman's command, "Stop!" they immediately became the center of attention. Every eye was turned from the bridal party to Mrs. Rodden and her daughter, and a tense silence reigned as the gray-haired, black-gowned woman advanced toward the bridal group, her accusing finger pointed first at Farrington, then at baby Edward.

What happened then has already been told, also the fact that statements could not be obtained from the Farrington or Hodson families. But here is what Mrs. Rodden and Loretta Rodden told newspaper men, in the modest flat which they occupy at New Haven, Conn. The girl is only 19 years old, the youngest of nine children, six girls and three boys.

Mrs. Rodden admitted that perhaps she had made a mistake in not previously registering her objections to the marriage between Farrington and Miss Hodson. For three successive Sundays prior to the wedding ceremony the banns were read in church, the form of which concludes with an invitation for anyone who knows of a reason why the marriage should not take place to "come forward now or hold your peace forever."

"I have avenged my little girl," declared Mrs. Rodden to a reporter. "Ed Farrington refused to give my poor Loretta the name that should be hers, even for the sake of that innocent child, who now must go through life nameless. Not that I wanted him for a son-in-law, but he should have done the right thing by Loretta.

"It was not until we had resorted to everything humanly possible to make Ed Farrington make amends that I determined to make a show of him at the wedding. The girl he married never did Loretta or me any harm, and I am deeply sorry for her. I regret that she was made to suffer, but her suffering is as nothing compared with that my poor Loretta has endured.

"For two years Ed Farrington was given every chance to make good the promise that resulted in my little girl's misstep. When I learned the truth I went to the Farringtons, father and son, and insisted that the wrong be made right. When they refused, I determined to proceed against him in the courts. Let me say that we want no part of the Farrington millions.

"Two years ago I had Ed Farrington put under bonds to insure the child's support. I did this only after he refused point blank to marry Loretta. The case was withdrawn after the elder Farrington informed me the notoriety would injure him in his political campaign."

The young mother of baby Edward is very youthful in appearance, and might pass for only 15 years old. Her brown hair is bobbed, and she has large, expressive blue eyes.

Miss Rodden said she was a student at St. John's School, in Watertown, where the Rodden family then lived, and Farrington was attending the Taft Prep School, when they first met. When Farrington finished his prep course and went to a university in Washington they kept up their warm friendship by correspondence, she related.

"There was no place in my heart for any other boy," she said. "And how happy I was when the holidays came around, so that he could come home from college. I always looked forward with great joy to think that he would be with me again.

"There was no happier girl in the world than I during those wonderful days. But then came the war, and Ed joined the army. He went to Plattsburg, won a Lieutenant's commission, and was assigned to Camp Lee, Va. It was while he was home on leave that we plighted our troth.

"But it would be hard for anyone to imagine my feelings when Ed told me that he couldn't marry me. I could hardly believe my ears. Everything seemed to grow black before me, but when I came to my reason I told myself that Ed couldn't be so cruel—he just couldn't let me face the world alone.

"Later came the announcement in the newspapers of the engagement of Ed and Margaret Hodson. Mother wrote to the girl's mother, who sent a curt note in reply, stating that she knew all about the affair with me. Mrs. Hodson explained in her letter that Ed, like many other youths, had sown his wild oats, and so far as she was concerned the matter was an incident to be forgotten. She concluded by stating that, no matter what had happened, Ed and Margaret loved each other and nothing would hinder their wedding.

"We again appealed to Ed's father, and he dismissed us with the statement that he would communicate with us later. But he never did."

Nine Centenarians, and All Are Feeling Fine

and a year later moved to Paris, only Paris was not there at that time. In 1873 he went to Brownwood and engaged in the cattle business. Brownwood wasn't there either, at that time, and when Judge Fisk, a pioneer, offered to trade him the townsite of Brownwood for a horse, Russell spurned the offer.

Moving to Coleman, Russell built the second house there, and later helped to lay out the town of Paint Rock, after which he went to San Marcos. Then he went to a ranch 20 miles from Lampasas, where he again became farmer and stockman, staying at it for 16 years and acquiring a fortune. Thirty years ago he moved to a farm five miles from Lampasas, where he since has resided. His first wife died in 1912.

Russell put up a monument six years ago in a cemetery at Lampasas which will mark his grave, but he has left a blank space for the date of his death, for he hasn't any idea of passing out yet and wants to put it off until he has located gold. His farm is undermined with caves, in which the aged prospector almost daily looks for ore.

S. S. McCathern, 100, of Elk City, Ok., who was a Texas Ranger in Hamilton County just after the Civil War, says he will live to be 130 years old. His grandmother was 115 when she died. Besides having been a Texas Ranger, he was in the Civil War, mixed in several Indian wars and took a hand in the Mexican quarrel. His wife lived to be 94 years old. McCathern is still able to get around and not long ago visited his son at Texola, Ok. His eyesight is good, but not his hearing.

J. S. Halstead of Breckenridge, Mo., despite his 103 years, still walks around the streets there and votes. In the national election last November he and his 93-year-old wife went to the polls arm in arm. He was a physician and is a native of Kentucky. For a time he was the family doctor of Henry Clay. He owns a tract of land at Breckenridge that was acquired direct from the Government, having gone there in the early days.

Mrs. Mary H. Sharp, 101, also is a native of Kentucky, having been born at Shelbyville on May 17, 1820. She now lives at Montgomery City, Mo. She was educated at Science Hall Seminary, at Shelbyville, at that time famous for the training it gave young women of aristocratic Southern families. At the age of 18 she became a teacher at Robinson's Ladies' Seminary, Danville, Mo.

It took her three weeks to go by steamer from Louisville to St. Louis, from which point she took stage for Danville, a 100-mile trip. Her maiden name was McGhee, and after one term of teaching she married a young doctor, Benjamin F. Sharp. She is the mother of nine children, five of whom are living. Mrs. Sharp is still able to read several hours daily. She attributes her longevity to plenty of work, plenty of play, cheerfulness and plain food. She has lived in her present homestead for more than 60 years.

Mrs. Ann Sisson, 102, of Mansfield, England, is ambitious to become an aviator. She already has taken 10 flights with a young expert and has learned all about the plane's mechanism. "I feel safer in a plane than in an automobile," she said. "My age doesn't matter; I feel as if I had just begun to live. I took my first air trip after I was 100. I love flying and it makes me feel years younger. I owe my vitality to keeping hard at work and being contented all my life."

Men and women in the United States who are between 90 and 100 are numerous enough to destroy the unusualness of that age, but there are two brothers in Houston, Tex., slightly under 100, who deserve mention. They are Lansing and Henry Grant, the former 98 and the latter 91 years old. Henry, a few days ago, came all the way from California to visit Lansing, whom he had not seen for 60 years, and Lansing, to celebrate the reunion, walked blithely into a barber shop and ordered the removal of his beard, which adorned his face for 60 years.

Experts declare that longevity belongs to no certain class and results from following no set rules. They say that centenarians may be found in both squalid and sanitary surroundings, and that many are illiterate. But the men and women discussed here have all come from good families, all have a basic education, have lived much of their lives outdoors, were temperate in habits and have kept themselves occupied. They are neither very wealthy nor very poor. None of these centenarians want an injection of monkey glands to become youthful again. They oppose artificial stimulant.

"It isn't how long we live but how we live," they declared. "Extending our lives 200 or 300 years might slow us down to the life of a turtle, and we prefer to live while we live."

PETER RUFF AND THE DOUBLE FOUR

Episode Number One

Introducing Mr. Peter Ruff

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

THERE was nothing about the supper party on that particular Sunday evening in November at Daisy Villa, Green street, Streatham, which seemed to indicate in any way that one of the most interesting careers connected with the world history of crime was to owe its very existence to the disaster which befell that little gathering. The villa was the residence and also—to his credit—the unmortgaged property of Mr. David Barnes, a struggling but fairly prosperous coal merchant of excellent character, some means and Methodist proclivities. His habit of sitting without his coat when carving, although deprecated by his wife and daughter on account of the genteel aspirations of the latter, was a not unusual one in the neighborhood; and coupled with the proximity of a cold joint of beef, his seat at the head of the table and a carving knife and fork grasped in his hands, established clearly the fact of his position in the household, which a somewhat weak physiognomy might otherwise have led the casual observer to doubt. Opposite him, at the other end of the table, sat his wife, Mrs. Barnes, a somewhat voluminous lady with a high color, a black satin frock and many ornaments. On her left the son of the house, 18 years old, of moderate stature, somewhat pimply, with the fashion of the moment reflected in his pink tie with white spots, drawn through a gold ring, and curving outward to seek obscurity underneath a dazzling waistcoat. A white tuberose in his buttonhole might have been intended as a sort of compliment to the occasion, or an indication of his intention to take a walk after supper in the fashionable purlieus of the neighborhood. Facing him sat his sister—a fluffy-haired, blue-eyed young lady, pretty in her way, but chiefly noticeable for a peculiar sort of self-consciousness blended with self-satisfaction, and possessed only at a certain period in their lives by young ladies of her age. It was almost the air of a cat in whose interior reposes the missing canary, except that in this instance the canary obviously existed in the person of the young man who sat at her side, introduced formally to the household for the first time. The young man's name was—at the moment—Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald.

It seems idle to attempt any description of a person who, in the past, had secured a certain amount of fame under a varying personality; and who, in the future, was to become more than ever notorious under a far less aristocratic pseudonym than that by which he was at present known to the inhabitants of Daisy Villa. There are photographs of him in New York and Paris, St. Petersburg and Chicago, Vienna and Cape Town, but there are no two pictures which present to the casual observer the slightest likeness to one another. To allude to him by the name under which he had won some part, at least, of the affections of Miss Maud Barnes, Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald, as he sat there, a suitor on probation for her hand, was a young man of modest and genteel appearance. He wore a blue serge suit—a little underdressed for the occasion, perhaps; but his tie and collar were neat; his gold-rimmed spectacles—if a little disapproved of by Maud on account of the air of steadiness which they imparted—suggested excellent son-in-law-like qualities to Mr. and Mrs. Barnes. He had the promise of a fair mustache, but his complexion generally was colorless. His features, except for a certain regularity, were undistinguished. His speech was modest and correct. His manner varied with his company. Tonight it had been pronounced, by excellent judges, genteel.

The conversation consisted—naturally enough, under the circumstances—of a course of subtle and judicious pumping, tactfully prompted, for the most part, by Mrs. Barnes. Such, for instance, as the following:

"Talking about Marie Corelli's new book reminds me, Mr. Fitzgerald—your occupation is connected with books, is it not?" his prospective mother-in-law inquired, artlessly.

Mr. Fitzgerald bowed assent.

"I am cashier at Howell & Wilson's in Cheapside," he said. "We sell a great many books there—as many, I should think, as any retail establishment in London."

"Indeed!" Mrs. Barnes purred. "Very interesting work, I am sure. So nice and intellectual, too; for, of course, you must be looking inside them sometimes."

"I know the place well," Mr. Adolphus Barnes Jr. announced, condescendingly. "Pass it every day on my way to lunch."

"So much nicer," Mrs. Barnes continued, "than any of the ordinary businesses—grocery or drapery, or anything of that sort."

Miss Maud elevated her eyebrows slightly. Was it likely that she would have looked with eyes of favor upon a young man engaged in any of these inferior occupations?

"There is money in books, too," Mr. Barnes declared, with sudden inspiration.

His prospective son-in-law turned towards him deferentially.

"You are right, sir," he admitted. "There is money in them for those who write, and there's money for those who sell. My occupation," with a modest little cough, "brings me often into touch with publishers, travelers and clerks, so I am, as it were, behind the scenes to some extent. I can assure you," he continued, looking from Mr. Barnes to his wife, and finally transfixing Mr. Adolphus—"I can assure you that the money paid by some firms of publishers to a few well-known authors—I will mention no names—as advances against royalties, is something stupendous!"

"Ah!" Mr. Barnes murmured, solemnly shaking his head.

"Marie Corelli, I expect, and that Hall Caine," remarked young Adolphus.

"Seems easy enough to write a book, too," Mrs. Barnes said. "Why, I declare that some of those we get from the library—we subscribe to the library, Mr. Fitzgerald—are just as simple and straightforward that a child might have written them. No plot whatsoever, no murders or mysteries or anything of that sort—just stories about people like ourselves. I don't see how they can pay people for writing stories about people like those one meets every day!"

"I always say," Maud intervened, "that Spencer means to write a book someday. He has quite the literary air, hasn't he, mother?"

"Indeed he has!" Mrs. Barnes declared, with an appreciative glance at the gold-rimmed spectacles.

Mr. Fitzgerald modestly disclaimed any literary aspirations.

"The thing is a gift, after all," he declared, generously. "I can keep accounts, and earn a fair salary at it, but if I attempted fiction I should soon be up a tree."

Mr. Barnes nodded his approval of such sentiments.

"Everyone to his trade, I say," he remarked. "What sort of salaries do they pay now in the book trade?" he asked, guilelessly.

"Very fair," Mr. Fitzgerald admitted candidly—"very fair indeed."

"When I was your age," Mr. Barnes said, reflectively, "I was getting—let me see—42 shillings a week. Pretty good pay for those days."

Mr. Fitzgerald admitted the fact.

"Of course," he said, apologetically, "salaries are a little higher now all around. Mr. Howell has been very kind to me—in fact, I have had two rises this year. I am getting 4 pounds 10 now."

"Four pounds 10 per week?" Mrs. Barnes exclaimed, laying down her knife and fork.

"Certainly," Mr. Fitzgerald answered. "After Christmas, I have some reason to believe that it may be 5 pounds."

Mr. Barnes whistled softly, and looked at the young man with a new respect.

"I told you that—Mr.—that Spencer was doing pretty well, mother," Maud simpered, looking down at her plate.

"Anyone to support?" her father asked, transferring a pickle from the fork to his mouth.

"No one," Mr. Fitzgerald answered. "In fact, I may say that I have some small expectations. I haven't done badly, either, out of the few investments I have made from time to time."

"Saved a bit of money, eh?" Mr. Barnes inquired, genially.

"I have a matter of 400 pounds put by," Mr. Fitzgerald admitted modestly, "besides a few sticks of furniture. I never cared much about lodging-house things, so I furnished a couple of rooms myself some time ago."

Mrs. Barnes rose slowly from the table.

"You are quite sure you won't have a small piece more of beef?" she inquired, anxiously.

"Just a morsel?" Mr. Barnes asked, tapping the joint insinuatingly with his carving knife.

"No, I thank you!" Mr. Fitzgerald declared, firmly. "I have done excellently."

"Then if you will put the joint on the sideboard, Adolphus," Mrs. Barnes directed, "Maud and I will change the plates. We always let the girl go out on Sundays, Mr. Fitzgerald," she explained, turning to their guest. "It's very awkward, of course, but they seem to expect it."

"Quite natural, I'm sure," Mr. Fitzgerald murmured, watching Maud's light movements with admiring eyes. "I like to see ladies interested in domestic work."

"There's one thing I will say for Maud," her proud mother declared, plumping down a dish of jelly upon the table, "she does know what's what in keeping house, and even if she hasn't to scrape and save as I did when David and I were first married, economy is a great thing when you're young. I have always said so, and I stick to it."

"Quite right, mother," Mr. Barnes declared.

"If, instead of sitting there," Mrs. Barnes continued, in high good humor, "you were to get a bottle of that port wine out of the cellarette, we might drink Mr. Fitzgerald's health, being as it's his first visit."

Mr. Barnes rose to his feet with alacrity. "For a woman with sound ideas," he declared, "commend me to your mother!"

Maud, having finished her duties, resumed her place by the side of the guest of the evening. Their hands met under the table for a moment. To the girl, the pleasure of such a proceeding was natural enough, but Fitzgerald asked himself for the fiftieth time why on earth he, who, notwithstanding his present modest exterior, was a young man of some experience, should from such a primitive love making derive a rapture which nothing else in life afforded him. He was, at that moment, content with his future—a future which he had absolutely and finally decided upon. He was content with his father-in-law and his mother-in-law, with Daisy Villa, and the prospect of a Daisy Villa for himself—content even with Adolphus! But for Mr Spencer Fitzgerald, these things were not to be! The awakening was even then at hand.

The dining room of Daisy Villa fronted the street, and was removed from it only a few feet. Consequently, the footsteps of passers by upon the flagged pavement were clearly distinguishable. It was just at the moment when Mrs. Barnes was inserting a few fresh almonds into a somewhat precarious cake, and Mr. Barnes was engaged with the decanting of the port, that two pair of footsteps, considerably heavier than those of the ordinary promenader, paused outside and finally stopped. The gate creaked. Mr. Barnes looked up.

"Hullo!" he exclaimed. "What's that? Visitors?"

They all listened. The front-door bell rang. Adolphus, in response to a gesture from his mother, rose sulkily to his feet.

"Job I hate!" he muttered as he left the room.

The rest of the family, full of the small curiosity of people of their class, were intent upon listening for voices outside. The demeanor of Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald, therefore, escaped their notice. It is doubtful, in any case, whether their perceptions would have been sufficiently keen to have enabled them to trace the workings of emotion in the countenance of a person so magnificently endowed by Providence with the art of subterfuge. Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald seemed simply to have stiffened into acute and earnest attention. It was only for a moment that he hesitated. His unfailing inspiration told him the truth.

His course of action was simple—he rose to his feet and strolled to the window.

"Some people who have lost their way in the fog, perhaps," he remarked. "What a night!"

He laid his hand upon the sash—simultaneously there was a rush of cold air into the room, a half-angry, half-frightened exclamation from Adolphus in the passage, a scream from Miss Maud—and no Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald! No one had time to be more than blankly astonished. The door was opened and a police inspector, in very nice dark braided uniform and a peaked cap, stood in the doorway.

Mr. Barnes dropped the port, and Mrs. Barnes, emulating her daughter's example, screamed. The inspector, as though conscious of the draft, moved rapidly toward the window.

"You had a visitor here, Mr. Barnes," he said, quickly, "a Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald. Where is he?"

There was no one who could answer! Mr. Barnes was speechless between the shock of the spilt port and the appearance of a couple of uniformed policemen in his dining room. John Dory, the detective, he knew well enough in his private capacity, but in his uniform, and attended by policemen, he presented a new and startling appearance! Mrs. Barnes was in hysterics, and Maud was gazing like a creature turned to stone at the open window, through which little puffs of fog were already drifting into the room. Adolphus, with an air of bewilderment, was standing with his mouth and eyes wider open than they had ever been in his life. And as for the honored guest of these admirable inhabitants of Daisy Villa, there was not the slightest doubt but that Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald had disappeared through the window!

• • • • • • • •

Fitzgerald's expedition was nearly at an end. Soon he paused, crossed the road to a block of flats, ascended to the eighth floor by an automatic lift, and rang the bell at a door which simply bore the number 11. A trim parlor maid opened it after a few minutes' delay.

"Is Miss Emerson at home?" he asked.

"Miss Emerson is in," the maid admitted, with some hesitation, "but I am not sure that she will see anyone tonight."

"I have a message for her," Fitzgerald said.

"Will you give me your name, sir, please?" the maid asked.

An inner door was suddenly opened. A slim girl, looking taller than she really was by reason of the rug upon which she stood, looked out into the hall—a girl with masses of brown hair loosely coiled on her head, with pale face and strange eyes. She opened her lips as though to call her visitor by name, and as suddenly closed them again. There was not much expression in her face, but there was enough to show that his visit was not unwelcome.

"You!" she exclaimed. "Come in! Please come in at once!"

Fitzgerald obeyed the invitation of the girl whom he had come to visit. She had retreated a little into the room, but the door was no sooner closed than she held out her hands.

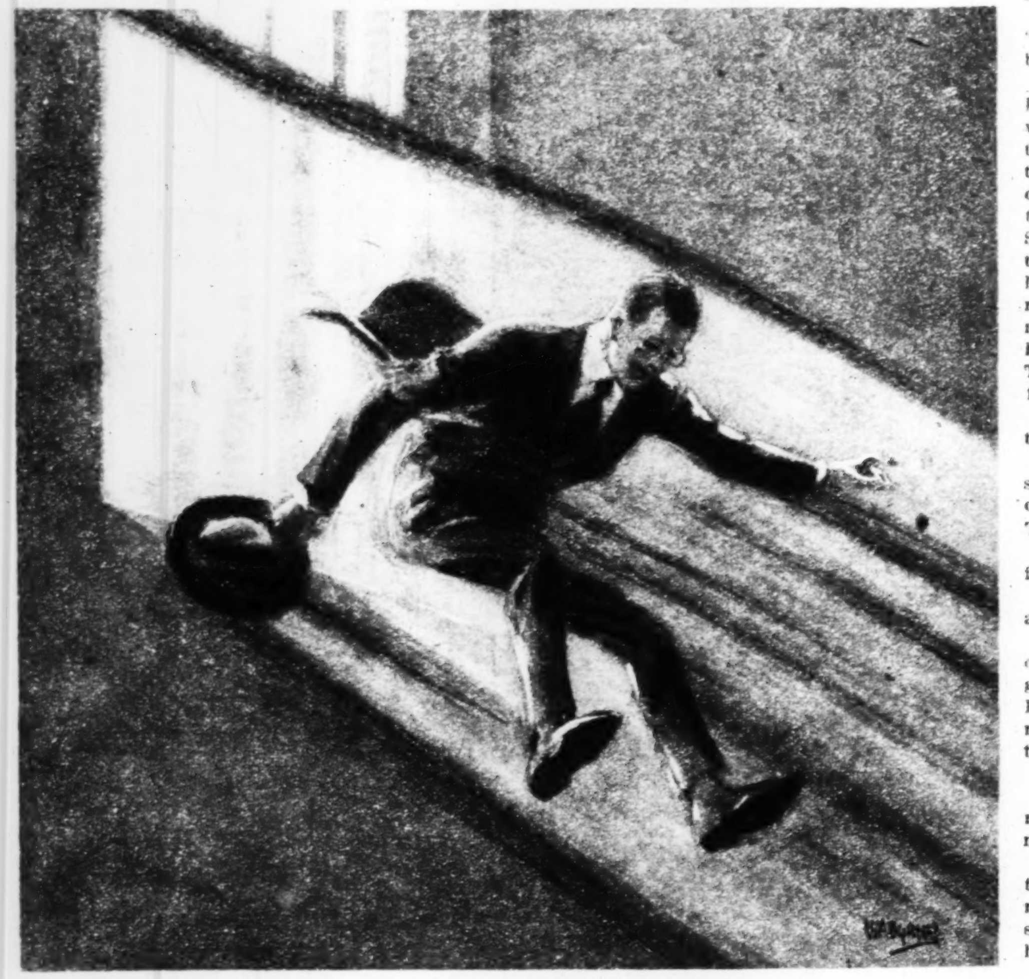
"Peter!" she exclaimed. "Peter, you have come to me at last!"

Her lips were a little parted; her eyes were bright with pleasure; her whole expression was one of absolute delight. Fitzgerald frowned, as though he found her welcome a little too enthusiastic for his taste.

"Violet," he said, "please don't look at me as though I were a prodigal sheep. If you do, I shall be sorry that I came."

Her hands fell to her side, the pleasure died out of her face—only her eyes still questioned him. Fitzgerald carefully laid his hat on a vacant chair.

"Something has happened?" she said. "Tell me that all that madness is over—that you are yourself again!"



Mr. Spencer Fitzgerald had disappeared through the window.

"So far as regards my engagement with Messrs. Howell & Wilson," he said, despondently, "you are right. As regards—Miss Barnes, there has been no direct misunderstanding between us, but I am afraid, for the present that I must consider that—well, in abeyance."

"That is something!" she exclaimed, drawing a little breath of relief. "Sit down, Peter. Will you have something to eat? I finished dinner an hour ago, but"——

"Thank you," Fitzgerald interrupted, "I supped—extremely well in Streatham!"

"In Streatham!" she repeated. "Why, how did you get there? The fog is awful."

"Fogs do not trouble me," Fitzgerald answered. "I walked. I could have done it as well blindfold. I will take a whisky and soda, if I may."

She led him to an easy chair.

"I will mix it myself," she said.

Without being remarkably good looking, Violet was certainly a pleasant and attractive-looking young woman. Her cheeks were a little pale; her hair—perfectly natural—was a wonderful deep shade of soft brown. Her eyes were long and narrow—almost Oriental in shape—and they seemed in some queer way to match the room; he could have sworn that in the firelight they flashed green. Her body and limbs, notwithstanding their extreme slightness, were graceful, perhaps, but with the grace of a tigress. She wore a green silk dressing jacket, pulled together with a belt of lizard skin, and her neck was bare. Her skirt was of some thin black material. She was obviously in dishabille, and yet there was something neat and trim about the smaller details of her toilette.

"Go on, please, Peter," she begged. "You are keeping me in suspense."

"There isn't much to tell," he answered. "It's over—that's all."

She drew a sharp breath through her teeth.

"You are not going to marry that girl—that bourgeois doll in Streatham?"

Fitzgerald sat up in his chair.

"Look here," he said, seriously, "don't you call her names. If I'm not going to marry her, it isn't my fault. She is the only girl I have ever wanted, and probably—most probably—she will be the only one I ever shall want. That's honest, isn't it?"

The girl winced.

"Yes," she said, "it is honest!"

"I should have married her," the young man continued, "and I should have been happy. I had my eye on a villa—not too near her parents—and I saw my way to a little increase of salary. I should have taken to gardening, to walks in the park, with an occasional theater, and I should have enjoyed a fortnight every summer at Skegness or Sutton-on-Sea. We should have saved a little money. I should have gone to church regularly, and if possible I should have filled some minor public offices. You may call this bourgeois—it was my idea of happiness."

"Was!" she murmured.

"is still," he declared, sharply, "but I shall never attain to it. Tonight I had to leave Maud—to leave the supper table of Daisy Villa—through the window!"

She looked at him in amazement.

"The police," he explained. "That brute Dory was at the bottom of it."

"But surely," she murmured, "you told me that you had a bonafide situation"——

"So I had," he declared, "and I was a fool not to be content with it. It was my habit of taking long country walks, and their rotten auditing, which undid me! You understand that this was all before I met Maude. Since the day I spoke to her I turned over a new leaf. I have left the night work alone, and I repaid every penny of the firm's money which they could ever have possibly found out about. There was only that one little affair of mine down at Sudbury."

"Tell me what you are going to do?" she whispered.

"I have no alternative," he answered. "The law has kicked me out from the respectable places. The law shall pay!"

She looked at him with glowing eyes.

"Have you any plans?" she asked, softly.

"I have," he answered. "I have considered the subject from a good many points of view, and I have decided to start in business for myself as a private detective."

She raised her eyebrows.

"My dear Peter!" she murmured. "Couldn't you be a little more original?"

"That is only what I am going to call myself," he answered. "I may tell you that I am going to strike out on somewhat new lines."

"Please explain," she begged.

He recrossed his knees and made himself a little more comfortable.

"The weak part of every great robbery, however successful," he began, "is the great wastage in value which invariably results. For jewels which cost—say 5000 pounds, and to procure which the artist has to risk his life as well as his liberty, he has to consider himself lucky if he clears eight hundred. For the Hermitage rubies, for instance, where I nearly had to shoot a man dead, I realized rather less than 400 pounds. It doesn't pay."

"Go on," she begged.

"I am not clear," he continued, "how far this class of business will attract me at all, but I do not propose, in any case, to enter into any transactions on my own account. I shall work for other people, and for cash down. Your experience of life, Violet, has been fairly large. Have you not sometimes come into contact with people driven into a situation from which they would willingly commit any crime to escape, if they dared? It is not with them a question of money at all—it is simply a matter of ignorance. They do not know how to commit a crime. They have had no experience, and if they attempt it, they know perfectly well that they are likely to blunder. A person thoroughly experienced in the ways of criminals—a person of genius like myself—would have, without a doubt, an immense clientele, if only he dared put up his signboard. Literally, I cannot do that. Actually, I mean to do so! I shall be willing to accept contracts either to help nervous people out of an undesirable crisis; or, on the other hand, to measure my wits against the wits of Scotland Yard, and to discover the criminals whom they have failed to secure. I shall make my own bargain, and I shall be paid in cash. I shall take on nothing that I am not certain about."

"But your clients?" she asked, curiously. "How will you come into contact with them?"

He smiled.

"I am not afraid of business being slack," he said. "The world is full of fools."

"You cannot live outside the law, Peter," she objected. "You are clever, I know, but they are not all fools at Scotland Yard."

"You forget," he reminded her, "that there will be a perfectly legitimate side of my profession. The other sort of case I shall only accept if I can see my way clear to make a success of it. Needless to say, I shall there are with the active army 292 field guns.

It will be noted that our table takes no account of guns in reserve—this for the reason that hitherto these figures have not been available. The various Powers apparently are reluctant to make them known. The reserves of artillery are necessarily very large; and because the greater part of it is thoroughly up-to-date it is not likely that it will suffer any serious depreciation for many years to come.

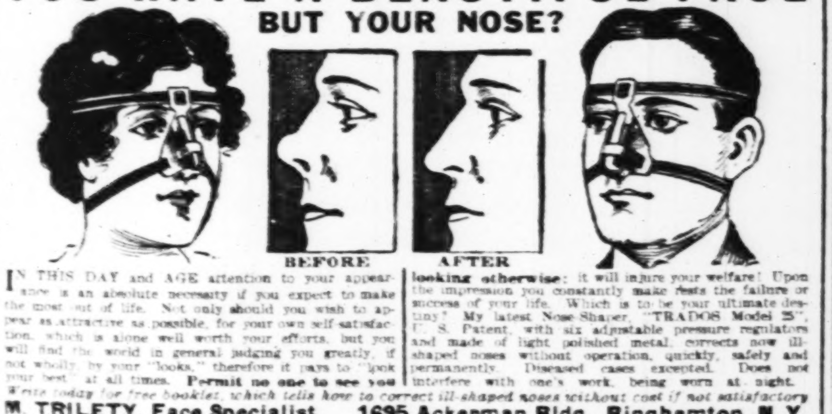
YOU HAVE A BEAUTIFUL FACE BUT YOUR NOSE?



IN THIS DAY and AGE attention to your appearance is an absolute necessity if you expect to make the most out of life. Not only should you wish to appear as attractive as possible, for your own self-satisfaction, which is alone well worth your efforts, but you will find the world in general judging you greatly, if not wholly, by your "looks," therefore it pays to "look your best" at all times. Permit no one to see you looking otherwise; it will injure your welfare! Upon the impression you constantly make rests the failure or success of your life. Which is to be your ultimate destiny? have to refuse the majority that are offered to me."

She came a little nearer to him.

"In any case," she said, with a little sigh, "you have given up that foolish, bourgeois life of yours?"

He looked down into her face, and his eyes were cold.

"Violet," he said, "this is no time for misunderstandings. I should like you to know that apart from one young lady, who possesses my whole affection"——

"All of it?" she pleaded.

"All!" he declared emphatically. "She will doubtless be faithless to me—under the circumstances, I cannot blame her—but so far as I am concerned, I have no affection whatever for anyone else."

She crept back to her place.

"I could be so useful to you," she murmured.

"You could and you shall, if you will be sensible," he answered.

"Tell me how?" she begged.

He was silent for a moment.

"Are you acting now?" he asked.

"I am understudying Molly," she answered, "and I have a very small part at the Globe."

He nodded.

"There is no reason to interfere with that," he said. "In fact, I wish you to continue your connection with the profession. It brings you into touch with the class of people among whom I am likely to find clients."

"Go on, please," she begged.

"On two conditions—or rather one," he said, "you can, if you like, become my secretary and partner—and find the money we shall require to make a start."

"Conditions?" she asked.

"You must understand, once and for all," he said, "that I will not be made love to, and that I can treat you only as a working companion. My name will be Peter Ruff and yours Miss Brown. Sometimes there will be plenty of work for you, and sometimes there will be none at all."

She sighed gently.

"Tell me, Peter," she asked, "when do you mean to start this new enterprise?"

"Not for six months—perhaps a year," he answered. "I must go to Paris—perhaps Vienna. I might even have to go to New York. There are certain associations with which I must come into touch—certain information I must become possessed of."

"Peter," she said, "I like your scheme, but there is just one thing. Such men as you should be the brains of great enterprises. Don't you understand what I mean? It shouldn't be you who does the actual thing which brings you within the power of the law. I am not overscrupulous, you know. I hate wrongdoing, but I have never been able to treat as equal criminals the poor man who steals for a living and the rich financier who robs right and left out of sheer greed. I agree with you that crime is not an absolute thing. The circumstances connected with every action in life determine its morality or immorality. But, Peter, it isn't worth while to go outside the law!"

He nodded.

"You are a sensible girl," he said. "I have always thought that. We'll talk over my cases together, if they seem to run a little too close to the line."

"Very well, Peter," she said. "I accept."

* * * * * * * *

About 12 months after the interrupted festivities at Daisy Villa, that particular neighborhood was again the scene of some rejoicing. Standing before the residence of Mr. Barnes were three carriages, drawn in each case by a pair of gray horses. The coachmen and their steeds were similarly adorned with white rosettes. It would have been an insult to the intelligence of the most youthful loungers-by to have informed them that a wedding was projected.

At the neighboring church all was ready. The clerk stood at the door, the red drugget was down, the usual little crowd were standing all agog upon the pavement. There was one unusual feature of the proceedings: Instead of a solitary policeman, there were at least a dozen who kept clear the entrance to the church. Their presence greatly puzzled a little old gentleman who had joined the throng of sightseers. He pushed himself to the front and touched one of them upon the shoulder.

"Mr. Policeman," he said, "will you tell me why there are so many of you to keep such a small crowd in order?"

"Bridegroom's a member of the force, sir, for one reason," the man answered good-humoredly.

"And the other?" the old gentleman persisted.

"Not allowed to talk about that, sir," was the somewhat gruff reply.

The little old gentleman moved away, a trifle hurt. He was a very nicely dressed old gentleman indeed, and everything about him seemed to savor of prosperity. But he was certainly garrulous. An obviously invited guest was standing upon the edge of the pavement stroking a pair of lavender kid gloves. The little old gentleman sidled up to him.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said, raising his hat. "I am just back from Australia—haven't seen a wedding in England for 50 years. Do you think that they would let me into the church?"

The invited guest looked down at his questioner and approved of him.

"Certainly, sir," he replied, cheerfully. "Come along in with me, and I'll find you a seat."

Down the scarlet drugget they went—the big best man with the red hands and the lavender kid gloves and the opulent-looking old gentleman with the gold-rimmed glasses and the handsome walking stick.

"Dear me, this is very interesting!" the latter remarked. "Is it the custom, sir, always, may I ask, in this country, to have so many policemen at a wedding?"

The big man looked downward and shook his head.

"Special reason," he said, mysteriously. "Fact is, young lady was engaged once to a very bad character—a burglar whom the police have been wanting for years. He had to leave the country, but he has written her once or twice since in a mysterious sort of way—wanted her to be true to him, and all that sort of thing. Dory—that's the bridegroom—has got a sort of an idea that he may turn up today."

"This is very exciting—very!" the little old gentleman remarked. "Reminds me of our younger days out in Australia."

"You sit down here," the best man directed ushering his companion into an empty pew. "I must get back again outside, or I shall have the bridegroom arriving."

"Good-day to you, sir, and many thanks!" the little old gentleman said politely.

Soon the bridegroom arrived — a smart young officer, well thought of at Scotland Yard, well set up, wearing a long-tail coat, a lilac and white tie and shaking in every limb. He walked up the aisle accompanied by the best man, and the little old gentleman from Australia watched him genially from behind those gold-rimmed glasses. And, then, scarcely was he at the altar rail when through the open church door one heard the sound of horses' feet, one heard the rustle, the murmur of voices, caught a glimpse of a waiting group arranging themselves finally in the porch of the church. Maud, on the arm of her father, came slowly up the aisle. The little old gentleman turned his head as though this was something upon which he feared to look.

It was in the vestry that the only untoward incident of that highly successful wedding took place. The ceremony was over. Bride, bridegroom and parents trooped in, And when the register was opened, one witness had already signed! In clear, precise writing his name stood out upon the virgin page——

SPENCER FITZGERALD

The bridegroom swore, the bride nearly collapsed. The clerk pressed into the hands of the latter an envelope.

"From the little old gentleman," he announced, "who was fussing round the church this morning."

Mrs. Dory tore it open and gave a cry of delight. A diamond cross, worth all the rest of her presents put together, flashed soft light from a background of dull velvet. Her husband had looked over her shoulder, and with a scowl seized the morocco case and threw it far from him.

It was the only disturbing incident of a highly successful function! (Copyright.)

fore ask, "Are there not other agencies than chilling which will start dormant trees and shrubs into growth even in our own latitude?" It must be said in reply that there are. And it is worth while to consider some of these causes, for not only are they of interest in themselves, but also, instead of weakening the hypothesis presented, they serve to strengthen and confirm it.

The pruning of a long-dormant plant will often start it into growth. Girdling produces a similar result. Notching the stem does the same. Rubbing the stem also starts the plant into growth.

In all these examples of the stimulation of growth by injury, it is conceived that the enzym, or soluble ferment, which is found in all plants and which transforms starch into sugar, is brought into contact with the starch as a direct result of the breaking and straining of the cells, thus causing sugar to be formed and growth to begin. Tropical plants probably have various methods of coming out of their dormancy, and there is every reason to expect that some of them will be found to accomplish this act in the same way as our long-dormant greenhouse plants, by the weakening of their cell membranes. This is in effect substantially identical with chilling.

As a single example of the practical application of the principle of chilling, it may be stated that the scientists of the Department of Agriculture in efforts to domesticate the wild blueberry plant, have succeeded, through the medium of hybrids, in bringing these plants into highly productive bearing. They have made them fruit so luxuriously and abundantly that they have brought returns to the growers at the rate of more than $1000 an acre.

In a word, they changed the blueberry from a small wild fruit the size of a pea to a fruit the size of a Concord grape, and they have made its culture a profitable industry. These things they would not have been able to do, however, unless they had first worked out the principle of chilling, an understanding of which was essential to their work of breeding and propagation.

Going still further, the scientists responsible for these improved varieties of blueberries have made them yield, in greenhouses, ripe blueberries in February and March, the largest berries reaching a diameter of over three-fourths of an inch. At various times from midsummer to autumn the plants were placed in glass frames artificially chilled. After two or three months' chilling they were taken into a greenhouse and at once began growing and flowering, while similar plants that had not been through the chilling period continued dormant in the same greenhouse. This is additional proof of the fact that a period of chilling is a general requirement of northern plants.

A Relation of Yours Turns Up in Africa

The gorilla is the largest of the brothers. One mounted specimen at Philadelphia is 5 feet 1 inch tall, and weighed 417 pounds. If its legs were long in human proportion to its body it would be something over 7 feet tall and would weigh around 500 pounds. With his massive chest and shoulders, his appalling strength and his natural ferocity, the gorilla would be the bully of the family if it were not for just one thing—which is well illustrated by a story told of Enos Mills, who runs a hotel in the Rockies.

One morning a party of tenderfeet, desiring to take a hike through the timber, went to their host and said: "But what shall we do if we happen to come across a grizzly?"

"My dear people," replied Mills ironically, "you needn't have the slightest fear. Bears are perfectly aware of the fact that man is the most dangerous and bloody creature that nature has ever evolved, and when they accidentally meet up with one, they turn and flee in very terror, thankful if they can only escape with their lives."

The present differences between the first four anthropoids and the descendant of the fifth, says Dr. Lull, are mainly the result of certain factors, namely: the assumption by man of the erect posture, the development of the brain out of all proportion to the rest of the body, the loss of the ability to oppose the great toe to the other toes for grasping, and the corresponding increase in such power in the thumbs, and, finally, the acquisition of articulate speech.

Both Dr. Lull and Prof. Newman quote W. K. Gregory in saying that the fifth brother, man's ancestor, was a big-brained anthropoid, closely resembling the chimpanzee and gorilla. It is recalled, in this connection, that a skeptical inquirer once remarked: "If man descended from a race of apes, where is that race now?" To which a scientist made the laconic reply: "We're it."

Is your appetite uncertain—your digestion impaired?

Why the food we eat may fail to keep us fit

ONE single food element essential to health! We now know that many of our inefficiencies and failures are really due to lack of a health-maintaining element in food—the water-soluble vitamine. Scientists are agreed that without this one food factor we lose appetite and weight and fall off in health.

This is why thousands of men and women who are eating otherwise good and wholesome meals find their energy and vigor slipping. And this is also why many have little appetite and remain in a state of lowered vitality.

Today Fleischmann's Yeast is recommended as a corrective food for overcoming these difficulties, for Fleischmann's Yeast has been discovered to be a rich source of the essential vitamine we need throughout life.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a wholesome, fresh food, assimilated like any other food. Eat it at any time, 2 to 3 cakes a day. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth.

Have it on the table at home and try it as a sandwich filler or spread on crackers. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. It is good in milk, and many like it just plain. If troubled with gas dissolve it first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast and get it fresh daily.

Send 4c in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." This nominal charge covers cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York, N. Y.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down condition, constipation, indigestion and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.
